NRA Plans Tomorrow

President Roosevelt's long awaited message on his plans for continuation of the NRA will reach Capitol hill tomorrow when the congressional mill will begin grinding out legislation designed to meet demands of the New Deal. Stiff opposition to the NRA is expected from the senate, where charges that it fosters monopolies will be aired. Details on page 6.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Is Herbert Hoover the father of the New Deal?

Some of our statesmen think so and are preparing to adduce the supporting evidence during the forthcoming debate in congress on the extension of the life of the NRA.

Some of the New Dealers themselves are tracing in the acts and policies of President Hoover the origin of numerous New Deal institutions, in proof of the thesis that President Roosevelt has merely implemented a movement already under way and has made effective the groping ventures of his predecessor to achieve a "more abundant life" for the "forgotten man."

Explain Bitterness.

By some the theory is held that it is the realization of the part played by Mr. Hoover in the genesis of the New Deal which accounts for the bitterness displayed by the New Dealers toward the former President, just as in communist Russia the radical bolsheviks hate the more conservative mensheviks whose moderate aim at a socialist state was overwhelmed by the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Those who line the former President with the beginnings of the New Deal, point to Mr. Hoover's creation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the home loan banks, pillars of the Roosevelt recovery program, his establishment of the farm board to dispose of surplus farm products, his effectuation of industrial agreements foreshadowing the NRA codes and his initiation of large programs of public works construction.

See Debt to Hoover.

And the suggestion has been heard of late that the New Dealers may yet come to an acknowledgment of a great debt to Mr. Hoover, for attention is directed to the fact that Mr. Hoover appointed to the Supreme court its most liberal member, Benjamin N. Cardoza. In the Supreme court decisions this year which will determine the validity of the Roosevelt program, the New Dealers regard Associate Justice Cardoza as one member of the court who will not fail them. It was Justice Cardoza who alone dissented from the decision of the court in the NRA oil case holding that congress had unconstitutionally delegated the lawmaking power to the President.

Mr. Hoover himself does not acknowledge paternity of the New Deal. He recently published a book, "The Challenge to Liberty," devoted to a comprehensive attack on the New Deal. The distinction he seems to draw between his policies and the Roosevelt policies is that between coöperation and regimentation. He stood for a degree of coöperation of business enterprises and of citizens that did not eliminate the element he termed "rugged individualism." The Roosevelt program he views as one of government regimentation of the activities of individuals which destroys individual liberty.

Hoover Is Quoted.

In his chapter on "Regimented Industry and Commerce" under the NRA, Mr. Hoover says:

"In this mobilization there has been constant use of the term 'coöperation.' However, the law itself makes important parts of the codes compulsory and by their indirect powers can impose any of them. As practical persons observing their working, we may dismiss voluntary impulses as the motivation of this organization. At best it is 'coercive coöperation.' Free will and consent, the essential elements in coöperation, have not often been present.

"The spirit of the whole process has been coercive, principally through the overshadowing authority to impose the codes and the terror of effective deprival of any man of his business and livelihood. The mere

See Prospect of Climbing to Work in N.Y.

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Gotham's vast army of office workers went to bed with a headache tonight over the prospect of having to climb endless flights of stairs to their places of business or employment in downtown skyscrapers next week.

Two hundred thousand elevator operators and other building service employes are all set to go on strike Monday night and the latest word is that the walkout will take place on schedule regardless of the feverish conferences that have been under way all day in an effort to avert it.

City Elevators Must Run.

Mayor F. H. La Guardia and the heads of the police, fire, health and law departments made arrangements this morning at city hall to avert a stoppage of elevators by strike in the city's tall buildings wherever such a stoppage could be construed as a menace to the health and safety of the population.

Although all concerned in the conference were reticent as to the means devised to keep the "lifts" running if the walkout should take place, it was learned that the city would exercise the broadest police powers granted to it in the charter, under the board of health. They are drastic enough to amount almost to martial law, so that all the city's police and fire reserves may be put to manning elevators, if the occasion warants.

Others to Be Called Out.

In addition to the elevator operators it is planned to call out building superintendents, janitors, hall men, window cleaners, women office cleaners, porters, helpers and other classifications of workers.

CUBA JAILS 525 TEACHERS FOR PLOT TO REVOLT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 16.—Nearly half the public school teachers of Havana are in jail tonight on army charges that they conspired with the ABC secret society to overthrow the government of President Carlos Mendieta, professors of Havana university, teachers of the provincial high school and 525 teachers of 60 Havana grammar schools were imprisoned.

ABC leaders denied any connection with the alleged plot.

President Mendieta late tonight ordered all public schools and the university closed indefinitly three days after students started a strike in protest against the killing of a high school student early this week in a clash with police.

U. S. SUPREME COURT MAY GIVE DECISION ON GOLD TOMORROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Possibility that the Supreme court would hand down its opinions in the 69 billion dollar gold clause cases on Monday remained this evening after the justices had concluded their regular Saturday conference without making any announcement.

On the two previous Saturdays the justices had authorized announcements to the effect that the decisions would not be forthcoming on the following Mondays. This was to avoid an unnecessary crowding of the courtroom, Chief Justice Hughes explained.

A logical inference is that the justices would still wish to avoid an unnecessary crowding of the courtroom on Monday if the opinions were not coming down. However, there can be no certainty that the court will not have a surprise in store for an anxiously expectant public. The court usually follows precedents, but not necessarily those of two weeks' standing.

If the cases are not decided Monday the next possibility will be March 4, for after finishing its business Monday the court will recess until that time. Since the justices have been busily engaged hearing arguments for the last three weeks, there is a possibility that the momentous opinions have not yet been written and that the decisions will not be announced until March 4.

SCIENTIST GETS NEW LOW; NEARS ABSOLUTE ZERO

[Copyright: 1935 By the New York Times.]

LEYDEN, Holland, Feb. 16.—A new low temperature approaching absolute zero has been reached here, according to an announcement today by Prof. W. J. Dehaas of Leyden university.

[Absolute zero is the point at which bodies on the earth are entirely devoid of heat. It exists at 459.6 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, and 273.15 degrees below zero, Centigrade.]

The temperature reached was one five-thousandth of a degree above absolute zero, which is believed to be the lowest temperature ever attained.

Prof. Dehaas explained the new low temperature was reached through the so-called magnetic method and is about 140 times lower than that obtained before. It further means, the professor said, that now the temperature domain has been opened four or five times larger than was reached some 37 years ago by the late Sir James Dewar through liquefying hydrogen.

French Flyers Forced Back on Ocean Dash

BULLETIN.

PORT PRAVA, Cape Verde Islands, Feb. 17 (Sunday).—(AP)—The airplane Joseph Lebrix, attempting to break the world's nonstop airplane flight record was forced to turn back early today between the Cape Verde Islands and St. Paul's rock.

Radio dispatches received from the airship here, said difficulty with the oil pressure line had caused them to turn back. After the discovery of the motor trouble the flyers turned about and radioed hope that they could reach Port Prava before being forced down. As soon as word of the airplane's difficulty was received a seaplane and a dispatch boat was sent out from Dakar with others to stand by if aid was necessary.

PORT ETIENNE, Rio de Oro, West Africa, Feb. 17.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—The airplane Joseph Lebrix, which two Frenchmen are flying to South America for a distance record, passed over Port Etienne at 12:13 a. m. today [6.13 p. m. Saturday Chicago time] and headed out over the open Atlantic.

The plane is piloted by two veterans of long distance flight, Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi. They are trying to beat the nonstop record of 5,653 miles they already hold.

The daring airmen took off from Istres air field at Marseilles at 6:36 a. m. (12:36 a. m. Chicago time) yesterday in their famous airplane in which they flew from New York to Syria in 1933.

Goal Is Buenos Aires.

Their goal was Buenos Aires, 6,875 miles away, and officials believed they might well complete the crossing in 65 hours if they continue at their present rate.

Ideal weather was reported over the whole of the ocean route.

Thoroughly overhauled since Codos and Rossi flew it from Paris to New York in an attempted record breaking flight to California last May, the old Joseph Lebrix carried 1,875 gallons of gasoline and 92 gallons of oil. Officials sealed the tanks against replenishment or repairs en route and clocked the flyers away.

Carry 120 Pounds of Mail.

For the first time the plane, which weighed nearly 10 tons when loaded, carried mail, about 120 pounds of it.

Powering the Joseph Lebrix was the same 500 horsepower motor that propelled it from New York to Syria in 1933 for the present record, and pulled it back across the ocean from Paris to New York last May to complete the two-way crossing.

BARONESS AND FRIEND FACE AX; SERVED POLAND

Baron and 2 Others Get Life Terms.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—Baroness Benita von Berg, divorced wife of Richard von Falkenhayn, son of the late Gen. Erich von Falkenhayn of world war fame, was sentenced today to be beheaded at dawn Monday. She was convicted on the charge of helping a dashing young Polish army officer, Capt. Baron Yurek [George] von Sosnowski, with whom she was in love, to spy for Poland.

Renate von Natzmer, described as a member of the aristocracy and Baroness von Berg's intimate friend, also was sentenced to die by the ax for espionage. Von Sosnowski was sentenced to prison for life. Two other women of the aristocracy, reported to have been employed as secretaries in the ministry of defense, were given life sentences.

"People's" Court Passes Sentences.

The sentences were pronounced by the dreaded "People's" court, whose judges are mostly Nazi officers.

The sole hope of the condemned women and the Polish spy is Adolf Hitler. He alone can save the two girl spies from the executioner's block and lighten the sentences of the other three convicted members of the alleged spy ring.

Josef Lipski, Poland's ambassador to Berlin, got in touch with Hitler immediately after the sentences were pronounced. He pleaded for clemency, pointing out that in the new found friendship between Poland and Germany dramas of espionage were things of the past.

Poland has offered to exchange German spies now imprisoned in Warsaw for Von Sosnowski and Baroness von Berg, the blonde beauty and favorite of Berlin society. The Poles admit Von Sosnowski spied for them "out of love for his country."

Seek to Aid Accomplices.

Consequently they are seeking to help his accomplices, especially the baroness, because the Polish aristocrat warned his family he would share the fate of the woman who loved him.

Lawyers for the girl secretaries who were sentenced to life imprisonment sought to prove that they were underpaid and unable to make both ends meet. Intimations that the condemned Frau von Natzmer also was in the employ of the defense ministry were made by her lawyer. He argued that she was in financial distress most of the time and declared she was an easy prey to succumb to temptation.

Extracted Military Information.

This was taken to mean that Von Sosnowski extracted military information from the women.

The propaganda ministry early today informed foreign correspondents that the verdict in the sensational espionage case would be published in the course of the day. Tonight it declared the matter still is pending. It is assumed that the ministry will not issue a formal statement until Hitler has given his personal decision regarding the sentences.

Baroness von Berg's husband, Josef von Berg, whom she married when Von Sosnowski started romances with other women, agreed to an annulment of the marriage several weeks ago. He hoped this would pave the way for a marriage in prison between the Polish officer and Baroness von Berg. Von Sosnowski's family prepared all the necessary papers for the marriage. They acted on the assumption that if the society beauty became a Polish citizen her life would be spared. The marriage was not performed.

Try to Save Baroness.

Baroness von Berg's first husband, Von Falkenhayn, as well as Von Berg, both tried to save her in their testimony, the families declare. Von Berg is a prominent aviation official of the Siemens works. He is well acquainted with Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, reichminister of aviation and premier of Prussia.

Friends have been guarding Von Berg night and day. They fear he might commit suicide.

Von Sosnowski and Baroness von Berg were arrested last March.

The execution of the baroness and Frau von Natzmer, unless Hitler intervenes, will be with a battle ax. It will be wielded by an executioner in full dress and white gloves. The women, with the backs of their necks shaved, will be led to the block and the verdict read to them. Then the state's attorney will say:

"Executioner, do your duty." The ax will descend.

Bruno Enters Death Cell as Convicts Jeer

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The county of Hunterdon washed its hands of Bruno Richard Hauptmann with evident relief today when Sherif John H. Curtiss delivered the convicted Lindbergh kidnap slayer to the warden of the state penitentiary here.

Inmates sang and banged tin cups against their cell walls as Hauptmann, a frightened look on his face, walked into the prison en route to the death cell tier.

Three convicts started to boo when they saw him being examined in a small room off the central corridor. Immediately 600 in the mess hall joined with jeers and catcalls. The three who started the disturbance were taken to their cells for discipline.

"I am innocent," Hauptmann said as he entered the prison.

Letter Threatens Death.

Meanwhile Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said he had received a letter threatening death for him, Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, and the Hauptmann jury unless the death sentence is commuted.

The letter, postmarked in Washington, D. C., at 8 p. m. yesterday, apparently was written by an irrational person. At the top was drawn a skull and crossbones.

Department of justice officials, instructed to confer with Gov. Hoffman about the letter, said they apparently would have no jurisdiction because there seemed to be no extortion element in the communication.

Closely Guarded on Trip.

Hauptmann was driven slowly over slippery roads from Flemington to Trenton, with three official cars and nearly a score of others carrying newspaper men forming his entourage.

It was his first time in the open air since his extradition from the Bronx. Unless his appeal is successful, it also was his last.

He rode manacled to Warden Harry O. McCrea of the Flemington jail and Lieut. Allen Smith, chief of the state troopers, who have guarded him since he was brought into New Jersey. Sherif Curtiss rode with them.

Other cars held troopers armed with riot guns and deputies with pistols.

Airplane Follows Convoy.

The procession took an hour for the 26 mile trip. At times Hauptmann seemed to be talking to his guards. An airplane carrying photographers droned overhead.

The road passed a sign, "Hopewell. Three Miles." but Hauptmann showed no sign that this direction to the former estate of Col Charles Lindbergh disturbed him.

Flemington—jaded after the long trial—took Hauptmann's departure in its stride. Not more than a couple of hundred persons gathered to see the prisoner leave.

But Trenton was less blasé. The street outside the penitentiary was jammed and police had to clear a path for the Flemington cars.

Given Number 17,400.

Hauptmann was taken before Clerk Irving Blean in the penitentiary, and assigned number 17,400. Then he went directly to the death house, where he was placed in cell No. 9, the one nearest the entrance to the room that houses the electric chair.

Five men now in the death house will pass his cell on their way to the chair.

Hauptmann was stripped of his

'DEATH THREAT' TOLD BY CLUB MURDER WIDOW

Clashes with Suitor at Pistol Quiz.

Brought face to face as investigators sought yesterday to trace the pistol of unusual caliber which was used in the mysterious murder at the Saddle and Cycle club early in the morning of Feb. 3, Mrs. Helen Straub, widow of the murder victim, and her elderly gray haired, married suitor, hurled bitter denunciations at each other.

The suitor is Peter Brickie, 51 years old, of the De Luxe apartment hotel, 1809 Lawrence avenue. After repeated denials made, she said, to shield him Mrs. Straub finally admitted to the authorities that last fall she sold Brickie a .380 automatic pistol, the same caliber gun from which seven bullets were fired into the body of her husband, Louis King Straub, night bartender of the club.

Accused Suitor Calls Her "Liar."

Trembling with anger, Brickie, who is an unemployed electrician, turned on the woman with whom he admitted improprieties, and called her "liar." He added that he had heard her father had such a gun, but that he had never seen it.

To this, the widow who had already involved herself in confessions of bizarre friendship, replied: "That man once threatened to kill Louis so that he and I could be together."

With these revelations in mind Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty and the corps of investigators assisting him, plowed on, hopeful that a solution of the slaying might lie here—in the bitter estrangement of Brickie and Mrs. Straub.

Brickie was held over night in an outlying hotel, and two other women witnesses who had been questioned throughout the day also were held. One of these, Mrs. Ellen [Billie] Edlin, 3750 Pine Grove avenue, close friend of the widow, had figured prominently in the investigation before.

Another Conflict Over Gun.

The other woman, Mrs. Zoe Platt, 4801 Drexel boulevard, sister of Mrs. Straub, gave testimony which conflicted widely with that of Brickie when she was questioned concerning her knowledge of the missing pistol.

Brickie's wife, Louise, who works as a maid in a Beverly Hills home, and to whom he has been married for fifteen years, also was questioned, but after supplying an apparent ironclad alibi for her husband on the night of the murder, was released. Patsy Heard, colored maid in the Straub home, was also questioned for a time, and then allowed to return home.

Mrs. Straub was released on a promise made by Mr. Dougherty during the hearing on a writ of habeas corpus in her behalf that she would be released early in the evening if formal charges had not been placed against her.

Gun Held Key to Mystery.

Returning to the puzzle of the pistol, Prosecutor Dougherty asserted last night that from the mystery of the murder gun and conflicting statements regarding it evolved the most important clew unearthed to date. Few weapons of the .380 caliber are now manufactured. It differs from similar weapons in calibration, the .380 having a muzzle diameter slightly larger than a .32 pistol, and slightly smaller than the ordinary .38.

It was only after persistent denials that she had knowledge of any gun other than a .25 caliber found in her apartment at 901 Argyle street that Mrs. Straub finally admitted obtaining the .380 automatic pistol from her father, Charles Springer, last fall. This gun, she said, she sold to Brickie for $20.

The electrician emphatically denied making such a purchase. His denials became more insistent after Mrs. Straub told of the threat Brickie once made to kill Straub.

The information which led to the disclosure of the gun came from anonymous sources, according to Dougherty. It was learned, however, that Brickie was one of the "anonymous" informants. He told his neighbor, Police Lieutenant Axel Jensen, that Mrs. Straub's father owned such a gun.

Acting on this, Sergt. John Steffen of the Summerdale station brought in Springer from his home at 1243 Wilson avenue and his wife, Mrs. Straub's stepmother. For some time Springer persisted in a denial that he knew of such a gun.

Eventually he told of purchasing it in 1914, but the story he told of transferring it to his daughter differed widely from hers. Springer said she came to him on Oct. 31, informed him she had a purchaser, and took the pistol, giving him $10.

Dougherty declared that Springer visited his daughter as soon as she was released from police custody after her husband was slain and, having the gun in mind, asked her: "Why did you do it?" [referring to the killing]. When she replied she did not kill her husband the father told Dougherty that he called her attention to the caliber of the death weapon.

Mrs. Straub was then quoted as saying to her father: "I sold the gun to a married man, but I don't want him dragged into this."

The widow was then taken into custody for questioning on her father's disclosures. Mrs. Edlin and Mrs. Platt, who were in Mrs. Straub's flat, were also taken to the state's attorney's office.

Refutes Widow's Story.

When the widow's admitted suitor was taken into custody he at once denied emphatically her statement that she had sold him the gun for $20 on her father's suggestion that she dispose of it to realize some money for him. Beyond knowing that Springer did have such a gun, Brickie said, he had not heard of the weapon until last Tuesday when he had a conversation about it with Mrs. Platt.

Last Sunday, according to the widow, Brickie came to her and warned her not to do any talking, that "everything would be all right." The next day, she said, her maid found an anonymous note slipped under her apartment door. The note contained the same warning to keep quiet, and "to say nothing," for fear dictaphones had been concealed in the apartment, she said. It was in the handwriting of Brickie, according to the widow. The maid confirmed the finding of the note, Dougherty said, but Brickie denied he had written it, although admitting he had warned Mrs. Straub not to talk of their relations.

Quotes Death Threat.

"There was one time when we were alone in my apartment some months ago," asserted Mrs. Straub, "that Brickie told me:

"'I wish I were in a room of the Copeland hotel and that I could look out of a window and see him [my husband] walking to work. I would take a shot at him. He's not good enough for you. You and I ought to be together.'" The hotel is at 5009 Sheridan road, two blocks from the Saddle and Cycle club and Straub passed it every day on his way to work.

Brickie's reply to this was to tell of a telephone call he received last Tuesday from Mrs. Platt, who invited him to come over to her apartment. Mrs. Platt and Brickie had a short conversation about a gun.

According to Brickie Mrs. Platt said: "Melba is very worried about a .380 gun she got from our father." And Brickie's reply was he knew nothing of any such gun. Melba is a name Mrs. Straub used before her marriage.

According to Mrs. Platt, she asked Brickie: "Did Melba ever talk to you about a .380 gun she got from our father?" and Brickie answered: "No, no, no. She never told me anything of the kind."

Admissions Follow Denial.

When first taken in for questioning, Mrs. Platt denied there had been any such conversation. It was not until late yesterday afternoon that she admitted there had been one. Under examination of the lie detector at the Northwestern university crime detection laboratory, according to the prosecutor, Mrs. Platt became agitated when asked if she suspected any member of her family in the murder.

Brickie was to have been subjected to the same test, but his high blood pressure made the value of such a test useless. Mrs. Straub refused to undergo the test.

Brickie's alibi for the night of the murder—that he was with his wife in his hotel—was substantiated by his wife. It was the one night a week they were able to be together, Mrs. Brickie told Dougherty, and they were in her husband's room from 8 p. m. Saturday until 8 a. m. Sunday. The murder was committed about 2 a. m.

EVANSTON COP SLEUTHS A BIT AND GETS WOMAN

Mrs. Kathryn McMillen, 40 years old, of 1216 Central street, Evanston, was arrested and charged with having been the woman whose speeding car struck and injured three men cyclists at Hinman avenue and Church street, Evanston, on Tuesday.

In the accident the automobile headlight and horn were knocked off. Policeman Robert Labbe of Evanston believed that the owner of the car would soon have the missing accessories replaced. He canvassed all stores in Evanston without result, then turned to Chicago. After visiting several places he found one at which Mrs. McMillen had bought a headlight and horn the day after the accident. She admitted she "might have been" the driver of the car.

CHARGE RADICAL SCHOOL TEACHES FREE LOVE, TOO

Arkansas Hears Tales About Students.

Mena, Ark., Feb. 16.—[U. P.]—Free love goes with free thought at Commonwealth college, an employé of the labor school testified before a joint legislative investigating committee today.

T. J. Thomas, who worked four years at the college farm near here, told a story of free living, of bathing parties by mixed groups of students and instructors in Mill creek that traverses the campus. Men and women live together openly, he said, and in his four years he never has seen men fight over the women.

Succumb to Moon Spell.

On moonlight nights during the summer, Thomas testified, he has seen nude couples lying on rocks along the banks of Mill creek. Married women who attended the college associated with the men students and instructors, he said.

More testimony of relations among college students and instructors was given by L. E. Sheppard, justice of the peace, who lives across the road from the college entrance.

He described roadside "petting" parties and of couples caught in allegedly compromising positions. His presence caused no change in the positions or brought no comment from the couples, he testified.

Keep Wives at Home.

Conditions are such at the school, Sheppard told the committee, that he has forbidden women of his family to step onto the college farm.

Thomas likewise testified he never allowed his wife to come on the farm.

Commonwealth was established on the farm ten miles west of here in the foothills of the Ozark mountains in 1923. Students have come from over the United States and foreign countries.

Intended Victim Leaving Bank Disarms His Robber

Arthur Blaurock, 36 years old, 1221 Addison street, owner of a butcher shop at 1135 Belmont avenue, was arrested yesterday after Philip Natenberg, 515 Briar place, told police he had disarmed Blaurock when he attempted to rob him on the street near the Main State bank where Natenberg had withdrawn $200. Natenberg is president of the Doreen Cordial company, 168 North May street. Police said Blaurock admitted the robbery because he needed money and could not resist the temptation when he saw Natenberg leave the bank.

Hold Youth to Jury on Burglary Charges

Jack Urban, 18 years old, 4809 Sheridan road, was held to the grand jury yesterday for burglary in bonds of $6,000. Joseph Price, 40 years old, 5556 Broadway, whom he named as a recipient of stolen goods, was held in bonds of $3,000 as an accessory. Three jewelry store owners, whom Urban said had bought his stolen loot, had charges of buying from a minor and operating second hand stores, continued until Tuesday.

Girl Who Shot Ex-Suitor Released on $5,000 Bonds

Miss Rose Spennato, 18 years old, 518 West 56th street, who shot and seriously wounded her former suitor, David Silver, 24 years old, 2956 North California avenue, on Thursday, was formally charged yesterday with attempting to commit murder and was released in bonds of $5,000. She will be arraigned in the Felony court tomorrow. The shooting took place at Clark street and Austin avenue.

CHARGES BEATING BY U. S. AGENTS; PLANS PROTEST

Ex-Tavern Owner Lists Injuries.

Matthew Gleason, former Aurora tavern owner, who charged that United States department of justice agents blackened both his eyes and beat him severely while he was in their custody for a week without a warant, in violation of federal statutes, will make a protest to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, it was announced yesterday by his attorney, Emil Schlan.

"I am sure the government will not countenance any such treatment of its prisoners," Attorney Schlan said. "Although the agents are subject to being tried for common assault the same as any other citizen, I don't believe Mr. Gleason will want to get out any such warants for the men.

Holds Physician's Report.

"Justice should better be served by reporting the assaults to their superior."

Gleason was examined by Dr. Walter Venn of Chicago, and Attorney Schlan said a copy of the report will accompany his complaint to Washington. This report, according to the attorney, showed that Gleason's eyes were bruised and blackened, that he had numerous bruises and abrasions about the body, his hands were contused, that there was evidence of Gleason having received blows about the abdomen and that his mental and nervous reflexes had been dulled as a result.

Gleason, who was released Friday evening on a $3,000 bond, had been charged with having harbored Volney Davis, alleged participant in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer of St. Paul.

Escape of Prisoner.

Davis escaped two department of justice agents at Yorkville on Feb. 6 when one of them took him into a bar and bought him a glass of beer which the prisoner threw in his face and then leaped through a window.

After his release Gleason explained he formerly had known Davis under another name and that on Feb. 7 Davis visited him at his home, 102 North 4th street, Aurora, and borrowed $5. He said he did not know Davis was an escaped federal prisoner.

Gleason said he could identify the department of justice agents who beat him.

RAYMOND HAMILTON ROBS TEXAS ARMORY OF AMMUNITION, GUNS

Beaumont, Tex., Feb. 16.—(AP)—New gunning forays on small town banks were feared through the southwest tonight as a result of an ammunition robbery at a National Guard armory here today by the range country's new No. 1 bad man—22 year old Raymond Hamilton.

The one time associate of Clyde Barrow—since slain with his cigar smoking girl friend, Bonnie Parker—seized eight sub-machine guns and 3,600 rounds of ammunition, aided by a confederate.

Fingerprints positively identified Hamilton and police immediately expressed belief he would renew his raids on small town banks.

G. T. Owens, elderly armory caretaker, said two men, who "threatened to kill me if I cried out," blindfolded him when he discovered them "in the ammunition pile." Shown a picture of Hamilton the caretaker said one of the pair was the outlaw.

MOTORIST RUNS DOWN 3, KILLING ONE; IS CAPTURED

Seized by Police Squad as He Tries to Flee.

One man was killed and two others were seriously injured late last night when they were struck by an automobile driven at high speed, at Dearborn and Erie streets. The driver, John Allen, 45 years old, 1512 North La Salle street, a manufacturer of auto accessories, attempted, police said, to escape after the accident but was pursued by a detective squad headed by Sergt. George Shannon and captured at State street and Chicago avenue.

The man killed was Ray D. Duran, 35 years old, 11 West Erie street. The injured are Charles B. Klafter, 39 years old, 458 North Halsted street, who said he was a brother of David Saul Klafter, well known architect, and Hollis Mather, 40 years old, 11 West Erie street.

Police Near Scene of Mishap.

Klafter, who was taken to the county hospital, incurred fractures of the pelvis and of the left leg. Mather's left leg was broken.

Allen was taken by the police squad to the detective bureau, where he was examined by Dr. Isador Sarnoff, police surgeon. Dr. Sarnoff said that Allen had been drinking. This was confirmed also by the members of the police squad.

Riding with Allen in the car was Miss Betty M. Spencer, 32 years old, 2844 Abbott court, who told the police she is a waitress.

Mrs. Bea Adams, 31 years old, 1806 Farwell avenue, was killed, and her husband, H. R. Adams, 35, salesman, was seriously injured yesterday morning when the automobile driven by Adams struck a street lamp in the middle of La Salle street at Carl street. At the Henrotin hospital it was said Adams was injured internally and that his spine may be fractured.

The deaths of Duran and Mrs. Adams and three others brought the 1935 Cook county automobile toll to 112. Within the Chicago city limits this year 91 had been killed in trafic accidents and 1,803 injured up to 4 p. m. yesterday.

Hit-Run Victim Dies.

The other fatalities yesterday:

Mrs. Elizabeth Vacula, 48 years old, 1928 Loefler court. Died at St. Luke's hospital after she had been struck by the automobile of a hit-and-run driver while she was crossing the street in front of 10 West 18th street.

John Lydon, 45 years old, 4835 Polk street. Killed when he was struck by an automobile as he was crossing in front of 711 South Cicero avenue. William Keller, 23 years old, 4446 Nevada avenue, a clerk, driver of the car that struck Lydon, was exonerated at the inquest.

Martin Florek, 55 years old, 4755 South Lincoln street, a laborer. Died in the Southtown hospital of injuries he received Tuesday when he slipped while walking across Ashland avenue at 44th street and fell against the side of a moving truck.

Three persons were injured, one so seriously that she is expected to die, early today when they were struck by an automobile driven by Charles V. Hildebrecht, 37 years old, 1244 Farwell avenue, a patent attorney, as they were alighting from another car parked the wrong way in front of 5720 Winthrop avenue. Miss Grace Smith, 38 years old, 5734 Winthrop avenue, suffered a skull fracture and her left leg was so badly crushed it was amputated at the Edgewater hospital where all the injured were taken. The others hurt were E. J. Barron, 48, 1517 Olive avenue, insurance agent, and Elmer Echman, 4700 North Campbell avenue. They had just alighted from a car driven by William Schmidt, 1019 Davis street, Evanston, on the side away from the curb when the Hildebrecht car struck them. With Hildebrecht was William Cavanaugh of Detroit, a radio announcer. Neither was hurt.

William Lyons, 55 years old, a night watchman, was seriously injured when his small coupe skidded on the snowy pavement yesterday morning and crashed head-on into a street car in front of 4713 Cottage Grove avenue.

ROB TWO MOTOR CONCERNS; STEAL CARS TO ESCAPE

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.
Automobiles stolen, 28; recovered, 14; stripped, 4 [from police records for the 24 hours ending at midnight Friday].

Robbers held up two automobile sales companies yesterday, in each instance obtaining several hundred dollars and stealing a new car in which to escape. Four young men exacted $800 from Ernest Fox, night manager of the Litsinger Motor company, 925 Jackson boulevard. For six miles, Policemen Thomas Nolan and George Davis of the Maxwell street station pursued and fired upon the automobile which the youths appropriated. The four escaped, but later police found the car with a bloodstained newspaper in the rear seat. Three masked robbers took $375 from Carl Hejna, proprietor of the Hejna Auto Sales company, 5926 South Kedzie avenue. They departed in a new machine which Hejna was about to turn over to a purchaser. It was recovered.

PREPARE FOR WAR IN AFRICA! ITALY TOLD BY IL DUCE

First Fascist Troops Sail for Ethiopian "Front."

ROME, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini broke his silence on the controversy with Ethiopia tonight by urging all mobilized Italians to "be ready for any eventuality."

In an address to the Fascist grand council, Il Duce for the first time made a definit reference to a "front." He congratulated the "virility of the men leaving for the African front."

His statement, to which deep significance was attached, was made several hours after the first detachments of Italian troops had sailed for Africa.

Council Backs Duce's Action.

Mussolini's council in a four hour session approved his measures "for the security of peace" in Italy's East African possessions and those considered necessary "for control over Italian interests."

Thunderous cheers greeted the Dictator's statement that 70,000 Blackshirts have volunteered for service in East Africa since Feb. 1 and also thousands of other citizens and war veterans.

The grand council's communique said certain types of workers must hold themselves in readiness for military discipline and for organization at a moment's notice.

Reports in unofficial Italian circles that Ethiopian troops had advanced along a wide front could not be confirmed tonight. These sources understood Emperor Haile Selassie's troops had moved forward near Ualual and Afdub.

First Troops Sail.

A battalion of Black Shirts embarked at Naples this afternoon after being reveiwed by Crown Prince Umberto. Mussolini reviewed two other battalions preparatory to their departure for Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

In the face of the embarkation of the Italian troops, Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian chargé d'affaires, through whom Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has stoutly disclaimed responsibility for Italo-Ethiopian hostilities along the border, declared:

"We will defend our homes with our lives. If Italy comes against us, her blood will be on her own head."

While hundreds of troops moved into Rome from northern points, wearing new uniforms and ordinary trench caps but dangling pith helmets for tropical wear at their backs, Mussolini, in company with Fascist and army officials, gave his several thousand militiamen an inspection before their departure.

Troops Cheer Duce.

Newspaper men and photographers were barred from the review, which took place in the grenadiers' barracks here, but the official statement said Il Duce addressed the troops briefly. He was cheered as he departed, it said.

Hundreds of reservists, meanwhile, were receiving mobilization cards instructing them to hold themselves in readiness for mobilization orders, but an official explained that this is an automatic procedure following the first mobilization.

Scenes reminiscent of world war days took place at the Rome railway terminal as the militiamen boarded waiting trains for the trip south. Some had sprays of Italian wild flowers stuck in their helmets. One commander boarded the train with a single big red rose in his gloved hand.

The mood of the Black Shirts was cheerful, although they were perspiring under their heavy wartime packs. There was a great deal of strutting with the big, khaki colored helmets set at rakish devil-may-care angles for the benefit of the hundreds of relatives and sweethearts who crowded the approaches to the station.

Ethiopia Denies Advance.

ADDIS ABABA, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Ethiopian government today renewed its assertion that there has been no advance of Ethiopian forces anywhere along the disputed frontier between this nation and Italy's colonies since the border clash at Ualual in December.

An official version of the issues concerned in the Italian-Ethiopian controversy contained this statement:

"Ethiopian troops have not occupied any place called Silar, which is unknown here, nor Afdub or any other place since the Ualual incident."

[Official quarters at Rome charged that Ethiopian troops occupied Silar, which they described as near Afdub, on Jan. 29, the same day that Italian and Ethiopian forces clashed in the latest of the series of border conflicts.]

In connection with the reports of an Ethiopian advance, the government spokesman said that Shillato, about 60 miles southwest of Ualual, was considered here to be Ethiopian territory and has been continuously occupied by an Ethiopian garrison since 1931.

LONDON TO FENCE IN SIDEWALKS TO END JAYWALKING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 16. — Londoners, whose jay walking privileges have already been curbed, learned today that they are going to be forced to stay on the sidewalk. Guard rails are to be erected at busy intersections so pedestrians cannot spill over into the streets, tie up trafic and endanger their own lives.

The rails will be three feet high and erected along the curbs in Piccadilly Circus, which Londoners call the center of the world, Trafalgar square, and other crowded intersections. The scheme has been used successfully in Copenhagen and elsewhere.

Minister of Transport Leslie Hore-Belisha is working also on a scheme to make London "Silentville on the Thames" by forbidding motorists to blow horns at any hour of the day or night. It is already forbidden to toot horns after 11 p. m.

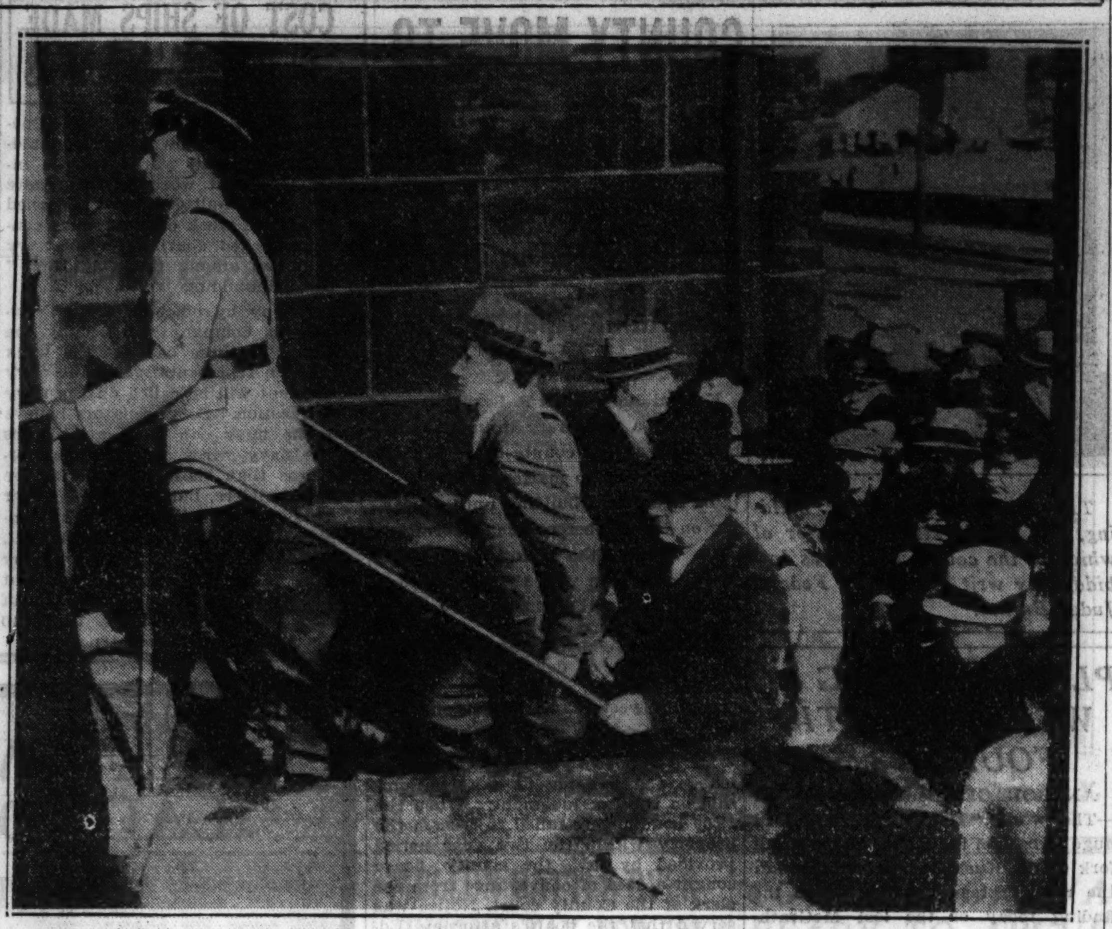
HAUPTMANN TAKEN TO DEATH HOUSE



Bruno Richard Hauptmann (center), manacled to a deputy sherif and a state trooper, as he walked up steps of New Jersey state prison at Trenton yesterday. He was placed in the death house to await electrocution as convicted slayer of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

natty gray suit, his light blue shirt and tie, and was given the rough cotton gray uniform of the prison. A barber shaved his head.

Col. George L. Selby, principal keeper of the prison, saw to it that Hauptmann's reception, once he was inside, was just like that of any other convicted man.

Shortly after he was settled in his death house cell, Hauptmann requested a Bible. The Rev. John Goorley, Methodist chaplain, brought a new copy to him.

The condemned man seemed buoyed up by confidence that he would escape the death penalty. He smiled with real pleasure when a youth in the crowd outside the prison called to him, "Keep your head up, Bruno! We know you're innocent."

Signs Name to Picture.

Just before Hauptmann was taken from his cell, Hovey Low, special guard who has been his daily companion, shook hands and wished him luck. At Low's request Hauptmann autographed a photograph showing the guard leading the prisoner into the courtroom.

Hauptmann will be accorded more privileges in the death house than he enjoyed at the small Flemington jail. In Trenton he may speak to the guards and receive answers. He also may write letters.

As Flemington settled down to its usual calm today, the prospects of the Hauptmann jurors going on a nationwide vaudeville tour was the chief topic of conversation.

Mrs. May Brelsford of Flemington, president of the Hauptmann trial jurors' association, refused to confirm reports that the eight men and four women who rendered the death verdict would meet at her home in Flemington tomorrow to sign a vaudeville contract.

Jurors Ready to Sign.

But Charles A. Walton, foreman of the jury, revealed they were about ready to sign up.

"Our stage appearance will be very dignified," Walton asserted. "We are not going to discuss the trial or put on any sketch about our deliberations."

Terms of the contract are reported to call for $500 a week for Walton and $300 a week for other members of the jury.

Defense Attorney Egbert Rosecrans set Tuesday as a tentative date for his appearance before Justice Trenchard to ask that the state bear the cost of appeal. Hauptmann yesterday signed a petition asserting he is a pauper.

C. Lloyd Fisher of the Hauptmann defense counsel continued plans for collecting donations to finance the appeal. About $70 has been contributed, he said.

A difficulty appeared, however, when both the Flemington National bank and the Hunterdon County National bank announced they would not serve as custodian of the defense fund.

Dutch Troops Leave Saar; First Foreign Unit to Go

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A group of Dutch soldiers, the first contingent of foreign troops to evacuate the Saar since the plebiscite, left the basin this morning.

Hauptmann wore a smile as he seated himself in auto at Flemington, N. J., for what may have been his last ride. He was handcuffed to Warden Harry O. McCrea of Hunterdon county jail (right) and a state trooper.

HOBO JUNGLE'S DWELLERS FLEE ANNUAL FLOODS

Casuals who dwell in the houses of packing crates and sheet iron in the thriving hobo jungle known as "Hollywood," between Maywood and Forest Park, are fleeing from the annual floods.

Every year, about this time, the Des Plaines river overflows its banks and inundates the "town." Yesterday thirty-five men were driven from their shelters, but relief was afforded for most.

Chief of Police Richard Bailey of the Maywood police took in as many as the jail would hold, and the others were given temporary shelter in box cars on the sidings of a can manufacturing concern.

In a week, it is expected, the river will subside sufficiently for the "boys" to move back. The town of "Hollywood" is sanctioned by the police, and Chief Bailey declared that none of the inhabitants ever gave trouble. On the contrary, he says, they are helpful in shoveling snow, mowing yards, washing windows and doing other odd jobs.

Condon Sails for Panama on 17 Day Vacation Cruise

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon, who testified against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, sailed today on a 17 day cruise to Panama. Accompanying him was his daughter, Mrs. Myra Hacker, who also testified briefly at the trial. Dr. Condon was in gay mood and tossed confetti and serpentine to the group on the pier, which included Al Reich, former heavyweight fighter and Jafsie's companion and bodyguard.

'NEWSBOY' ADMITS HE'S EX-MAYOR OF SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—(AP)—After hours of endless questioning, a gray bearded "newsboy" known here as John Mason admitted to police tonight, they said, that in reality he is John S. Schnepp, 70, former mayor of Springfield, Ill., where he is wanted for embezzlement.

"Yes, I am John S. Schnepp, former mayor of Springfield, Ill.," Acting Captain of Detectives John Erickson quoted him as saying.

Meanwhile word came from State's Attorney Greening that Schnepp, who was taken in custody last Thursday where he sold newspapers, was wanted in Springfield on a warant charging him with embezzlement of $32,300 from an estate of which he was conservator. He also is accused of having mishandled two other estates and the funds of a German society.

Schnepp vanished from his home city in January, 1932. He had served three terms as mayor. He was a lawyer and real estate dealer and considered wealthy.

All of these things had been pointed out to him by many former Springfieldians paraded in front of him by police. He had conversed with them and showed interest in what they told him of his past.

"It is all interesting to me, because I have been trying for three years to find out who I am," he told them. "I want to go back to Springfield and find out what it is all about."

Old acquaintances told him he has a wife, two daughters and two sons back there.

"I would be pleased to meet them," he said.

BETTY GOW SAILS FOR HOMELAND; SEEKS OBSCURITY

Nurse Will Return to Care for Jon Lindbergh.

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Betty Gow, nursemaid of the slain Lindbergh child, who returned from Scotland to help New Jersey convict Bruno Richard Hauptmann, sailed today on the Cunard liner Berengaria for her native land and, she hopes, obscurity.

The slim little nursemaid, dressed in a black dinner gown, wearing orchids, and looking very formal, unbent long enough when she got aboard the ship to punctuate her desire for privacy by slapping a woman who attempted to lay hands on her.

Will Return Soon.

"Leave me alone," Miss Gow said with the same heat that flared up at Hauptmann's trial when Defense Attorney Edward J. Reilly baited her. Those were the only words she had to say publicly on quitting these shores.

When she returns in a few weeks to care for Jon Lindbergh, infant brother of the slain child, she hopes she may slip quietly into the estate of Mrs. Dwight Morrow, the child's grandmother at Englewood, N. J., and never again see her name in print.

Miss Gow illustrated her dislike for prominence last evening when she plunged knee deep in a snow drift on the lawn of a modest Englewood home, where some of her countrymen gave her a farewell party, on catching sight of reporters who were waiting for her. She cut across the snow and jumped into a car that took her to the ship.

Will Visit Mother.

Her hostess, Mrs. Donald Grant, said Miss Gow would visit her mother in Scotland a few weeks and then return to rejoin the staf of the Lindbergh home.

On the ship some one pointed toward the nursemaid and pronounced her name. Instantly all eyes turned toward her.

"Let me have a look at you," a middle aged woman said, taking Miss Gow by the shoulder. The nursemaid turned upon the woman, slapped her sharply, and walked off to barricade herself in her stateroom.

FRANCE EXPELS PRINCE SEIZED BY MORALITY SQUAD

NICE, France, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Prince Louis Ferdinand of Bourbon-Orleans, once infante of Spain and a cousin of former King Alfonso, was given three days in which to leave France under a suspended deportation order, police announced today.

Police said he was among those caught in a raid by a morality squad.

Prince Louis is the son of the Infanta Eulalia, Alfonso's aunt. A sensation was caused in aristocratic circles by his marriage in London in 1930 to the aged Princess Marie Charlotte Constance de Broglie, of a French house who inherited a sugar fortune.

WIN TREASURE

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Two boys, members of poor families, were awarded a $28,000 gold hoard today, but with all their wealth they could use none of it to buy even the trimmings for tomorrow's dinner.

Judge Eugene O'Dunne decreed that "finders are keepers" in ruling the treasure—3,558 gold coins—belonged to Henry Grob and Theodore Jones, who unearthed it in the cellar of the Jones home.

Actual possession of the gold must await a formal order, "subject to appeal." If disappointed claimants to the rich find should appeal the small fortune may remain in escrow for some time.

The boys, 16 year old sons of families on relief rolls, discovered an old copper pot full of gold last August.

The coins, dated from 1834 to 1858, have a face value of $11,427.50, but the federal government calculated their potential numismatic value at $28,872, not counting some 421 $1 pieces on which the dates were unreadable. The government indicated it would not interfere if legally established owners of the coins desired to sell them to collectors for more than the value of the gold.

Awed at Judge O'Dunne's decision, all the boys could say at first "we're lucky." Then they told how they would spend the wealth. Each plans to buy a home for his mother.

In awarding the boys the gold Judge O'Dunne turned down claims of the owners of the property.

Two Must Die for Plague Germ Murder of Rich Indian

ALIPORE, India, Feb. 16.—(AP)—India's "germ murder" case—the strangest in the country's legal history—ended today as two of the four defendants were sentenced to death.

The two convicted included the step-brother of the dead man and one of three doctors charged with conspiring to murder him through the injection of plague germs. The other two doctors were acquitted.

The murder, termed by the presiding judge "one of the most cold blooded" he had ever come across, occurred last year. Amarendra-nath Pandey, wealthy land owner, was walking along a street on his way home. Suddenly he felt the sharp stab of the injection. He cried out that he had been poisoned, as his assailant fled.

Step-Brother Cares for Him.

The man's step-brother, Benayendra-nath Pandey, took him under his care. Septic pneumonia developed, and he died.

Dr. Taranath Bhattachra, who was accused of securing the plague bacilli from a hospital in Bombay, was the other man sentenced to death.

Of the two acquitted, Dr. Sivapada Bhattachra faced, in addition to the charge of conspiring to commit murder, charges that he suppressed evidence in failing to inform police of the crime.

A false certificate he issued made possible cremation of the body, the prosecutor charged, thus disposing of the main evidence in the case.

300 Exhibits Introduced.

The four defendants were arrested last May. In the course of the trial, 85 witnesses, many of whom came from great distances, were examined, while more than 300 exhibits were introduced.

After hearing the prosecutor term the case "unparalleled in the annals of crime in India in its enormity and well planned scientific design," the jury needed but four hours to bring in its verdict.

The slain man, evidence introduced indicated, owned property to which the step-brother was heir and other property of which he was the administrator.

The prosecutor asserted the step-brother was virtually starving the victim of his rightful share in the estate, as a result of which the latter appointed an attorney to look out for his interests. This so vexed the step-brother, the prosecution charged, that he determined to do away with the land owner.

With the aid of physician friends, it was alleged, an unsuccessful attempt first was made to inject tetanus bacilli. Later plague bacilli were injected, and death resulted.

TEST SHOWS U. S. ABLE TO CONTROL THE CARIBBEAN

COLON, Panama, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A squadron of 23 United States naval planes dropped down at Coco Solo today, completing a 4,000 mile cruise of the Caribbean.

A 24th plane will arrive aboard the U. S. S. Wright Monday. It was disabled in Samana Bay while refueling.

Capt John H. Hoover, chief of staf, said Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson was pleased by the results of the cruise. It demonstrated, he said, the Navy's ability to control the entire Caribbean and to aid Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

LABATT KIDNAP SUSPECT HELD FOR EXTRADITION

Removal Awaits Approval of Washington.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Covington, Ky., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—"Piccolo Pete" Murray, Covington gangster and ex-convict, was held to jail in this city without bail today on the ruling of United States Commissioner Edward W. Pflueger that the evidence submitted by the crown prosecutors of Canada was sufficient to warant his extradition to that country for his participation in the kidnaping of John S. Labatt, London, Ont., brewer, on Aug. 14 last.

Covington was thus forced to release to Canadian justice another of the gang of gamblers, holdup men, and killers that have found refuge in this Ohio river community under the lenient rule of a liberal political ring and an apathetic community.

Police Decline to Aid.

Murray, however, will not have the benefit of police alibi witnesses from Covington, as did David Meisner, another of the gang who was convicted Feb. 6 in London and sentenced to 15 years in Kingston penitentiary. The Covington police have had enough of that. Murray's alibi will come from family friends, neighbors, a lawyer or two, a pawnbroker, and the pants that he took to be pressed on the day of the kidnaping. The Canadian prosecutors already have set to work to break down that alibi.

Murray was distressed and somewhat frightened at the prospect that loomed before him. He had heard the crown prosecutor read the Canadian law on kidnaping, which gives a maximum of 25 years in prison and may include lashing.

Good U. S. Alibi.

The gangster and his lawyer had prepared a regular American police court defense case and it sounded good. His alibi, it was admitted by the United States representatives present, probably would get him an acquittal here. The trouble was that the commissioner had no jurisdiction to try the case and admittedly stretched things far in Murray's favor when he let in the defense evidence at all.

Murray's lawyer, James R. McGarry, blustered, and Eve, the defendant's blonde and faded wife, wept copiously throughout the proceedings. It was the story of an extremely innocent man being railroaded to prison. But the commissioner said at the conclusion:

"In my opinion there is probable cause for believing that the offense of kidnaping Labatt at the time and place testified, also the robbery with a weapon, exists, and that probable cause has been shown that the accused participated in the commission of the offense. The evidence is sufficient to sustain the charge under the provisions of the treaty.

Commissioner Reserves Opinion.

"I reserve opinion as to the alibi testimony. I have grave doubts as to its competency. Even with this consideration I will issue an order to commit the accused to jail to await the order of the secretary of state."

The approval of the extradition in Washington is the next formality and the Canadian authorities expect to put Murray on trial during March. Mrs. Murray wept in earnest when the decision was announced. She cried aloud and beat the table with her fists.

The evidence presented against Murray was limited to identification of his photograph as one of the three kidnapers. Labatt and three others made positive identification. The prosecutors will have more of this in the trial. Their finding of Murray was accidental.

Kidnap Suspect

KINGDON PETER MURRAY.
[Acme Photo.]

Known as Holdup Man.

They did not know he was in the kidnaping, although he was known as a friend of Meisner and it is common talk in police and gambler circles here that Murray was one who had participated in several holdups of gambling joints. The gamblers, however, could not testify against him, as they were not supposed to be operating such places of business.

In the course of the investigation by the Canadian detectives in the Newport-Covington area they ran across the name of Murray several times.

They finally wrote for a picture of him, which was furnished by the United State department of justice. This was taken with twenty other pictures and placed before the witnesses. Each one picked out Murray at once, it is stated.

Ruling Satisfies Crown.

Clifford McGone, solicitor general for Ontario, expressed satisfaction at the ruling of the commissioner. He had refused to take any part in the examination of defense witnesses on the ground that this was not permissible under the treaty.

N. F. Newton, crown prosecutor, was not in court. Before his departure for Canada last night he said:

"The United States is now rid of one of its most dangerous criminals, through the conviction of Meisner in this case. He was a cold, fearless muscle man and killer, more dangerous in some ways than John Dillinger. The gang has been responsible for several extortions in the United States and Canada, but they picked out people who kept still about it. There was one man in Toledo taken for $18,000. It was not until they picked a real business man, who came to the police and refused ransom, that they were caught."

Warns About Perjury.

As to the element of perjury which was raised against the testimony of Detective Le Roy Hall of Covington in the Meisner case, the prosecutor said:

"Perjury cannot be committed with impunity in the Canadian courts. The reason we did not arrest Hall on his flight from Canada, where he was followed to the border and permitted to go home, was that we did not want to frighten the witnesses in the next trial. We are absolutely fair in the trial. The question of perjury is in control of the judge."

The Murray alibi that he was in Newport on the day of the kidnaping because he took a pair of pants to be pressed on that day was followed today by testimony of Isadore E. Wolpa, Cincinnati pawnbroker, to the effect that Murray at 2:20 p. m. on Aug. 13 last sold him a diamond ring under the name of John Meyers.

He identified Murray in court. A neighbor testified that Murray was home every day in the summer of 1934. Joe Mason, who turned out to be a brother-in-law of Murray's, testified that he called at the Murray home on the evening of Aug. 14 and Murray was there.

He remembered it because Murray brought in the pair of pants from the cleaners, and talked about the cut of the trousers. The court brought out the information that Mason is a brother of Willie Mason, who now is in prison for the killing of an Indiana police officer.

A stepson of Murray's also testified that his father was at home on the day in question. John Doyle, a lawyer who is supposed to have been in communciation with Murray on Aug. 14, was called but did not respond.

Editorial Causes Pause.

Whether all these witnesses will go to Canada to help Murray is a question. The Kentucky Post yesterday printed an editorial from the Toronto Star which may cause some hesitation. This read in part:

"Detectives Seiter and Hall of Covington, Ky., have told the world what they think of a Canadian Criminal court. The procedure here always surprises strangers from across the border. The two fly by night detectives who motored across the border before completing their evidence in Meisner's defense complained that they were afraid they would be railroaded into a Canadian prison, accused of perjury.

"They need not have feared this if they did no perjury, but if they did they certainly had this to fear. They would not have been railroaded; they would have been most carefully tried. Perjury is in Canada a crime and is not here regarded as a sporting thing to do for an acquaintance who has got into a jam.

"Court No Stage or Circus."

"It is interesting to get the point of view of the United States detectives on the Labatt case at London.

"We can see the Hauptmann case for ourselves. The Criminal court with us is not a stage, circus, nor any kind of place of entertainment. The lawyers for the prosecution and for the defense do not in turn, or jointly, own the place for a moment. The judge is in command and he can interpose his rule at any instant.

"The Covington detectives were sound and good men trying to do their duty, but they were far from home, the court was being run in a way they had never seen before and their old college chum, who had posed as a reporter in Covington, was dressed up in the resplendent uniform of the R. C. M. P.

"It was below zero. There was deep snow. The good old United States, where the acquittal of accused persons is almost universal and where convicted persons can always have a new trial or two if they have the price, looked good to them."

SETH PARKER IS REPORTED IN TOW OF U. S. NAVAL TUG

HONOLULU, T. H., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The American radio schooner Seth Parker was believed here today to be in tow of the United States naval tug Ontario, bound for Pago Pago, Samoa, after being disabled last week by a storm in the south seas. A report received here Wednesday said the Ontario had reached the schooner and was prepared to take her in tow.

Phillips Lord, radio performer and master of the schooner, stayed aboard with four crew members after the Australian cruiser, Australia, took off nine of the crew last Monday.

The Seth Parker had sent out distress calls after being buffeted by a storm when about 800 miles east of Samoa.

DEAN HARNO RAPS JUVENILE COURT SENTIMENTALISM

Tells Judges Security of Public Is First.

Sentimentality has no more place in the administration of a juvenile court than it has in any criminal court, Dean Albert J. Harno of the University of Illinois college of law told members of the Illinois County and Probate Judges association yesterday in the closing session of their annual meeting at the Palmer House.

Dean Harno spoke on "Social Undercurrents" and cited the Illinois juvenile court act as one of many measures intended to diminish the lag between the law and social needs.

"The juvenile court, first established in Illinois in 1899, has won the commendation of students of juvenile problems the world around," said Dean Harno. And yet considerable popular criticism is today heaped upon these courts and their work.

Cites Newspaper Comment.

"It is probably true, as pointed out recently in a metropolitan newspaper, that the ideals which support the juvenile court as an institution are considerably ahead of our knowledge of criminal character and of our means for dealing with it with proper regard to public safety. Nevertheless, it is wise legislation that seeks to discriminate between the conduct of adults and immature offenders, and there should be no thought of receding from the theory back of it.

"The principal criticism which has arisen in connection with the work of the court is that 'this special tribunal is always subjected to the influence of organized humanitarianism which takes little account of the need of the community for protection from violence.'

No Place for Sentiment.

"The purpose back of the juvenile court legislation was not a sentimental one. The prime objective here, as it should be in criminal legislation, was public security. I speak for a philosophy I believe to be fundamental in the administration of the criminal law, which is devoid of sentiment for the individual when he is proved a social menace.

"Nothing in our whole law is quite so absurd and inept as our theory of punishment which assumes that sentencing the offender to a period of confinement is protection to society against his subsequent depredations. When a man is a social derelict and the state has proved its case against him, that should end the matter so far as he is concerned.

Public Security First.

"The emphasis I place on security is not inconsistent with the theory of the juvenile court. It is to the public interest to salvage the young offender whenever possible, and the juvenile court is the best device yet established to accomplish that end. If he cannot be salvaged, that is, if he continues to be a social menace, his youth should offer him no immunity. Between the individual and the public, the public interests must be given first consideration."

County Judge Ray Sesler of Pontiac was elected president of the association for the coming year. Other officers chosen were Probate Judge Harry C. Daniels, Elgin, first vice president; Probate Judge Benjamin S. DeBoice, Springfield, second vice president; and County Judge Everett Lewis, Benton, secretary-treasurer.

PLANE MISSING WEEK IN ARCTIC FOUND; 3 SAFE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The world "Help," spelled out in huge letters on the snows of the south fork of the Kuskokwim river through the use of green boughs, led to the finding today of the lost McGrath-Anchorage cabin plane, missing a week, with its three occupants safe.

Pilot Estol Call, aided by Cecil Higgins, mechanic, sighted the plane after flying through heavy snow squalls, and landed immediately. Donald Goodman, pilot of the missing plane; Paul Keating, and R. E. [Bob] Laurie, spent most of the week in an empty cabin, they said.

Later Call flew here with Goodman and Keating, who had badly bruised and scratched faces. Higgins and Laurie will be flown out tomorrow.

AN O'BRIEN, 77, FIGHTS 3 BANDITS BUT LOSES $3,000

Owen O'Brien, 77 years old, operates a tavern on the first floor of 3810 Ogden avenue, and lives on the third floor of the building, which he owns. He was in his apartment last night with a friend, James Kelly, and his housekeeper, Miss Dora Tunsberg, when three robbers entered. Despite their drawn guns O'Brien leaped at the nearest robber and in a moment he was battling all three of them. They finally overpowered him, ransacked the house, and escaped with $3,000 which they found hidden in a closet.

U. S. WRIT HALTS COUNTY MOVE TO COLLECT TAX BILL

Forbids Board to Acquire Aquitania Apartments.

Federal Judge John P. Barnes issued yesterday a temporary injunction forbidding the Cook county board to take any action in the matter of the Aquitania apartment building until a hearing on Feb. 25 before Judge Barnes.

On Friday, the county board refused to bargain with the bondholders' committee for the fifteen story structure at 832 Argyle street. Moreover, the board declined to accept $200,000 in settlement of delinquent tax bills totaling $246,000. The board's attitude prompted yesterday's injunction.

History of the Property.

More than two years ago the county bid in the building at a foreclosure sale on the tax judgment. When the 1,500 bondholders failed to redeem the property within the two year period provided by law, the county board sought a deed of conveyance from the clerk of the County court. Notice was served that the board's attorney, Edward Fleming Jr., would go before Superior Court Judge Harry A. Lewis tomorrow and ask for title, but yesterday's order by Judge Barnes prohibits any action.

Judge Barnes issued the writ on petition for reorganization filed on Sept. 25 under section 77-B of the federal bankruptcy act. Melvin L. Straus was appointed trustee in bankruptcy on Feb. 1.

First Case of Sort Here.

It is said to be the first time the federal government has entered such an order here prohibiting the collection of taxes by the local governments. It was obtained without notice being served upon the county board or its attorneys, but signed as a matter of routine pending the final hearing on Feb. 25.

From 1926 until the federal bankruptcy action last September, the Aquitania apartments were in the hands of the bondholders' committee, now headed by George W. Rossetter.

The taxes are unpaid for the four years from 1924 to 1927, but none have accrued since then. In 1931 the late Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel appointed a receiver for the building to collect the income for the payment of the delinquent taxes, but this order was reversed by the Appellate court and the reversal was later sustained by the Supreme court.

COMMITTEE TO PROBE COST OF SHIPS MADE IN U. S. NAVY YARDS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The navy's own costs of building ships in navy yards will be inquired into next week by the senate munitions committee, it was learned today after a week of revelations concerning alleged sharing out of navy construction among the "big three" of the shipbuilding world.

Testimony by officials of the Newport News company will occupy the first two or three days of the week and then a representative of the navy department will be called on the navy yard question. Some senators believe that the navy can build good ships in the navy yards at costs considerably less than those charged by the private builders, but that as a matter of policy of encouraging private enterprise the navy submerges this fact.

Secretary Ickes' deferred testimony will be taken Friday, under present plans, and will treat allocations of some $300,000,000 of PWA funds to the navy for naval construction.

SEERESS TELLS PATIENT WHAT THEY TELL HER

They Talk, She Rewords It—for $5!

BY BARBARA ADAMS.

Mrs. Ellean Culkin, of 939 Sunnyside avenue, expert in the astrology-numerology-psychology hokum, charges $5 for an "analysis" and is booked up for days ahead, a reporter for THE TRIBUNE learned recently.

She was one of a number of seers, clairvoyants, astrologists, mediums, fortune tellers, quack psycho-analysts and psychologists and others pretending to have supernatural knowledge who have been investigated.

"I have been a student of psychology all my life," Mrs. Culkin explained in reply to a question as to how she learned her business. "I tell persons the truth when they come to me. They must like it, because I am really too busy. I have more to do than I want."

She Quizzes Customers.

One secret of Mrs. Culkin's "powers" is her knack of getting information from her customers. Much of what she told the reporter was what the reporter told her, and inasmuch as it was fantasy, Mrs. Culkin's revelations were not always helpful.

Her graying hair perfectly waved and coiffured, her lipstick and other makeup carefully applied, Mrs. Culkin, a handsome woman of middle age, followed her housekeeper into her living room and greeted the reporter. It was a large, pleasant room, furnished in good taste, the furniture and rugs expensive but not showy. A grand piano stood against one wall.

Seated in the bedroom, also attractively furnished, Mrs. Culkin faced the reporter across a table on which lay a book by Evangeline Adams, the late popular astrologist. Mrs. Culkin instructed her to write her name, birth date and birthplace.

Another Initial, Quick!

"O, my dear," she said in alarm. "You should have another letter in your name. Haven't you a middle initial you could use? You have? Good. Put a C. in. Always sign your name like that. It will give you a different set of vibrations, and put you in harmony. You have a birth path No. 11, and a destiny No. 6. With the C in your name your vibrations will be in tune. It will help magnetize things toward you."

She wrote busily, adding mysterious sets of figures. From then on she wrote as she talked, and presented pages of manuscript to the reporter at the end of the interview.

"Your rulers are Mercury and the moon," she said. "That makes you very sensitive. You'll have to try to get over that. You can. I am very sensitive, but you can overcome that birth influence.

Good Old Cusp of Cancer.

"You are now in a five yearly vibration which will end on your next birthday in June. This will be a period of changes. You're coming into the cusp of Cancer, which is a good aspect.

"Your finances and health will improve. That indigestion you are subject to is due to the planets. Your chart shows a change of cities in view.

"And," she said hopefully, "here is an opportunity for marriage."

"But I am married," the reporter said.

"Well, then, it shows an opportunity for your marriage partner," said Mrs. Culkin, apparently a trifle piqued that she had missed her guess. "He's going to make lots of money."

Scents Out Marital Tragedy.

"Your marriage is not satisfactory, is it?" she inquired. The reporter agreed and struck an attitude suggesting hidden tragedies. She then supplied a birthday for the alleged husband, at Mrs. Culkin's request.

"Men born under his rulers, the sun and the moon, with his birth path No. 9, and the emotional temperament he gets from the cusp of Leo," she said, "never should marry women like yourself, but often do."

"I'll tell you," she said, glancing sharply at the reporter. "Those other women don't mean anything to him. There isn't any one woman, it's a crowd I see him in, drinking and playing poker. Don't worry about it. It isn't love. Why should it matter so much to you?

"Your husband will never divorce you. You'll never be separated. But this marriage won't last. O, you needn't worry. You'll be married a second time."

"You mean——" the reporter gasped, "my husband will——"

Thar's Gold, Sister.

"Yes, he'll die," said Mrs. Culkin calmly. "He's high tension type. It's his heart. He'll go. It's his destiny. But meanwhile you play up to him, you flatter him, and you'll hold him. Because he's going to make money before he dies, and you might benefit from it."

This highly practical advice was augmented by admonitions to learn to be "a good mixer," to "get a sense of humor working" and to greet him happily, not sadly, when he comes home.

"Kid him along, that's what you have to do with the men," Mrs. Culkin said knowingly. "Learn to say, 'Hi there, Big Boy, how's the smart kid?' When I'm with my husband in a group I pat his arm and say to them, 'How do you like my boy?' The men like it.

"Learn to Act."

"The trouble with you," she said, nodding slowly, "is that you cannot act. You must learn to be an actress. You're too solemn."

She wrote among other things that the mythical husband's chart showed "that he has been drinking some but will never drink to excess."

"Don't you think I should warn him about his bad heart?" the reporter put in here. "He shouldn't be drinking at all."

"There's no use warning him; it's his fate," Mrs. Culkin said complacently. "People born under his planet always suffer with gas pains, too."

Returning to the reporter's "chart," Mrs. Culkin wrote: "The moon causes you to have a tendency to be moody and sensitive, romantic and idealistic. You can overcome this. Have some confidence in yourself. You must start to think you are all right, building up your ego."

Show Off for Hubby.

"He wants people to like you. You must begin showing off. He is naturally affectionate and likes to feel you care for him. You won't get anywhere with indifference. It is not his nature to be unhappy."

She ended with a note of hope. The reporter would reach a No. 6 vibration in June and "things will be easier to manage." Meanwhile she should "build up her personality," get some new clothes, put on more makeup, and "learn not to discuss troubles—when you do make it more 'problematical,'" she wrote.

"Primp up," she admonished. "You'll hold him, all right, if you do. Now he wants children, and you do, too. After your birthday, any time after this next June, would be an advantageous time. Then you will have a good strong Venus. I see a baby in the near future. Yes, I see the baby being born in April. Such a good month, particularly late in the month.

Venus on the Job.

"Now the sun, Venus, and Mercury all moved into the seventh house, that's the marriage house, on Jan. 20. That means you can improve your home conditions at once. Marriage conditions will be more pleasant, and I see your husband breaking with the friends he sees at a wealthy woman's house the end of this month. You must remember, dear, to court him. Never question him, but praise him, flatter him and keep up a courtship."

Mrs. Culkin asked for her $5 fee, told the reporter to let her know how things were and with a final admonition to "be sure to primp up," showed her to the door.

MELLON BATTLE OVER INCOME TAX FOR '31 SET FOR TOMORROW

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Opposing attorneys in the Mellon income tax suit clashed tonight in the first of what is expected to be more than three weeks' of legal wrangling over the 1931 income of Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury.

Mellon goes before the tax appeals board here Monday charged with owing $3,000,000 income tax for that year and claiming in turn a $139,000 rebate.

Robert H. Jackson, chief counsel for the bureau of internal revenue, announced he had been notified by "Mellon's attorneys" they will seek to quash three of his subpoenas.

Frank J. Hogan, Washington attorney, in charge of the Mellon side, denied he will ask to quash any subpoenas or has any intention of keeping out "anything concerning Mr. Mellon's transactions."

COUNSEL FOR TVA READY TO ARGUE POWER PROGRAM

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Whipping together a picture of the government's wartime projects at Muscle Shoals as still forming a keystone in national defense, attorneys for the Tennessee Valley Authority indicated tonight that Monday the highly controverted power program would be presented in United States District court here.

The power program, on which the whole case is based, has not figured thus far in TVA's presentation of its defense, except as it related to other aims of the authority.

In nearly six days of testimony counsel for TVA has sought to show that the authority's program in the Tennessee valley is aimed at three major objectives, navigation, flood control, and national defense, with production of fertilizer and electricity only incidental.

A group of preferred shareholders is asking that the TVA be restrained in its electrification program because of alleged unconstitutionality.

YOGI ROY'S QUACK TRIAL BECOMES A BATTLE OF WOMEN

Mayoralty Candidate and Investigator Testify.

Women testified in Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland's court yesterday in the case of Yogi Roy, Hindu herb specialist and graduate of schools of journalism and automobile mechanics, who is on trial on a charge of practicing medicine without a license.

Mrs. Grace Gray, a candidate for the Republican nomination for mayor of Chicago, appeared as a character witness for Roy after Mrs. Charlotte Hermes, investigator for the state department of registration and education, had told of two visits to the Hindu's shabby apartment at 2110 North Clark street where he diagnosed her ailments and prescribed herb medicines.

Deny Motion to Quash.

Taking of testimony was begun after Judge Holland overruled Attorney Leonard B. Grossman's motion to quash, based upon his contention that Yogi Roy was a "humble missionary" of his Brahman faith, teaching his religious doctrine that herbs are symbolic of the Hindu deity.

Attorney Grossman's plea and the supporting affidavit of Yogi Roy overlooked statements made by the Hindu at the time of his arrest that he is a Christian and has been for a number of years.

Questioned by Assistant State's Attorneys William Kearney and John C. Connery, Mrs. Hermes told of visiting Yogi Roy on Jan. 16 and receiving two bottles of medicine, one of diabetes and the other for a cold. The Yogi, who proudly carries a city license for a paint and chemical factory, diagnosed her ailments and prepared the herb potions.

"I returned ten days later and told him that the medicine made me sick," the investigator said. "I said that I thought maybe I was pregnant and he said that he knew something satisfactory. He guaranteed that some capsules he sold me for $7.50, although the regular price was $50, would bring about an abortion."

What Was in the Capsules.

Further examination of Mrs. Hermes was continued to Thursday when the capsules and medicines, analyzed by the city health department, will be introduced. Four of the capsules were fatal to a guinea pig and three produced violent convulsions, the laboratory experts will testify.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Gray, whose circulated calendar of "political engagements," included—for Feb. 16, the notation "Judge Holland's court—Yogi Roy" was permitted to testify. Attorney Grossman is chairman of one of the candidate's campaign committee.

"I first met Yogi Roy in the summer of 1933 when the Prince of Nepal, Rajah Singh was a visitor at A Century of Progress," Mrs. Gray said. "Yogi Roy was one of the prince's attendants. He seemed to be regarded highly by other Hindus."

Mrs. Gray then related how she discussed herbs with the Yogi and finally obtained some herb tea which Yogi Roy said would assist her husband, John Wesley Gray, a diabetic.

Publicity? Indeed No!

"I never analyzed the tea," Mrs. Gray said on cross-examination, "but I tasted some. It tasted like licorice and sassafras. I am a Hoosier and I always use sassafras tea in the spring—I have some at home now."

"Now, Mrs. Gray, isn't it true that you came here only for the purpose of getting publicity?" Assistant State's Attorney Kearney asked.

"Oh, no, I could get more publicity at the luncheon of the Young Republicans which I am missing right now," Mrs. Gray replied angrily. The elephants—presents of another visiting Hindu potentate—which dangled from her ears, shook as she spoke. The herbs, for which Mrs. Gray paid $5 a bottle, had a beneficial effect upon her husband, she said.

In his arguments in support of his motion to dismiss the charges on the grounds that they constitute religious persecution, Attorney Grossman quoted liberally from the constitution, bill of rights, Shakespeare, Byron, the Standard dictionary, and tomes of Hindu philosophy.

Eloquent Defense Plea.

"It is this man's religious duty to minister to the anguished, hungering soul of man with herbs, the symbol of the Hindu deity, blended with the alchemy of love, of truth, compassion, and tolerance," Attorney Grossman pleaded.

The business cards of "Yogi Roy—Medicinal Herb Specialist," were described by Attorney Grossman as "a profession, in the absence of this defendant from the Brahman shrines, wholesome curative belief in his vegetarian creed."

The correct name of the Yogi, the petition claimed, is Yogi Dassaunda Singh Roy, the initialed signature "D. S. Roy" being sometimes regarded as unsympathetic strangers as "Dr. Roy."

MACON CRASHED LIKE PAPER SACK, WITNESS STATES

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The crash of the mighty Macon was compared to "a paper sack exploding" today before the naval court investigating the loss of America's last big dirigible.

The comparison was drawn by Henry Miller, assistant lighthouse keeper at Point Sur, the rocky promontory near where the Macon fell into the ocean last Tuesday.

"It all happened at one time," Miller said—so quickly that he could not see whether the airship's fabric started to tear at the rear, center, or forward part of the upper fin. Other witnesses had agreed the "casualty" that sent the airship down was first discernible as a failure at the fin.

Thomas Henderson, keeper of the lighthouse, testified he watched the breakup through powerful glasses. He said "the material seemed to go to pieces and then drifted back."

SEIZE CHICAGOAN IN WEST; $27,500 SHORTAGE HERE

Lloyd N. Braithwaite, former secretary and auditor of the Seneca Oil company, was arrested yesterday at Los Angeles at the request of the state's attorney's office here. Assistant Prosecutor Robert E. Wright said that Braithwaite, who left the company in February, 1934, was accused of being short $27,500 in his funds.

The prisoner announced that he would waive extradition. He averred that the company spent large sums for entertainment and "political purposes," and that disbursements for these purposes, made at the command of a higher official, did not show on the books. He added that before leaving Chicago he went over the books with O. E. Hulse, president, and that the latter found everything in order.

Assistant State's Attorney Wright said that an indictment charging embezzlement would be sought from the grand jury at once.

SEE CABINET JOB PERILED IN ICKES AND FARLEY FEUD

Senators Light Fuse and Await Result.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Quarrels among the New Dealers, it transpired today, precipitated the current deluge of official prying that is revealing and is intended further to reveal who is making the big money in the New Deal.

Apparent to all observers is the increasing nervousness of the new burocracy which is sitting on the powder keg, not knowing where the next explosion will be touched off.

Ickes-Farley Row Prominent.

The long standing friction between Postmaster General James A. Farley and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and the falling out of the White House and Senator Huey Long [Dem., La.] have been thrust into the limelight by the action of the senate in adopting the Long resolution calling on Mr. Ickes for all the information he possesses regarding the interest in PWA contracts of the companies in which Mr. Farley is interested.

According to a widely held view among the politicians a cabinet seat is at stake in this row and there is much speculation on the possibility that the outcome will cost either Mr. Farley or Mr. Ickes his job. A good deal of surprise was occasioned by the willingness of the overwhelmingly Democratic senate to investigate Mr. Farley's building supply interests in view of the fact that barely a week ago the overwhelmingly Democratic house squelched a resolution to investigate Mr. Farley's gifts of auto postage stamps worth 2 million dollars to stamp collectors.

Farley Popularity Declines.

It appears, however, that while Mr. Ickes had earned the enmity of many senators because of the cavalier treatment they received from him in the dishing out of PWA easy money, Mr. Farley had suffered a loss of popularity for numerous reasons. In calling on Mr. Ickes to reveal the investigation of Mr. Farley by the Ickes GPU, which in the event of Mr. Farley's vindication might recoil upon the head of Mr. Ickes, many senators viewed the situation with the satisfaction of the wife who exclaimed: "Go it husband, go it bear."

Mr. Ickes and Louis Glavis, chief PWA investigator, known as head of the Ickes GPU were busy today gathering together the documents called for by the senate. It was stated on behalf of Mr. Ickes that no investigation of Mr. Farley had been made at any time by his bureau of investigation and that the senate request would not be honored were it directed to an investigation of his fellow cabinet member. There had been, however, it was stated, an investigation of the General Builders Supply corporation and the James Stewart company, named in the senate resolution, in the course of routine investigation of all concerns having to do with PWA contracts. The information regarding these concerns, therefore, would be furnished to the senate.

Long Charges Favoritism.

Senator Long charged that the Stewart company was favored in the parceling out of PWA contracts because it obtained its materials from the General Builders Supply corporation, of which the postmaster general was formerly president and of which Mr. Farley's brother-in-law is now the head. Mr. Farley has said he retains no interest in the company.

It has been common knowledge for months that there was no love lost between Mr. Ickes and Mr. Farley, and only a few weeks ago the administration faction with which Mr. Farley is identified was gunning for Mr. Ickes with a vengeance. The trouble began early in the administration when Mr. Farley placed Emil Hurja, his chief political lieutenant, in the interior department mainly for the purpose of getting "deserving Democrats" appointed to good jobs in that department and in the Public Works administration of which Mr. Ickes is the head.

Mr. Ickes ignored Mr. Hurja from the start. He had his own notions of filling jobs in his organizations and they did not run in the direction of accommodating Mr. Farley. Mr. Ickes wanted his own trusted lieutenants on guard—personal friends and political associates in Chicago and Republican liberals who had been active in his Roosevelt Republican league of 1932. He finally succeeded in edging Mr. Hurja out. Mr. Farley then deputized Mr. Hurja to run the Democratic national committee under the supervision of the postmaster general in his other incarnation: Democratic national chairman.

Taft Row Revealed.

With the ascendency of Mr. Ickes many survivors of the war on Secretary of the Interior Ballinger in the Taft administration came into their own. Harry Slattery, Gifford Pinchot's Washington representative, who was active in convicting Ballinger of the rape of our natural resources, became personal secretary to Mr. Ickes. Louis Glavis, who was fired by President Taft for exposing Ballinger, became director of investigations of both the PWA and the interior department. He organized a large force of sleuths, which so universally and painstakingly applied the fine toothed comb of inquisition to the affairs of public officials and private individuals, that it has come to be as much feared as the Russian soviet's PGPU.

It became known recently that a White House hint had been conveyed to Mr. Ickes to fire Mr. Glavis and also Ebert K. Burlew, administrative assistant and budget officer of the interior department, a holdover from the Republican régime of many years' service in the department. Mr. Burlew's offense was that of making it entirely too difficult for deserving Democrats to connect with the pay roll. Mr. Glavis was accused of tapping the telephone wires of members of the cabinet, notably Postmaster General Farley, 'twas said. Mr. Ickes and Mr. Glavis fervently denied the truth of the accusation.

Source Is Mystery.

The source of the White House hint was enveloped in much mystery, though gossip had it that it was Louis Howe, the President's chief secretary and confidential man, who himself had been under fire in connection with windfalls from the New Deal. For a time he had paid $900 a broadcast for putting on the air his views of the New Deal, which included a commercializing of his sources of confidential information, according to a publicly voiced complaint in congress. Mr. Howe was also implicated in the letting of contracts for CCC toilet sets to a friend of the President's former law partner at greater cost than that at which the war department could procure them.

Mr. Howe is extremely powerful as was demonstrated by his dictation of a reversal of decision by the radio commission in the New Orleans case and ordinarily a hint from him would be sufficient. But Mr. Ickes stood his ground and refused to fire Glavis and Burlew. He was even suspected of hitting back at Howe. At any rate there appeared in a few days an interview with one of the managers of the subsistence homesteads, a PWA undertaking, stating that the Arthurdale project, promoted by Mrs. Roosevelt, had caused the government a loss of $500,000. This loss was due to the unsuitable knockdown houses for which Mr. Howe had given the contract.

Graft Quiz Follows.

This was followed by the launching by Mr. Ickes of a grand jury investigation of alleged graft in PWA contracts in Texas, which threatens to involve a good many official and unofficial reputations and which incidentally is expected to demonstrate the value as an investigation of Mr. Glavis whom the White House would have had Mr. Ickes fire.

Both Mr. Farley and Mr. Ickes have emphatically denied that there is any feud between them. In proof of which there is cited Mr. Farley's presentation of autographed unperforated and ungummed postage stamps to Mr. Ickes as well as to the President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Mr. Howe, and numerous other friends of the postmaster general. Mr. Ickes, like the President, is an enthusiastic philatelist. The Norfolk, Va., friend sold his Farley gift stamps for $20,000 to the great indignation of unfavored philatelists who also asserted that the stamps given Mr. Ickes would be worth $100,000 either to him if he should dispose of them or to his estate. Under fire, however, Mr. Farley ordered stamps of the same issues sold to philatelists, thus robbing his gifts of their special value, except the autographing.

Huey Long Again.

The senate investigation of Mr. Farley's business interests probably would not have been precipitated at this time had it not been for the falling out of Huey Long and the White House. Time was when the Kingfish was in high favor with the New Dealers. He was a shouter for Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago and the Roosevelt forces seated his Louisiana delegation in the convention to give them the votes that were deemed vitally necessary up to the time the deal was made with Hearst and McAdoo.

Now the picture is entirely different. Long started running for the Democratic nomination for President in 1936 and the treasury department started investigating his income taxes while the White House threatened to withhold PWA money from Louisiana unless the state modified its legislation in voting the potentiality of debt repudiation. Long started gunning for the administration and picked Farley, he said, as the most vulnerable point of attack.

Arms Quiz Hurts.

In the meantime the senate munitions committee has torn the veil of secrecy from the contracts for building cruisers from the 238 million dollar PWA allotment. The testimony has shown that the New York Shipbuilding company, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding company divided up contracts for six cruisers, boosting the price 3 million dollars a ship. Members of the committee charged that there had been collusion between the navy department and the shipbuilders, and the committee is now running down the operation of influences leading into the White House itself. The committee has evidence indicating that the New York Shipbuilding company was sold to interests close to the administration with sufficient influence to get bonanza contracts.

President Appoints Committee.

A few weeks ago the President appointed a committee headed by Bernard Baruch and Gen. Hugh Johnson to submit a plan to take the profit out of war. This move was denounced at the time by Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.], chairman, as a move to steal the thunder of the munitions committee and render purposeless the continuation of the body which was then asking the senate for $100,000 to pursue the investigation further.

All kinds of interests are garnering the big money of the New Deal. It was disclosed a few weeks ago that Senator Key Pittman [Dem., Nev.], leading silver lobbyist, and Mr. Baruch have purchased a promising silver mine, the operation of which is extremely profitable under the legislation boosting the price of silver. Each has a $50,000 interest in the mine, and a third $50,000 interest belongs to the partners' company of New York. Thirty-nine companies which mine 85 per cent of the gold and 97 per cent of the silver in the country are profiting greatly from the increased price of gold and silver brought about by the Roosevelt monetary policies.

Sugar Corner Embarrassing.

The identity of the interests which cleaned up several hundred thousand dollars in the sugar corner which was operated under the AAA sugar quotas is the subject of another senate investigation. The senate called on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to furnish the information, but he has not complied up to date.

Ralph W. Morrison, big contributor to the Roosevelt campaign fund and member of the American delegation to the London economic conference, has been disclosed as the chief prospective beneficiary of the four million dollar PWA allotment to develop water power and irrigation water on one of the Texas projects.

More than a score of Democratic politicians of high rank are cleaning up millions of dollars in fees for getting contracts and other favors for clients from the administration. The biggest haul is being made by Arthur Mullen of Nebraska, who was one of those forced off the Democratic national committee by the Roosevelt dictum that it is unethical for members thereof to sell their reputed influence with the administration.

Reluctantly Resigns.

Mr. Mullen, who reluctantly resigned his membership, continues to stand high in the administration. Of late he has been counsel for Henry Doherty, chairman of the Roosevelt Birthday celebrations, whose financing of the Cities Service company is under the scrutiny of the federal trade commission. The investigation has been shelved for some time. Mr. Mullen also obtained large fees for getting PWA contracts for Nebraska water power projects. He was influential in getting Mr. Ickes appointed secretary of the interior. Mr. Ickes says he refused to have anything to do with Mullen's fees, referring Mullen to the law division.

Roosevelt Will Send NRA Plan to Congress Tomorrow

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's message on continuation of the NRA and its underlying principles will reach Capitol hill Monday and legislation designed to carry out his wishes will be started through the congressional mill soon afterward.

It is understood that the President will propose that the National Recovery administration, expiring June 16 under the old law, shall be extended for another year. Another suggestion may be that authority be granted to continue the NRA two years if it is deemed necessary.

Other proposals will include the right of labor to collective bargaining, abolition of child labor and minimum wages.

Plan Quiz Into Monopolies.

As the announcement of the NRA message came from the White House a senate subcommittee, headed by Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah], met to determine procedure under a proposed resolution to investigate charges of monopolies created under the NRA.

The King group heard Russell Hardy, special assistant to the attorney general, in charge of anti-trust law litigation, in executive session. Senator King said that the meeting was a "preliminary consultation" and that next week the committee would take testimony from other department officials, economists and statisticians.

Drawing attention to rising prices under the NRA, Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, issued an appeal for an inquiry into the question of monopolies.

Small Business Hurt.

"In spite of the precautions taken by congress when the recovery legislation was enacted," said Brenckman, "many good people, regardless of party affiliations, assert that the road of the man who heads a small business or enterprise in many instances has grown more rocky under the NRA than before."

Brenckman said that any good features of NRA should be retained and the detrimental eliminated.

Another senate subcommittee, of which Senator M. M. Neely [Dem., W. Va.], is chairman, completed its hearings on the Black 30 hour week bill. It will report its findings and recommendations to the full senate judiciary committee next week.

At the final hearing the Retailers' National council, representing 12 national retail trade associations, entered a statement opposing the shorter work week.

Scheme Called Unsound.

"The Black bill now before your committee does not, in the opinion of the Retailers' National council, offer a sound method of advancing the economic progress of the country," the statement read. "Its provisions are much too drastic and inelastic to meet the conditions of industry and trade.

"If adopted this bill will result in great hardship and disaster."

The council stated that the general adoption of the thirty hour week, if the present wages obtained, would have the effect of increasing costs of goods by at least 25 per cent. Increased costs would be added to the price of goods sold to consumers, falling heavily upon the workers and farmers in their purchases of necessities.

See Buying Decline.

"There is very grave doubt that the consuming public will buy, as many goods at these higher prices as they are buying now," said the council. "If they do not, the total volume of goods sold, the total volume of goods produced, and the demand for labor will decline."

In addition the council contended the legislation would lower the quality of goods, reduce the stocks carried, and restrict the credit for retailers.

Enters Lobby; Robs Girl Cashier of $600 Pay Roll

As Miss Marian Farley, cashier of the Madrid restaurant in the Builders building at 228 North La Salle street, was crossing the lobby of the building yesterday morning a robber snatched from beneath her arm a cash box containing the restaurant pay roll of $616 and escaped through a revolving door into La Salle street. He ran down a Wacker drive stairway to the lower level. There a companion awaited him in an automobile.

PAPER CONCERN DEFIES NRA ON DUES FOR CODE

Willard J. Henry Jr., owner of the Federal Paper and Products company, 1019 East 75th street, yesterday challenged the national industrial recovery act and the code authority, in so far as they pertained to the paper industry, after threats of the authority to remove the company's Blue Eagle. The code authority charged that Henry failed to pay his contribution to the costs of administering the authority.

"I've never had a Blue Eagle," Henry said, "but if they want one to destroy I'll print them a couple and give them to the authority officials. We've refused to pay the assessments for the last six months for two reasons. First, they are unreasonably high for a business this size. Second, trade conditions are more deplorable now than they were before the code authority attempted to remedy them."

The company, Henry said, has complied with the code in every way in payment of wages and hours of work.

M'CARL UPSETS NEW DEAL MOVE TO RUN BUSINESS

Ruling Snubs Program for Trade Competition.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—With the federal housing program creeping along at a snail's pace through a maze of legal objections New Dealers today were sighing over their recent failure to push through a program which would put the government into direct competition with every type of private business.

The sweeping powers, which administration leaders held vital to the housing phase of the recovery program, were embodied in quasi-governmental corporations. The corporations were formed under Delaware laws, notoriously loose in their restrictions on corporate organizations and practices.

McCarl Challenges Plan.

The powers were in the reach of the New Dealers when Controler General J. R. McCarl, a holdover official from the Republican administration, questioned the right of the administration to operate under their autocratic provisions. Because McCarl controls a portion of federal easy money expenditures, his challenge was a stumbling block which could not be surmounted.

Although the New Dealers produced an opinion from Attorney General Cummings holding the corporation procedure to be legal, they were unable to force McCarl to loosen purse strings. A further blow to the corporations was delivered in a bitter attack on the floor of the senate by Thomas D. Schall [Rep., Minn.].

In the past month, it was learned today, the New Dealers have been quietly canceling the corporation charters. Administration officials said they were abandoning the charters because they feared operation under their broad powers might be misunderstood.

Using powers granted under the charters, the government could seize all personal and real property, manufacture anything from turbines to diaper pins, operate any industry, run a grocery store, or publish a newspaper. Officials conceded that the government might indirectly censor the press through the charters by taking over an opposition newspaper by right of eminent domain.

Seek to Rule Sun, Tide.

"The charters were certainly thorough," said one official. "They were sent to legal departments with instructions that the government be given all necessary powers, and the boys included domain over the tide, sun, moon, and stars."

Charters were obtained for the Public Works Emergency Housing corporation, Federal Surplus Relief corporation, the Commodity Credit corporation, Federal Subsistence Homestead corporation, Electric Home and Farm Authority, and the Public Works Emergency Leasing corporation.

Here are some of the businesses in which they contemplated government operation:

Manufacture, buy, and sell building materials and supplies of "every description."

Construct, maintain, and operate any type of structure.

Deal in stocks, bonds, mortgages, and other securities.

Build, buy, and operate mines, industries, power plants, farms, and commercial establishments as well as parks, forest, and playgrounds.

Produce, store, ship, export, and process all farm products.

Manufacture and deal in electric equipment and carry on a chattel mortgage business on electric appliances.

Wide Borrowing Powers.

In addition to these specific powers the corporations were to enjoy among themselves the power to borrow and to lend money without limit and in some instances without security. The leasing and housing corporations were to have the right to condemn all property, real and personal, and to take over and operate any property they wished.

The corporation charters were obtained by groups of one or more of the New Dealers, who have been charged with radical ambitions. These include Secretary Ickes, Secretary Perkins, No. 1 Brain Truster Rexford Guy Tugwell, and Arthur E. Morgan, TVA head.

In the PWA housing program, which includes low cost housing, slum clearance projects, and subsistence homesteads, with an expenditure of 150 million dollars for upwards of 45,000 units, less than 400 are completed.

In the federal housing administration appropriations for insurance for house building totals but 170 million dollars of an estimated necessary billion and a half.

HULL SAYS U. S. ADHERES TO FAR EASTERN POLICY

Hopes to End Canadian Trade Barriers.

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The United States still believes in and stands by the accomplishments of the Washington conference of 1922, "which, in their essence, still embody the basic principles" of our far eastern policy, Secretary of State Cordell Hull said tonight.

Mr. Hull, who discussed the nation's foreign relations, at a dinner of the Canadian Society of New York at the Hotel Biltmore, joined with Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett of Canada, the other speaker of the evening, in expressing hopes for the removal of tarif barriers between the United States and Canada.

Touches Upon Pacific Question.

The secretary of state in his address dealt wth the four major divisions of American foreign policy—Canadian, Latin-American, European, and Far Eastern—and touched upon the varying phases of each.

After reiterating his support of a "real limitation and reduction of the instruments of warfare"—Mr. Hull said that "if we turn our eyes toward the Pacific, we find a situation occupying an intermediate stage between our more immediate preoccupation with the issues of the western hemispheres and our more generalized participation in trans-Atlantic problems.

"The greater width of the Pacific," he said, "is more than compensated for by our possessions in that area and by long-standing historical developments and relationships. I shall not go into the origin of the open door and other elements of our traditional far eastern policy, but merely put out that this policy is most clearly set forth in a series of connected treaties which set up an integrated system for the maintenance of peace and stability in the Far East and the Pacific. I refer, of course, to the accomplishments of the Washington conference which, in their essence, still embody the basic principles we believe in and stand by.

Reduction of Armament.

"The problems dealt with in 1922 were in some respects peculiar to the special situation in the Far East and our relation thereto, notably the emergency of certain territorial questions, the predominance of economic issues, and the emphasis on naval rather than land and air armaments. But the elements common both to our trans-Pacific and trans-Atlantic policies are even more striking; political and economic stabilization through conference and mutual agreement; coöperation for the maintenance of peace through nonaggression, consultation, and through limitation and reduction of armaments."

Prime Minister Bennett devoted most of his address to a review of conditions in Canada, Canadian hopes and plans for the future, and to a discussion of the necessity for the removal of tarif restrictions to permit a "cast two-way trade between" Canada and the United States.

FARLEY, MORGENTHAU PRAISED BY LEWIS AT N. Y. GATHERING

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The judgment and character of Postmaster General James A. Farley were praised today by Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois in an address at the National Democratic club.

Senator Lewis told the regular Saturday luncheon audience that, although he had been "assailed from every source," Mr. Farley had overcome many disadvantages and risen to a high office which he was filling splendidly. Senator Lewis characterized his differences with Mr. Farley as having concerned the "merest of incidents," and added:

"The man who has the highest estimation of congress and the respect of its members is James A. Farley of the City of New York."

No one in the audience, which included many leaders of the Democratic organization, seemed to differ.

The speaker also praised another New Yorker, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. Most of his talk was devoted to a survey of "our national prospective."

"There will be no tax imposed by the administration that will beggar any one, however small," he predicted emphatically. "Honest property will be honestly protected." He said it was inconceivable that Franklin D. Roosevelt should risk destroying both his party and his country" by sponsoring a program of confiscatory taxation contrary to "common justice."

Ice Breaker, Planes Hunt Two Carried to Sea on Ice

ARCHANGEL, U. S. S. R., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The ice breaker Sedov joined airplanes today in a search for two lighthouse employés carried to sea on a block of ice Wednesday with one loaf of bread and a gun. It was feared that even if they are able to cling to their perilous perch on the White sea, they will freeze, as they were not wearing furs when the block broke away from the frozen shore.

TOWNSEND HEARS SENATORS' JOKES ABOUT HIS PLAN

Author Is Catechized in Facetious Vein.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—With questions popping at him from all sides Dr. F. E. Townsend told the senate finance committee today that his plan for old age monthly pensions of $200 would "thaw out the country's credit and start business rolling again."

Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the committee, brought up the phase of the Townsend scheme providing that persons benefiting would be forced to spend their pensions each month for "commodities or services."

Oh My, No!

"Would shooting craps with a half dozen other fellows be considered 'services'?" asked Harrison.

"O, no," replied Townsend.

Senator Alben W. Barkley [Dem., Ky.] then pointed out that the purchase of dice, however, would be spending on a commodity.

"Yes, that's true," agreed Townsend.

"Under your plan a farm couple would receive $4,000 a year," said Barkley. "What could they do with all that?"

Delivers Benediction.

"Why, bless your soul," said Townsend, "any one who has had a salary of $200 a month could answer that."

Barkley asked him about the farmer who hadn't had that much.

"Why he could travel, buy an auto, rebuild or repair his home, or buy liberally for his children or family," replied Townsend. "Haven't you ever heard that your desires increase with your income?"

Senator Tom Connally [Dem., Tex.] asked whether if every one bought a car Henry Ford would not only get his $200 a month but "every one else's."

The committee evinced interest in Townsend's next statement that his plan would permit payment of pensions to Ford, Rockefeller and Morgan.

Townsend asserted that his operation of his plan would result in a great increase in freight and passenger business and railroads would have to increase their rolling stock to handle the trade. He said that security would be established in the country and there would be no further need to hoard or save.

SQUARE DEAL GROUP MAPS WIDER FIGHT AGAINST HUEY LONG

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Activities of the Square Deal association "companies" in Louisiana were spreading today while spokesmen for the organization denounced Senator Huey P. Long and Gov. O. K. Allen for the accidental killing of a trooper in the Capitol martial law zone.

The Plaquemine company of the Square Deal association was holding a meeting tonight to further the cause of the anti-Long group. East Baton Rouge parish still was under technical martial law and Long was in Washington seeking an investigation of Postmaster General Farley.

Corp. Hugh J. Belanger, shot and killed near the Capitol, was buried yesterday with military honors. Military officials refused to name the man who shot Belanger but announced the shooting was an accident.

MANY CONSIDER HOOVER FATHER OF U. S. NEW DEAL

For Co-operation, but Not for Regimentation.

fact of charges made by burocrats can act to deprive him of his reputation. Where such authority arises among free men is difficult to discern."

Planned for Coöperation.

The federal reserve banks, the federal land banks, the federal home loan banks, and the farm coöperations were created to establish coöperation, says Mr. Hoover, "with only such minor governmental regulation as secures fair play, but without dictation by government or politics. Free coöperation is never the extinction of personal liberty. It is strengthening of equal opportunity."

Not that Mr. Hoover never had practiced regimentation. As food administrator during the war he had regimented the production and consumption of food with a vengeance. But that was a war measure. Regimentation in war, coöperation in peace, is the Hoover doctrin.

Federal paternalism, a predominant characteristic of the New Deal, received strong impetus in every direction under the Hoover administration. More and more the states and industries and groups of all kinds came to look to Washington for federal aid appropriations and the extension of such aid was encouraged by Mr. Hoover's conception of the function of the central government.

Flood Prevention Cited.

Great undertakings in flood prevention and water power development were initiated by Mr. Hoover either as secretary of commerce or President. The 165 million dollar Boulder dam, christened the Hoover dam under the Hoover administration, was the forerunner of TVA, the Columbia river development, and other gigantic water power projects financed by New Deal's PWA.

In his last two budget messages Mr. Hoover recommended the increase of river and harbor and flood control appropriations to an aggregate of about 100 millions a year "with a view to increasing employment." By the end of his administration he was pointing with pride to a 700 million dollar public building construction program which had "been of material assistance in the relief of the unemployed." Although puny in comparison, this was the genesis of Mr. Roosevelt's three billion dollar PWA.

Farm Board Forerunner.

In a way Mr. Hoover's farm board was the forerunner of the AAA. It aimed at the curtailment of production, which was to be attained without regimentation of the farmers. It lacked the processing tax feature, which Mr. Hoover had unalterably opposed in the McNary-Haugan bill, but it contained a price stabilization device by means of which the domestic price of wheat, corn, and cotton was maintained above the world price for a time at the expense of the federal treasury.

As the 500 million dollar farm board sank deeper and deeper into the mire of the depression it adjured and admonished the farmers more and more fervently to effect that curtailment of production which is the cornerstone of the AAA.

In Mr. Hoover's assembling of the leading industrialists of the country right after the 1929 crash the first faint suggestions of the NRA are discerned. Mr. Hoover exacted from these captains of industry the promise that they would not reduce wages or lay off employés. It was a rude form of the blanket code from which Gen. Johnson's Blue Eagle was hatched in the President's reëmployment agreement of 1933.

Agreement Fizzles Out.

Mr. Hoover's employment agreement fizzled out and by the time the new administration came in the movement was in the direction of government regimentation of employers in order to compel them to pay higher wages.

One of Mr. Hoover's outstanding contributions to the recovery phase of the New Deal was the RFC. After the National Credit corporation had proved wholly inadequate to meet the emergency in 1931 Mr. Hoover early in 1932 obtained legislation creating the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Its activities were confined at first to the succor of banks, insurance companies, and railroads, but a few months later Mr. Hoover caused its lending capacity to be doubled and its scope extended to enable it to make loans to states and to finance self-liquidating public and semi-public projects, to lend to "bona fide institutions" organized under state or federal law to carry or market crops and live stock.

Mr. Hoover also established the Home Loan Bank system for the aid of mortgagers. The New Deal took over both the RFC and the Home Loan Bank system bodily, merely expanding both institutions tremendously to carry forward recovery activities on a grander scale.

Always for Coöperation.

As secretary of commerce Mr. Hoover fostered and gave great impetus to movements which eventually crystalized in the National Recovery administration of the New Deal. But his influence was always directed toward the coöperation, never the regimentation, of business enterprises.

Under his administration, both as secretary of commerce and as President, trade associations came to occupy an extremely important place in the business structure. And it was around the trade association that the New Dealers built the NRA.

In numerous ways Mr. Hoover encouraged the development of trade associations. He created a division of the department of commerce to coöperate with these organizations and approved large appropriations for this undertaking. In 1927 he published a bulky report on "Trade Association Activities" to which he contributed a foreword stressing the value of such coöperation of business enterprises as a means of eliminating waste and reducing the cost of products.

Lumber Work Is Cited.

In one industry after another Secretary Hoover working in conjunction with the trade association brought about agreements on the standardization of products and simplification of trade practices. In the lumber industry, for example, 154 rules were laid down applying the principle that "the responsibility of the entire organized lumber industry for the maintenance of agreed and published sizes and grades and inspection standards is recognized."

Citing examples of the results of 200 conferences with trade groups and the resulting agreements, Mr. Hoover reported that "the dimensions of paving brick have been reduced from 66 to 5 sizes; of rasps and files from 1,351 to 496; in wire fencing from 552 to 69; in milk bottles from 49 to 9; in lumber 60 per cent of the variations in sizes were eliminated; in hotel and institutional china the sizes and varieties were reduced from 700 to 160." These, he said, were illustrations of the standardization he had brought about representing a saving of millions of dollars.

Fought Unfair Methods.

Mr. Hoover also was active in promoting trade association measures to eradicate unfair methods of competition which were to become one of the principal reasons for the establishment of the NRA. He helped to bring about the conference of unfair trade practices organized by the federal trade commission. His plans for the rejuvenation of the ailing coal mining industry foreshadowed many of the measures carried out under the NRA. Codes for industry were first heard of during the Hoover régime. The "code of lumber trade practice" was hailed as a self-imposed ordinance of "business morals."

The activities of the trade associations, which he had inspired, Mr. Hoover pronounced the "beginnings of constructive self-government in industry." Coöperation for "voluntary enforcement of high standards" he thought would go far toward the elimination of government from business.

Sees Improving Thought.

"The very publication of codes of ethics by many associations instilling service as the primary purpose; the condemnation of specific unfair practices; the insistence upon a higher plane of relationships between employer and employé—all of them are at least indications of improving thought and moral perceptions," said Mr. Hoover.

In those days each trade association had become the medium for the exchange of information on prices among the units of the industry, a practice taken over bodily by the NRA and now known as the open price system. In 1923 the Superior court condemned this practice on the ground that, in the case at issue at least, it had been made the vehicle of price fixing in violation of the anti-trust laws. Two years later, however, in another case the court held that it was permissible to exchange information on the "actual price which the product has brought in past transactions," but prohibited "concerted action with respect to prices."

Start in Coolidge Régime.

The first effort to write a code limiting hours of labor by mutual consent in an industry was made in the Coolidge administration and continued into the Hoover administration with Mr. Hoover's approval. In 1924 Secretary of Labor James J. Davis got the boxboard manufacturers together in an agreement to substitute a six day week for the seven day work week and three shifts of eight hours each for the two 12 hour shifts in vogue.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR OF VIRGIN ISLANDS MAY BE FORCED TO RESIGN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The Virgin Islands, the $25,000,000 rum hangover which New Dealers are trying to transform into a Utopia, was the subject today of an hour and a half conference at the White House today.

Dr. Ernest Gruening, chief of the bureau of territories and insular affairs, delivered a report on his personal investigations of the islands' affairs.

Before the conference Stephen Early, assistant secretary to the President, said that the President was expecting a full report on the political situation in the islands. Reports were current that a showdown was near on the governorship of the islands, now held by Dr. Paul Pearson, a Republican appointee.

Dr. Pearson's enforced resignation long has been advocated by Postmaster General Farley and other party leaders. Secretary Ickes, a Republican until he joined the New Deal, has supported Pearson staunchly.

Later in the day the President conferred with the house steering committee, headed by Representative Adolph Sabath, Chicago Democrat.

Sabath was overtaken by reporters. Puffing from his exertion he said patronage distribution had been discussed and "satisfactory progress was made."

YOUTH IS HIRED TO TAKE KIDNAP LETTER; BEATEN

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Norman Freed, 15, was in Bellevue hospital with a fractured skull today because he tried to earn 50 cents by delivering a note for a man who stopped him on the street.

The message, police say, was a kidnap note and Augie Del Gazio, 45, to whom it was addressed, beat the boy in an effort to learn who had sent it.

A middle aged man stopped Norman and his brother Murray, 13, near their home and hired them to take the message to Del Gazio. He gave the younger boy 5 cents deposit and was to pay the balance when Norman returned.

The note offered Del Gazio information concerning a plot to kidnap his brother Tony, 20. The writer said he would send the information from Philadelphia if Del Gazio put $100 in an envelope and dispatched it by the boy. The sender of the note disappeared.

SWEDEN MAY GO INTO COFFEE AND DRUG BUSINESS

Cabinet Urges Extension of "New Deal."

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Sweden—the world's "social test tube"—today made ready to shake up some of its own early ideas as to the new deal for the working man and business interests.

A government program for further socialization of industry and business, which has been compared in some respects to the efforts of the Roosevelt administration in the United States, will start on its course through parliament Monday, it is expected, with committees giving their attention to the program.

Plan New Monopolies.

Talk of new government monopolies, including gasoline, coffee and pharmaceutical supplies, is now being heard in parliamentary debate, with tremendous opposition from conservatives and certain business interests.

An extension of government control of industry, to prevent "speculation contrary to public good," is among the points discussed.

The utterances of socialist leaders, it is agreed, resemble those of the New Deal advocates in the United States. The Swedish minister of finance, Ernst Wigfors, urges that free and unrestricted competition is past.

Denies Elimination of Profit.

"The choice now stands between private monopolies or such which the people as a whole can control. The experience of various parts of the world shows that the way of the future is toward increased organization, not a return to the old freedom of competition," he said.

Prime Minister P. A. Hanson has declared that the government program is not intended to "eliminate private profit," but to "keep private profit-making from leading into speculation which is detrimental to the good of the people as a whole."

COAL TEAMSTER STRIKE ORDERED BY OUTLAW UNION

Police Ready to Block Violence Tomorrow.

Officials of the Chicago Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers' union, local 704, referred to as the outlaw union, yesterday ordered a strike against all coal merchants who have not signed a contract with the union for an increase in pay for the workers to take effect tomorrow morning.

Officials of this union yesterday declared that between 2,000 and 3,000 men will join in the walkout tomorrow. It was said that a few coal dealers have signed contracts with the union but the majority have not.

Just how effective the strike will be in tying up deliveries of coal will not be known until tomorrow when the men report for work.

Under Contract Until April.

Nearly 70 per cent of the coal merchants in the city who are members of the Chicago Coal Merchants association have signed a contract, which does not expire until April 1, with the Coal Teamsters and Handlers' union, an American Federation of Labor union affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Leslie E. Goudie of the Teamsters' joint council, who has been directing the affairs of the A. F. of L. union since the ouster of James [Lefty] Lynch two months ago, said that members of his union will report as usual for work tomorrow. He said that his union will be able to supply men to all dealers who pay the wage scale fixed by the international union.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney's office made preparations to insure an absence of trouble in the event of a clash between the rival forces. Lieut. Frank Johnson of his office was placed in charge of several squads who will be held in readiness to prevent disorder.

Police Held Ready.

Capt. Ira J. McDowell, in charge of the police department's uniform rank last night was preparing a detail of uniformed men to be assigned to companies asking for aid.

Milton Booth Jr., president of the outlaw union, explained that the teamsters demand an increase from $6 to $7 a day based on an eight hour day or a raise of from 75 cents an hour to 87½ cents an hour.

In some quarters the strike was looked upon as a showdown in the actual strength of the rival unions. Both have claimed a 75 per cent membership of the 5,000 teamsters in Chicago.

Fishing Boat's Crew Saved by Coast Guard

After drifting five hours yesterday in the open water of the lake beyond the ice floes, the Genevieve, a 40 foot power fishing boat, and her crew of three, were rescued by the coast guard cutter Rush. As the boat with Arthur St. Peter, 2145 Freemont street, the owner, his brother, and a deckhand, neared their nets eight miles off Gross Point, Evanston at 6 a. m., yesterday, the motor became disabled. The boat drifted to within three miles of the Carter Harrison crib where its distress signals were seen.

STUDENT STRIKERS' DEMANDS IN HANDS OF FOUR TRUSTEES

Franklin, Ind., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The student strikers of Franklin college today left their case in the hands of four of the institution's trustees.

The trustees are to hold a Sunday session with President William Gear Spencer and Dean P. L. Powell to discuss the students' demands for administrative reforms and additional scholarships to attract athletes to the school.

There was little manifestation today of the strike that began Thursday. There are no Saturday classes at the college.

The students were tired after remaining up until 2:30 o'clock this morning to await a report from their leaders who had conferred with trustees concerning conditions that led to the strike.

Lawrence Fulmer, president of the student council, has expressed the belief the students will return to their classes Monday.

Mr. Hayward, it was learned, is accused of having borrowed money from his teachers and improper supervision.

LOUISE BREWER IS MARRIED TO F. H. WOODS JR.

Reception Follows Pretty Church Ceremony.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Miss Louise Brewer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harris Brewer of Ritchie court, was married to Frank H. Woods Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Woods, yesterday in St. Chrysostom's church. The Rev. Dudley Stark read the ceremony and a reception followed at the Casino.

Promptly at 4:30 o'clock the bride came down the aile of the lily decorated church upon the arm of her father. She was lovely in a gown of traditional white satin made simply with a high neckline, long sleeves and a long train. A billowing veil of tulle was fastened to a little tulle cap with orange blossoms and she carried Easter lilies.

Gowns of Attendants.

Her attendants, Mrs. Herbert McLaughlin, her sister, and Miss Virginia Waller, her cousin, were gowned alike in fluffy ivory tulle. The skirts were full, and short capes of the tulle covered their shoulders. They wore wide brimmed leghorn hats trimmed with turquoise blue velvet ribbon and they carried spring flowers.

William Humphreys served Mr. Woods as best man. The ushers were Thomas Woods of Lincoln, Neb., and Henry Woods of Winnetka, brothers of the bridegroom whose family came from Nebraska; Gardner Brown, Huntington Eldridge, Solomon B. Smith, W. Press Hodgkins, Herbert McLaughlin, and Stanton Grigg of California.

Depart for Southern Cruise.

Mrs. Brewer, at the head of the receiving line at the Casino, wore a blue crêpe gown and blue hat and orchids. Mrs. Woods was in beige crêpe with brown accessories and orchids.

Mr. Woods and his bride left for New York to sail on a Panama cruise. On their return to Chicago the middle of March they will be at home temporarily with his parents in the Drake towers.

SEE JAP PLAN TO CONTROL CHINA BY FORCING BIG LOAN

American Far East Trade Faces "Freezeout."

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

HONGKONG, Feb. 16.—All indications are that Japan, preparing against future international developments, is about to insist that China reach with it "a showdown without nonsense or evasions."

In the opinion of well informed circles here and in Nanking, abundant evidence exists that Tokio's policy is to use China's present dire economic plight to force a loan upon the Chinese government. Such a loan would have political and economic provisos that would cut deeply into other foreign interests in China and put at Japan's disposal much of China's latent wealth in event the struggle over trade supremacy should lead Japan to warfare with Russia or any of the other major powers.

Perils U. S. Trade.

It is the general belief that the opportunity is too tempting to let slip. With returning prosperity in the rest of the world, Japan will have to count on meeting stiffer opposition than in the past, but if it can use China's present financial crisis to get control over the Nanking government during this year, efforts to check it later will be difficult. Japan would, of course, get a dominant position over the United States, which exports to China twice as much as Japan does, and over Great Britain, which has investments in China of about $1,200,000,000.

Chinese officials point out that events in Manchukuo show Japan's conception of the "open door."

It is considered significant that the Japanese press and Japanese officials have been stressing China's economic crisis and freely predicting a financial panic. At the same time it is being said more and more openly that if China is amenable to Japan's demands it will be able to get the assistance required from Japan, even to the extent of 300,000,000 yen [about $85,300,000].

Claims U. S. Refuses Loan.

Heitaro Yukotake, commercial counselor of the Japanese legation in China, says China is economically deadlocked owing to an unfavorable balance of international trade and that the easiest solution is for it to raise a loan from Japan. According to Yukotake, China has approached the United States and Britain and apparently has been refused.

"It is quite natural," he added, "that China should look to Japan."

He is also advocating the promotion of Chinese-Japanese trade and the dispatch to China of Japanese agricultural and industrial experts.

Financial and official circles here feel that America and Europe are misinformed about the economic situation and do not understand the extent and urgency of the financial crisis, erroneously believing that since the Chinese new year passed without panic the danger is over. This optimism is entirely unjustified. Money is now tighter than before China's annual settlement day. Conditions at present are so adverse that any one in Shanghai attempting to sell United States dollars or sterling for cash and attempting to cover by buying back for March delivery must pay a premium equivalent to 25 per cent annual interest.

Predict New Jap Aggression.

If China refuses a Japanese loan, well informed Chinese circles here believe Japan will not hesitate to use all forms of pressure to force acceptance, on the grounds that legitimate trade guaranteed under treaties is being interfered with, there would possibly be naval and military intervention, with Tientsin, Shantung, and Fukien regarded as the likeliest places for such a crisis to develop.

Already grave apprehension exists in Nanking among foreign advisers of the government, who fear that they will be supplanted by Japanese. It is understood that their expiring contracts are not being renewed. Even the German military advisers are uneasy. The Japanese government is also insisting that the chief secretary to the customs bureau must in future always be a Japanese, thus indicating an intention to obtain a measure of control over customs and adding another sign of the waning prestige of western powers.

There is much anxiety among foreign business men, who anticipate that if Japan obtains control they will lose their footholds, as they are losing them in Manchukuo.

Bare Incident at Amoy.

Readiness to use the smallest incident as an excuse for a show of force was exemplified in a situation that arose at Amoy last Sunday. The Japanese began building wharves, which the authorities asserted were without permits and in violation of China's coastal rights. The Amoy authorities arrested a Chinese workman, whereupon the Japanese made three demands, giving twenty-four hours for compliance and threatening "drastic action." They landed 400 marines to guard the new wharves.

The demands, which were fully met, included permission to finish the wharves, release of the arrested workman, and an apology and corrections in the Chinese press. Shanghai newspapers were not permitted to publish news of the Amoy crisis.

"It is probably no exaggeration to say that if the Japanese bid for supremacy on the Chinese coast succeed it will be the most fateful event for the United States since the world war," a high Chinese authority said. "It would imply gradual exclusion of America from the far east and the consequent loss of a market that might, in the future, absorb the greater portion of America's surplus manufactures.

It can scarcely fail to have far reaching effects on American prosperity, besides greatly intensifying the dangers of war in the Pacific."

"GUILTY"; FAINTS; NOT GUILTY AND HE IS REVIVED

Cleveland, O., Feb. 16.—[U. P.]—Oscar Hawkins was on trial for his life. The jury received the case, deliberated, returned with a verdict.

Common Pleas Judge Alva R. Corlett received the sheet of paper, turned to the courtroom and intoned:

"Guilty of murder in the first degree."

There was no recommendation for mercy.

Hawkins fainted.

Judge Corlett turned to the jury foreman.

"You failed to sign this verdict," he pointed out.

"You read the wrong one," the foreman replied. "We found the defendant not guilty."

Hawkins revived.

JAPAN TO EXPAND RIGHT OR WRONG, CONSUL ASSERTS

Had to Take Manchuria, Envoy to Hawaii Says.

HONOLULU, T. H., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Japan's new consul general in Honolulu, whose forthright defense of Japan's expansion drew instant attention to his first public utterance here, today urged young Japanese in Hawaii to help maintain peace and good will in the Pacific.

The consul, Teijiro Tamura, who was educated in America, issued the statement in connection with tomorrow's celebration of the 50th anniversary of the first organized Japanese immigration to Hawaii.

In previous statements, public and private, Tamura has defended Japan's expansionist policy solely on the ground of necessity. While other Japanese spokesman have ascribed philanthropic motives to Nippon's spread into Manchuria, Tamura says openly that Japan went into Manchuria because she had to.

"None of Your Business."

"If you say we cannot expand in Manchuria, we answer that we must expand," he said. "If you say we cannot take care of the vital needs of our people, in the way that other countries have done, we must answer, 'It is none of your business.'

"Japan must insist upon her right to exist. This nation of 80,000,000 people must expand to exist. Right or wrong, it must expand now in the only country open to it for such purposes, Manchuria."

Tamura has no time for "political propaganda" and "high sounding diplomacy," he said bluntly. He expressed disbelief that the former is of value before an enlightened public, and the second "is the sphere of our embassy at Washington."

Struggle for Existence Keen.

"Japan finds it increasingly difficult to feed her ever increasing population," he said. "Farmers find it difficult to feed their hungry families. Struggle for mere existence is keen in the towns and cities. You cannot expect this vigorous rising nation to be confined in territories equal in size to Ontario."

Tomorrow's anniversary of the first organized Japanese immigration to these islands will be celebrated by 140,000 Japanese residents of Hawaii, because 38 per cent of Hawaii's population is of Japanese ancestry, the celebration will extend from one end of the archipelago to the other. The flag of the rising sun will flutter beside the stars and stripes, fishing boats will be decked in bright colors and every Japanese will celebrate the day in a spirit akin to that of Americans marking the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth in 1620.

Few remain of the original group of 682 men, 164 women and 102 children who arrived Feb. 17, 1885, at Honolulu. They had been selected individually by the Hawaiian consul at Tokio.

Chosen As Good Laborers.

Japanese immigrants were chosen by the Hawaiian government, then a monarchy, because it was believed they would make good laborers on the sugar plantations, and because the Japanese do not readily intermarry with other races. Chinese immigrants mixed readily with native Hawaiians, and the local government feared depletion of pure Hawaiian stock.

What will be the political effect of the half century old immigration to the islands remains to be seen. Of the 90,000 native born American citizens of Japanese ancestry here, only 15,000 are old enough to vote. Within a few years they will outnumber any similar classification of voters, being surpassed at present only by pure Hawaiians, of whom 16,000 were registered last Nov. 6.

DOUMERGUE WARNS FRANCE OF MENACE FROM THE FAR EAST

PARIS, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Gaston Doumergue, former premier and president of France, broke a long silence in his garden retreat today to warn that European civilization is in danger from the east.

Doumergue, who returned to his books and flowers at Tournefeuille after his cabinet was overthrown last November, cited the danger "of a billion men in Asia who are restless for expansion."

"It is worth paying attention to, for when the awakening comes it will be brutal and terrible," he said. "Already Japan is victoriously competing with Europe in economic fields. The economic invasion has already begun. We cannot use too much thought on that. Our horizon is too small."

YANK CHARGES JAP POLICE MISTREATED HIM AND TWO AIDS

OSAKA, Japan, Feb. 17 [Sunday.]—(AP)—R. S. K. Irvin, American business man, said today he intended to file a formal complaint with the United States consulate at Kobe tomorrow alleging he and two other Americans had been mistreated by Osaka police.

Irvin, formerly of New York, is the managing director of the Nippon Corn Products company, a subsidiary of the American Corn Products company.

Three days ago, he said, he and two other Americans were roped by police, marched through the streets and detained for four hours. Two Coreans, who had been attempting to extort a small sum from him for several months, the American said, visited his office here and threatened violence unless he paid. When one Corean seized him, Irvin said, he struck the man with his fist and called in police.

In the presence of the police, he continued, the Coreans made another attack upon him. Without further inquiry, Irvin continued, the police trussed him with a rope, also tieing up two company employés, and marched 15 minutes to the police station.

Watch the Fords Go By

"Five Thousand More Since Yesterday"

Every working day, more than five thousand New Ford V-8's roll off the assembly line and into the service of Ford owners.

It has been a long time since people have taken to a new car the way they have taken to the New Ford V-8.

Ford production in January was upwards of 100,000 units. For February it is set at 130,000. There haven't been figures like that since 1930.

That means jobs and wages for increasing thousands of automobile workers. Ford employment in the United States is more than 114,000—over 74,000 at Dearborn and 40,000 in Ford plants throughout the country. This activity reaches out to many hundreds of thousands of men in allied industries. They are busy when Ford is busy.

The story of the Ford V-8 is one of progress. Before it came along the V-8 cylinder engine was always associated with high price. It was beyond the reach of the average motorist.

The Ford Motor Company believed this was "the coming car for the majority of drivers." It set to work to build it at low cost. When you give the people something better there's never any question about sales.

It is interesting to note that more than 1,400,000 Ford V-8 cars and trucks have been built in the last three years. Each year has seen a sharp increase—the V-8 production in 1934 being approximately 103% ahead of 1933.

More important than sales, however, is service to owners. What the car does on the road is what counts. Actual use is the true test of an automobile. It has proved that the Ford V-8 engine has certain distinct advantages in performance and that it is economical too. Fact is, the Ford V-8 costs less per mile than any other Ford ever built. Cost records of owners show that to be so.

BRITAIN, FRANCE TRY TO AGREE ON REPLY TO HITLER

Nations Are Divided Over German Demands.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Somewhat disappointed because Germany did not go far enough in its answer to Franco-British proposals for an inclusive European security agreement, the British and French today began the second stage of their campaign to win Germany back into the concert of nations.

The new stage of the long and arduous negotiations will be an exchange of views through diplomatic channels which started this afternoon in London and Paris. By terms of the Feb. 3 declaration, offering to legalize German rearmament if the reich adheres to eastern and central European pacts of mutual assistance, joins an air Locarno pact and agrees to limit armaments and return to the league of nations, the British are bound to consult with the French before accepting Reichsfuehrer Hitler's invitation to conduct bilateral conversations between the British and German governments.

To Study Note Closely.

British acceptance or postponement of the invitation for Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, to visit Berlin therefore will not be known until the British and French give the closest scrutiny to Hitler's note.

What is most likely to prolong negotiations is doubt as to whether it is wise to sign an air alliance pact immediately as Germany demands, without waiting to see whether the Nazi government intends to sign the proposed eastern security pact and join the French and Italians in guaranteeing Austria's independence. The Anglo-French declaration indicates that the British, against their wishes, intend to help the French attempt to persuade Germany to sign the eastern Locarno, which is so much desired by Russia.

Consequently, it is likely that if the French, who are annoyed at Germany's failure to mention the league, or the eastern or central European pacts, object to negotiating an air pact before these matters are settled, negotiations will be dragged out for many months.

Want Air Pact First.

The British are inclined to believe it is best to sign the air pact and then proceed with the other pacts after Germany has been conciliated. Once Great Britain and France have arranged their problems with Germany, it is said the next step should be to make some arrangement with Moscow. It is felt that Russia cannot be left out. The German and Polish flirtation with Japan, carrying the possibility of an anti-Russian alliance, is causing disquiet.

The British are not opposed to Simon's visit to Berlin, an invitation Reichsfuhrer Hitler personally inserted in his note, but they feel it would be better for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the Nazi foreign minister, to come to London.

It is expected here that the French government will give the closest study to the German reply tomorrow and be ready to announce their views Monday.

France Resents Nazi Stand.

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 16.—Almost without exception, comment in today's Paris press on the German reply to the Franco-British proposals of Feb. 3 is characterized by resentment against the assumption by Berlin that henceforth the treaty of Versailles shall be regarded as a dead letter.

The phenomenon of Hitlerism and the change he has made in the European situation is not yet admitted here. Although nearly seventeen years have elapsed since the war ended, the French press, at least, is still seeking to preserve the illusion that Germany should be happy to accept and sign whatever proposals are made to her without discussion.

"Travesty of Facts."

That she has not done so is set down as insincerity and lack of good faith. Her argument that she has rearmed because she is surrounded by nations that have not kept their pledge to reduce their armaments is described as "a travesty of the facts." Nothing is ever likely to change this view.

What has hurt the French perhaps most of all is the indifference of the German reply to the proposed eastern security pact, which had been heralded here as certain to give every country security if only Germany would come in.

Another complaint against the note is that it seeks by its proposal of a preliminary conversation with Great Britain "to cause a rift in Franco-British solidarity."

"Britain and France must remain firm and united," it is urged.

Oklahoma Legislator Asks Fine for Spraying Orchards

'LAWRENCE OF ARABIA' PLANS TO QUIT AIR FORCE AND RETIRE

LONDON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—"Lawrence of Arabia," who for 12 years has been Aircraftsman T. E. Shaw of the Royal Air Force, plans to retire to solitude in a cottage in Dorset within two weeks.

In a letter to a former secret service man who worked under him in Arabia and which was published by the Sunday Express, Britain's almost legendary world war hero disclosed his discharge from the R. A. F. is effective March 1. Lawrence has been stationed most of the time at Bridlington in charge of a flotilla of air force target launches.

Describing his future retreat, he wrote, "It is a cottage in the middle of a great heath of bracken and heather—two rooms, no bed, no kitchen, no drains, but a spring in the garden and a feeling of utter peace." In another letter Lawrence spoke of the uncertainty of his future.

"I shall be rather lost in charge of myself after all these years," he said.

SOCIALISTS TURN GUNS ON POLICE IN VIENNA RIOT

VIENNA, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Police and Socialist demonstrators clashed tonight in the Floridsdorf section of Vienna, scene of the heaviest fighting in last February's civil war, as increased propaganda activities on the right and left gave authorities concern.

A group of Socialist youths, parading in violation of the government's orders, opened fire on police when the latter, held ready to suppress expected disorders over the week-end, charged them. The police returned the fire and arrested eight persons.

No Casualties Reported.

The authorities reported no casualties. Whether any of the Socialists were wounded was not known.

The police kept their eye particularly on the communists, who they believe have the largest reserve of foreign funds to finance their activities. Support from abroad for the Nazis was believed to be lessening, while the Socialists were described as "broke."

Under orders issued for the week of the anniversary of last year's civil war, during which the government of the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss seized Vianna from the Socialists, the police were investigating all groups of four or more persons.

53 Radicals Jailed.

Three radical meetings in suburban Floridsdorf, the shell-shattered Socialist district where the most bitter fighting occurred last February, resulted in 45 arrests.

Red pamphlets appeared in other parts of the city, eight distributors being jailed, while two soviet flags were momentarily displayed. A huge sign put up by the radicals read: "We are alive and coming again."

HITLER EXPECTED TO HAVE PARLEY WITH PILSUDSKI

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Diplomatic circles here tonight said they had reports that Adolf Hitler and Marshal Josef Pilsudski, former premier and present war minister of Poland, would meet soon for heart to heart conversations analagous to those between Hitler and Premier Mussolini June 14, 1934.

The foreign office professed to know nothing about the report, but the denial at the Polish embassy was considerably less positive. A spokesman there first said "this is the first I have heard of it." To the observation, "then we shall say that at present no meeting is contemplated," the spokesman replied: "That is a very happy formulation of the situation."

The diplomatic sources said that Ambassador Josef Lipski's hurried visit to Poland about a fortnight ago had partly to do with the proposed meeting of the two dictators. Since Pilsudski reportedly plans to leave soon for Madeira, Morocco, or the Canary Islands, it was thought probable that the Polish statesmen might take the route by way of Berlin to visit Hitler.

Shapiro, former bankers, on charges that they had represented two $500 bonds he had purchased from them in 1929 were on a six apartment building when the building was in fact a 35 car garage. The verdict was returned by a jury in the court of Municipal Judge John J. Lupe.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

THE MIDWEST IN THE AMERICAN UNION.

A basic political condition developed with the growth of the American Union exerts an influence even now, although the origin may now be obscured. It readily comes to the surface if the historic relations of the states to each other are examined.

The original thirteen pooled their sovereignties. They had been colonies with a considerable measure of self-government, with their own assemblies, courts, and administrative officers, under royal or proprietary governors. When they formed a union it was as of separate units going into a federation or partnership. No member of the Union admitted subsequently could have quite their standing unless it would be Vermont, and to a less degree Kentucky and Tennessee. Vermont virtually had been a state before it was admitted. Kentucky and Tennessee existed as colonies, counties, or territories of two states, Virginia and North Carolina.

It was a long time before the idea of custodian and ward got out of the consciousness of the original states. They were, to what followed, parents. They were the governors of territory and the creators. They could invest new peoples with statehood and erect their governments. Then later a political difference arose to give them a different set of experiences. The southern states, among the original formers, tried to leave the Union, and after they had been forcibly retained in it they were put upon a probationary period known as reconstruction before they were allowed full membership again.

Thus we had the original terms of agreement and union violently modified by a series of experiences which would affect political thought for a long time in the section which yielded against its will. We know the nature of this thought and describe it when we speak of the solid south. It also extended into newer states, in the south, giving them a bond with the older states for which no parallel can be found in the north, although undoubtedly the struggle bound the new and old northern states together.

After the war some new considerations began to operate in the extension of the Union membership, or more accurately probably there was a reapplication of reasons which had appeared before the war. Where there had been before a balancing of slave states with free states to preserve the status quo there was a scramble to obtain or preserve political control by making new states. The Republicans weren't sure of their ground because the Democratic party, with the reinclusion of the southern states, became formidable again.

We may have forgotten the intensity of political opinions in those days, but to a Union Republican a northern Democrat was for long an object of bitter distrust. Some of the western states which were given their place in the Union for their votes have remained below the ordinary standard of statehood in population and progressiveness. They have other charms than political, but they do not meet what would reasonably have been required as the standard for full membership in the American Union. They came in for the benefit of one or the other of the parties and their place is still characterized by this peculiarity.

There remains for consideration one block of states, the historic background of which is essentially different from that of any of the others. These are the states of the old Northwest Territory, now commonly spoken of as the midwest or the central west, the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin. When they were contained within the Northwest Territory they represented the first public domain held by the new republic as a piece of property in which all of the original states had an ownership. It was a property in the management of which the federated states had to think and act in common. The territory itself looked to the republic as the source of its authority.

A few of the territories had known the French government of Canada, a few more of them had known the British government, and still a few more had known the Virginia state government. But they at the most were very few and the newcomers entering to settle knew only the government of the United States. Thus these five great states arose as essentially American, their people got their lands from the American government, as territories they got their governors from the American government, as states they had their constitutions accepted in Washington, and they were entirely nurtured by the American Union. They were the first born of the new republic and that fact has given them a national consciousness which has its effect today.

The people of this midwestern territory even now think more in terms of the Union and less in terms of themselves than the people of any other part of the country. That they should do so is a credit to them and a great asset to the nation. It has, however, its disadvantages. It enables the states that are self-centered, for reasons found in their historic development, to impose upon the people who think only nationally and not locally when an act of congress is at issue. Midwesterners surrender their rights and their privileges. They make few demands upon their central government, they contribute willingly out of proportion to what they receive, they consent to the development of other regions with their own money without protest, they too readily agree that what is good for South Carolina, New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Idaho, New Mexico, or any other state is good for the nation. They have never insisted with proper spirit that what is good for them would also be good for the nation. They consent to large appropriations going elsewhere and are not indignant if few come their way. Their political representatives, apparently sensing this national spirit, are complacent in turn.

No one would desire to break down the nationalist feeling in the old Northwest Territory, but the lack of self-interest properly expressed is a detriment to many enterprises and many interests which should receive support and which do not. Without injury to the fine qualities of midwest feeling, an emphasis should be placed upon fair dealing in order that the stake of these states in national development shall not be ignored as it has been. This section of the country should awaken to its own interests and form associations needed for assertion in national affairs.

A NEW FORM OF PRESS CENSORSHIP.

Control of public information is a primary consideration in government and is always attempted. The oldest and simplest method is by license and censorship. When the printing press appeared to change the form of public discussion governments countered against the new force in public opinion by putting the printer under license, subject to suppression on offense. Printing was by indulgence and repression by censorship was of direct and instantaneous effect. Freedom of electorates and freedom of presses being parts of a whole, they have gone together. They rise and fall as one.

Where in Europe dictatorships rule the people they also rule the presses. Free opinions and unfree people do not go together. In the United States when business was being codified the license to do business was the form considered. It is the most drastic form of regulation. The withdrawal of a Blue Eagle has the purpose of putting a moral opprobrium on the victim. The withdrawal of a license would close his shop.

Licensing was contemplated for the newspaper code, but the publishers were aware of its full meaning. The administration retreated reluctantly, and, although in the end Mr. Roosevelt accepted the reservation of constitutional rights, the President did so with public scoffing. It is to be noted that when the radio appeared as a new form of communication the early history of the printing press was repeated. Radio went under government license and is now subject to a control from which the newspapers escaped.

Direct attempts at press regulation having failed, the government has sought to accomplish its purposes indirectly and the measures adopted have been more effective than might have been expected. Control is applied at the source of information. The Roosevelt department and administrative heads closed sources of news and required the news gatherers to deal with publicity agents. Washington now has the largest organization of government press agents in its history. Their releases are intended to give the news of the day, supplemented by the regular conferences with department heads and the President.

It is plain that as a government undertakes many departures from ordinary normal administration and pursues radical policies it must try to carry favorable newspaper comment along. Public information increases in value as the plans of government become debatable. If a government is powerful enough it uses censorship. If it lacks that power it uses news coloring, intimidation, and subsidy.

The present newspaper problem is one of avoiding colored news and of finding free sources of information. Newspaper men have found the difficulty growing. Censorship has reached the source of news, having failed to dominate the printed output. The pretext is one of accuracy and responsibility. Back of the pretext is the object of doctoring public opinion in favor of extraordinary governmental programs. The truth regarding administration can be obtained only by breaking down the restrictions and guarding against the special pleading of the government news.

Editorial of the Day

TO ONE BROKEN HEART—

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

To one broken heart—$100,000. When such bills are presented to the law courts for collection the cynical have always smirked, and with good reason. If the sensibilities of these broken-hearted are so fragile—and so expensive—why is it that they are not only willing to hazard the painful publicity of the courtroom but often seem to thrive on it?

That is one of life's little mysteries which would be harder to fathom if the tangible returns of having one's heart broken were not frequently so generous, especially when the breaker has realizable assets which the sherif can seize.

So the cynical, as well as many other folk to whom heart balm actions have always seemed to smell slightly of the counting room, should cheer for Representative Roberta West Nicholson of Indiana.

Mrs. Nicholson feels the same way about it. She expressed her feelings so effectively that 86 of her fellow lawmakers, all masculine, gallantly leaped to her side and passed a bill to outlaw all suits for breach of promise, alienation of affections, etc., in the courts of Indiana. Mrs. Nicholson insists that most of such actions are merely attempts at "legal blackmail" and efforts to "place a cash value on misconduct."

The measure now goes to the senate. Some meanie of a lawyer may rise to argue that the Nicholson bill is unconstitutional and steps heavily on the toes of certain rights well founded in common law.

So it may be a little too soon for the promise breachers to start breaching with impunity in Indiana. However, Mrs. Nicholson at least merits a vote of thanks for distilling some of the dollars and cents buncombe out of heart balm.

SOCIALISM AND WAR

BY WILLIAM HARMON NORTON.

[Dr. Norton has been professor of geology at Cornell college for fifty-eight years and is widely known in the American scientific fraternity as author of one of the standard pioneer textbooks in his field, "Elements of Geology" (1905). But Dr. Norton is a classicist as well as scientist and was adjunct professor of Greek while pioneering in science fields. He is also a trusted spokesman among laymen of the Methodist Episcopal church.]

Of all the many promises which socialism makes a suffering world perhaps the least questioned is the promise of international peace. Men may doubt whether socialism can redistribute justly the nation's wealth, abolish poverty, extirpate the profit motive in industry and all self-regarding in human nature, but the Socialist promise of peace is seldom challenged. To many it is the most credible and attractive feature of the Socialist Utopia.

Yet at every crisis the pacifism of Socialists has failed. In 1870 Marx and Engels favored the German invasion of France. In 1913 the Socialist party in the German reichstag voted new military taxes for a large increase in the army, a thing forbidden in their platform. In 1914, as Maurice Hillquit tells the story, "The great bulk of the five and one-half million Socialists and Socialist voters of Germany and Austria spontaneously and simultaneously rallied to the support of their countries as soon as war had been declared." And since 1918 throughout western Europe Socialistic pacifism has been giving way under the rising spate of nationalism, so that the early break-up of the Second International is predicted.

Nor is Marxian pacifism entirely consistent. It holds the white banner of international peace aloft with one hand, but with the other it wields the sword of class war in the coming world revolution.

Is there a single major cause of war which socialism will remove, will indeed not exacerbate? Economic competition has been the cause of many wars, but if every farm in the world were collectivized and every loom were nationalized Canada and the Argentine would still compete in wheat and England and Japan in textiles. In the matter of oil Mr. Teagle of Standard Oil and Mr. Deterding of Dutch Shell would fade out of the picture, but in their stead we should see two powerful nations armed to the teeth, amenable to no law, with the arbitrament of battle their only accepted court of appeal, contending about something considered vital to their existence. Socialism closes the narrow door of individual competition, but it throws wide open the gate of the economic struggle between nations, war's favorite way in. For state socialism does not propose to destroy capital. It only takes capital from the individuals who earn it and gives it to the state. It takes the management of capital from successful men of business, sifted out by natural selection, and gives it over to politicians selected by political methods for political reasons. And if the diffuse individualistic capitalism of today "holds war as the clouds hold lightning" (to repeat that well worn Socialist cliché) what will be the electric potential of the collectivist capitalism of tomorrow concentrated under unified control and how frequent and violent then the thunderstorms of war!

There are other dogs of war, but what one of them can socialism leash except perhaps the prowling Moscow International? Certainly it cannot remove the geographic and sociologic causes of war, such as population pressure and the need of space in an overcrowded world. Germany feels this urge and Hitler covets the western plains of Russia. Japan feels it and covets Russia's eastern provinces. If these three nations were soviet republics the rising pressure of their ever growing populations would still make for war. Their economic and political interests and ambitions would still be diverse and perhaps irreconcilable. Each people would still be bound together by a common heritage of blood and land, of language, folk ways, and traditions, by a common love of country and common ambitions for its future. Perhaps no feature of the beautiful Socialist mirage dissolves more readily under an attentive gaze than the picture of the Japanese—or the German—worker listening to the tocsin of Marx, "Proletarians of all lands unite," and then in a world revolution straightway murdering his fellow countrymen whose welfare and illfare he must share and falling into the arms of the Slav, still his economic and political rival. Possibly in a world revolution the workers of the world may unite, as did the allies in the world war, but they will fall apart as soon under the segregating forces which have made them separate nations.

Patriotism or nationalism is another potent factor in war. Will the citizens of the Socialist state be less state conscious, less interested in its welfare, less devoted to its success, than are our democratic peoples? The capitalistic state is a rather loose affair which except at crises touches life at few points. The socialistic state is thoroughly organized and integrated, constantly touches life at many points, leaves few areas of life uninvaded and few liberties unrestricted. Suddenly or gradually government assumes control of finance, communications, natural resources, production, distribution, private business of all kinds, nationalizing even the professions. Burocracy invades every organ of the body social. The citizen becomes thoroughly state conscious. His interests are bound up with those of the state. His loyalties and devotions center in it. Every citizen is a stockholder in the business state, as directly interested in its profits as a member of the American Legion is interested in the payment of the bonus. That accursed profit motive which socialism is supposed to drive out with a pitchfork has come back with its familiar demons of acquisitiveness and greed, but far more dangerous than before. Socialist patriotism compounded of business interests and loyalties to class and country, thoroughly permeated with the profit motive, is likely to prove a highly explosive mixture. Under the intensified competitions of business states the popular outcry for war to prevent business losses or to secure business gains and places in the sun will be spontaneous and peremptory. In such emergencies no reliance can be placed on that embryonic organ, the collective conscience. Where individual business leaders would at least hesitate in urging war, an excited people would have as few scruples as a mob in burning a courthouse.

Moreover, when we idealize the socialistic state as the Coöperative Commonwealth, the Better World to Be Built with God, the Messianic Kingdom of Heaven to Be Set Up on Earth, we may easily catch the contagion of a missionary zeal as fiery as that of the early Moslems in their holy wars and of medieval crusading Christians. We can understand how the Children's Crusades were brought about when we read the socialistic resolutions which the boys and girls of certain churches are led to pass.

But when once we come under the iron rule of the socialistic state we shall be freed from a number of delusions. With returning sanity we shall see that socialism is neither Christian nor pacific. The Marxian world revolution with its proposed bloodshed and plunder will not make men peaceable and friendly.

And that milder socialism which hopes that the New American revolution will be bloodless has more respect for human life but no more respect for the rights of property. The seizure by political action of the property of other classes, although they may tamely submit, will not instill respect for the property of other nations, who assuredly will not tamely submit. "Human rights above property rights" is a popular and distinctive Socialist slogan. But when a man, a class, or a nation places its selfish human rights above the property rights of others we may expect violence and war. The danger spots of the world today are precisely those where certain nations in the name of their own claimed human rights to places in the sun are challenging the well established property rights of others. The capitalistic principle that property rights are major human rights and that the contract and the treaty are not mere scraps of paper when applied to international affairs certainly makes for peace.

War is not an incurable disease which must afflict civilization until an early death. But socialism, we are convinced, is not the cure. A world of Socialist nations would be a world of warring nations, with wars more easily provoked and more relentless than we have ever known, unless the nations adopted remedies equally available to the nations today.

How to Keep Well ◆◆◆

DEMENTIA PRECOX.

It is generally conceded that there are many devastating diseases as yet unconquered by medical science. Some of these are but little understood, as, for example, cancer and certain blood diseases. Only through research and intensive study can we hope for the solution of these problems.

One would like to shout from the housetops, so that all the world might hear, that nervous and mental diseases need investigation and research to a degree hitherto not attempted. Sad to relate, there are but few centers in our country where coördinated study is now being carried on. We have been contented (perhaps with some subconscious unhappiness) to house our mentally ill patients in private or public sanitaria, with the feeling that we have done our duty. Families unfortunate enough to be faced with a case of this character too often regard the affair as a "skeleton in the closet," to be hushed up and never mentioned.

Of the several types of mental disease, dementia precox (dementia that occurs prematurely) frequently presents a disheartening picture. These patients constitute from 70 to 80 per cent of those in hospitals for mental cases throughout the world. In addition there must be an enormous number who are either cared for in homes or who are caring for themselves on a subnormal or substandard basis.

Psychiatrists have classified the disease into four different types. They have also considered the personality groups that appear to be more inclined to the development of the condition. It should be understood that dementia precox is not a disease that attacks individuals of low intelligence primarily, as it occurs not infrequently in persons of exceptional memory who stand at the head of their classes in school, who may show a very early and intense interest in literature, music, and general culture.

As a rule the disease makes its appearance before the age of 25, and Prof. Barrett of the University of Michigan has estimated that in 78 per cent of the cases that have come under his wide observation slight manifestations of nervous weakness may be traced in one or more parents or grandparents.

It is difficult to describe the symptoms because practically all the words in the dictionary would be required. The onset in most cases is gradual: a loss of interest, lack of ambition, or indifference to plans for the future. Later there is a falling off in efficiency, inability to do assigned tasks thoroughly and completely, lack of attention. Sometimes there are hallucinations, as of hearing, vision, smell, or taste. Often there are ideas of persecution, of sin, or of undue personal exaltation.

Once the disease has been established treatment requires the guidance of a skilled psychiatrist in an attempt to readjust the individual to a normal attitude toward his associates, to his superiors, and to the tasks that he is called upon to perform. Fortunately many of these patients—20 to 30 per cent—can be adjusted to a responsible work level that will permit the earning of a livelihood. Every possible source of mental strain will need to be eliminated and it must be the obligation of the psychiatrist to supervise habits of sleep, recreation, diet, exercise, and rest.

The use of endocrine glands has been without effect, and no treatment other than that of an attempted adjustment has been proved to be of value.

We can at least cease creating and maintaining high tension situations that may have something to do with the onset of the disease. We can look upon mental illness as sanely as on physical illness, and we must take the attitude that it is curable if we can but find the cause.

BALDNESS.

S. W. L. writes: I have had baldness in circular patches on my head for fourteen years. My physician prescribed sulphur tablets, but I have had no results after two years' treatment.

REPLY.

Unfortunately there is nothing that is curative in alopecia areata. There is some deficiency in the circulation in certain parts of the scalp. The best remedy is direct sunlight. If this cannot be obtained ultraviolet is a good substitute. This is one of the conditions that has so far baffled medical science.

HICCUPS.

B. I. writes: The news stories concerning hiccup cases prompt me to ask what causes hiccup.

REPLY.

There is such a thing as epidemic hiccup. This is usually an inflammation of the diaphragm or of the phrenic nerve which supplies this structure. In certain types of infections hiccup is quite a bothersome symptom. Sometimes peritonitis is attended with hiccup. Many cases, however, are the result of hysteria. As soon as the cause of hysteria is removed—fear of examinations, disappointments, crossed purposes, etc.—hiccup usually abates. A recently mentioned case in the press probably was hysteria. Hysterical hiccup usually becomes much worse when the patient has sympathetic visitors. When the symptom abates during sleep organic disease may be disregarded as a rule.

PLEURA SENSITIVE.

E. E. writes: From July to October, 1933, I was in the hospital with pleurisy and broncho-pneumonia and had the pneumothorax treatment. The area covered by the infection is still very sensitive. Do you think the pleura should be normal by this time? There is a definite aching between the shoulders and at the base of the affected lung.

REPLY.

The lung should be approximately normal by this time. The pain between the shoulders may be caused by adhesions of the pleura, which, of course, will always be present. An X-ray plate will give you exact information as to the condition of the lungs.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—England's devaluation of the pound may be challenged in the courts as was President Roosevelt's repudiation of the gold clause in American contracts. This is disclosed by James Davenport Whelpley, noted American writer and economist resident in England and in close touch with British financial circles, who analyzes the situation as follows:

When England went off the gold standard the world of international finance was shocked. Inability to maintain a free gold market and the needs of commerce were the reasons for this step.

When the United States went off the gold standard, international finance received an even greater shock, for the United States had a plethora of gold and the move was one of policy and not of necessity. The constitutional right of congress to delegate to the President the power to adopt this policy was challenged in the highest courts.

In England when the gold standard was abandoned the people quietly and without protest accepted the term, "pound sterling" as meaning "English money," and discharged or accepted payment accordingly.

In the United States the obligation to pay gold coin when stated in the contract was annulled. In England the people continued to write their checks, their contracts, and their agreements as payable in "pounds sterling," and paid them with money in circulation. The whole question as to whether sterling means "English money" or whether it means "gold pounds" rests with the term "sterling." Does this mean gold or does it not?

Since 1817 in the time of King George III., the English pound sterling has been accepted as containing about 123 1-3 grains of gold and that has been the basis of all English coinage, trade and commerce. When the currency of other countries fluctuated after the great war, the English gold sovereign remained as a rock of Gibraltar in the troubled sea.

Then came the debacle and the "golden sovereign" disappeared. The pressure for gold and pitiless competition from other countries where labor was paid for with cheap money forced the hand of the British government to do something that any English merchant or banker of the past 100 years would have said was unthinkable—it repudiated one-half the value of English money as measured in gold.

The question is now "did England, when this was done, repudiate all obligations at home and abroad to pay pounds sterling when such obligations were unquestionably based upon the payment of golden sovereigns as the accepted equivalent of pounds sterling?"

The origin of the word sterling is in doubt. Some claim that it comes from Easterling corrupted to sterlynge, the term applied to the Germans who did business in England and whose money was of purest gold value. Others claim that as on these pieces of gold there was stamped the drawing of a starling that it is a corruption of the name of this bird. Whatever may be the origin of the word it always meant gold of a fine quality.

The weight and value of the gold piece varied prior to 1817. Since then and up to the present day there has never been a whisper as to the question of gold obligations where the word sterling was involved; it has been accepted as meaning English money.

Should the question be raised, however, and it soon may be, either through the law courts or in parliament as to the real meaning of sterling it would cause an even greater financial disturbance than did the arbitrary annulment of the gold clause in all American contracts, and there certainly appears to be excellent ground for a legal challenge as to the real meaning of the word sterling.

In the English law intention or belief does not count as against the written word, but if any one involved in a financial transaction as expressed in sterling had been asked what he was going to get he would have said golden pounds and his expectations would have been upheld by law and public opinion.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

NOT A CITIZEN.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 8.—[Friend of the People.]—Fifty years ago my parents emigrated to this country from Russia. On their arrival I was but four months old. My father applied for and received his first papers. Some years later he applied for his second papers but never received them. Am I an American citizen?
S. P.

Under the facts stated the writer is not a citizen, and, in order to become one, it will be necessary for him to take a declaration of intention [first paper] and when the same is at least two and not over seven years old apply for naturalization.

GOLD CERTIFICATES.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1933 I put two hundred dollars in a safe in a deposit vault, to use in case of emergency. I did not have any reason to use it until today. I now find I have several gold certificates in $10 and $20 denominations. Please tell me what to do with it. Can I deposit it in my account at a bank, or should I turn it in at some special place and will I receive in return the full value? J. A.

Take the matter up with the Federal Reserve bank.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LEGAL SERVICES.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I hired a lawyer three years ago to fight a case for me, giving him money with which to start action. I was promised success, but he stalled me off for two years and the third year I didn't hear a word from him [he is in Colorado]. I wrote him regularly, but had no response. Three months ago he wrote asking me if I was still interested in proceeding with the case, if not he would refund my money. I wrote three letters since then asking him to refund my money and have had no answer. 1. How can I make him refund my money? 2. Is he entitled to keep any part of my money for fees? 3. Will it cost much to make him refund it? 4. Will the Legal Aid society take care of it for me? J. U.

1. We see no way to force matters without the employment of another attorney. The advisability of this course would depend on the amount involved.

2. We would incline to the opinion that your damages arising out of his delay would exceed the value of this service, but this is a question of fact.

3. It probably will.

4. Depends on whether you have the means to employ an attorney. The best way to find out what the Legal Aid bureau will do is to get in touch with them.

PROF. KEYNES DEFENDED.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Last Sunday you published an article from the Independent in London entitled "Maynard Keynes and America." I would like to point out two distinct impressions which an unwary reader could draw which are not supported by the facts.

1. The article cites the shrinkage in investments of the Independent Investment company from 444,903 pounds sterling to a market value [presumably Dec. 31, 1933] of 329,505 pounds sterling as an example of Mr. Keynes' failure as a practical economist, since he was associated directly with the management of these funds. The fact of the matter is that this shrinkage of approximately 25 per cent is a remarkable record equaled by few, if any, other British investment trusts and by no investment trust formed in this country prior to 1929. The history of most investment funds in this country, including those managed by many of our largest trust companies, shows a shrinkage in the last collapse in excess of 50 per cent. Thus, this record, viewed as a whole, shows Mr. Keynes to be an extraordinarily adroit manager of funds rather than the failure indicated by your article.

2. The article also sets forth the investment methods in the prospectus of this same Independent Investment company, the last sentence being:

> Similar periodic changes also take place in the relative values of money on the one hand and of goods and real property on the other, which are reflected in the relative values of bonds and of shares representing, as these do, respectively, money claims and property, so that here also the same principle of changing from one class to another at appropriate times can be applied.

Of this your correspondent writes:

> This is a typical specimen of theoretical twaddle, impressive enough when delivered in front of the blackboard to admiring young ladies in the economics classroom, but lacking the slenderest connection with the world of practical affairs.

Now I happen to have been a close student of economics and especially investment management for the last 15 years. I think your readers should know not only that the above is not economic twaddle, but that it is the soundest kind of modern investment technique, applied not only by investment trust managers but by investment officials in banks and institutions of every sort. In fact, especially in a period of approaching inflation, such changes between classes of investments to appropriate times is the only way of conserving capital invested in bonds and stocks.

Whether Mr. Keynes and Mr. Roosevelt are right in believing that this country can be lifted from present depressed conditions by public expenditure on a large scale is a thing obviously open to discussion and to serious differences by reasonable men. But such of that discussion which is given the dignity of print on your editorial page should be supported by facts.

OLD AGE INSURANCE FOR AUTOS.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—Congress should make a law to force all car manufacturers to recall all cars 8 or 10 years old. The mechanism in an old car cannot be trusted for safe driving. The car manufacturers would have to pay compensation to the car owner when the car is turned in, which probably would go in a new car. This would help business conditions.

New York, Feb. 10.—Today in New York I tried to insert a classified advertisment in the "Help Wanted—Female" columns, and one line read as follows: "Westerners preferred; no New Yorkers considered." PROGRESS IN DEMOLITION.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Considering the amount of publicity that has appeared in THE TRIBUNE and other papers regarding the demolition program that has gone on in Chicago during the last year, it is surprising and disappointing to those of us who have been active in this work to learn that there are some people, like your correspondent, "Waiting," in yesterday's column, who still have neither heard of nor seen our work.

May I briefly state here that since last June the state housing board, and more recently the mayor's committee on substandard housing under the personal direction of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen of the health department, has razed 1,375 buildings with the aid of approximately 1,650 relief workers. In addition, some 500 have been repaired as a result of the combined efforts of the city hall and the state board.

If there are many more like "Waiting" who are unaware of this work they may obtain copies of a booklet just published by the state housing board containing figures and maps showing the accomplishments in six months' time.

The state housing board is withdrawing from this work on April 1, but the mayor's committee will carry on the efforts to eliminate slums and unsightly buildings from Chicago.

ALFRED K. STERN.
Chairman, Illinois State Housing Board.

BUILDING WAGES.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Not a day goes by that some one does not put forth his pet idea as to how to end the depression and put men back to work. Last June the administration passed the national housing act and set up a program that if really pushed by the building industry and the public would soon have old man depression licked.

Now, one of the things which is retarding this movement here in Chicago is the so-called high rate of journeymen's wages—i. e., the wage which is set by the unions. We in the building industry know that the workmen are not being paid union wages, yet the public believes that they are. Therefore, when a home owner is approached and asked to do some needed repairs on his house and has the better housing loan plan put before him, he compares in his mind his wage per hour with the so-called union wages and comes to the conclusion that he cannot afford to have work done now. I am not saying that the union wages are out of line with decent living, but we all know that these are hard times for the building tradesman with little or no work going on.

My suggestion is that the labor unions consider this emergency and publicly reduce the rate of wages temporarily, say for six or eight months, and get the people to take advantage of this bargain, put men to work, and make the better housing program in Chicago a huge success. I know that this plan has objections, but I have talked with many union members these last few days and every one has agreed that he believes that it would be really a step in the right direction. A small wage rate with a chance to work certainly is to be preferred to a large wage rate with no chance to work.

THE MACON DISASTER.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Since 1912 the United States has been unfortunate in the utilization of its lighter than air machines. To me it has been a constant source of mystification. We are the only country in the world using the noninflammable gas, helium, and yet all or the majority of our dirigibles have met with disaster. It is my contention that Herr Hugo von Eckener should be commended for his excellent handling of the huge Graf Zeppelin. This ship is filled with hydrogen, a very combustible gas, and yet it has suffered no serious accident. It is my humble opinion that the United States would do much better to expend the huge sums of money spent on airships for something more useful to the nation.

MEDICAL CHIEFS CONDEMN 'SICK INSURANCE' PLAN

Counter Proposal Offered by Association.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

The house of delegates of the American Medical association, composed of the elected representatives of nearly 100,000 physicians in the United States, approved unanimously yesterday a resolution condemning those portions of President Roosevelt's social security program which deal with medical care.

Approval of the report, drafted by a reference committee headed by Dr. Harry H. Wilson of Los Angeles, marked the conclusion of a two day special session at the Palmer house. It was the first time the body has been called in special session since the United States entered the world war.

The report condemned any form of compulsory sickness insurance or any attempt by laymen to dictate the manner in which medical service is to be rendered, and found the Roosevelt administration's social security program guilty of violating those two precepts. It was not, however, entirely derogatory.

Assails "Cure-All" Theory.

Asserting that "there is no model plan which is a cure-all for the social ills, any more than there is a panacea for the physical ills," it recommended that the association's bureau of medical economics present at the annual convention in June skeleton plans for improving medical service and enabling patients to meet medical costs in all of the various types of communities in the United States.

"The primary considerations of the physicians constituting the American Medical association," states the report, "are the welfare of the people, the preservation of their health and their care in sickness, the advancement of medical science, the improvement of medical care, and the provision of adequate medical service to all the people. These physicians are the only body in the United States qualified by experience and training to guide and suitably control plans for the provision of medical care.

"The committee reiterates the fact that there is no model plan which is a cure-all for the social ills, any more than there is a panacea for the physical ills which affect mankind. There are now more than 150 plans for medical service undergoing study and trial in various communities in the United States.

Ready to Advise Societies.

"Your bureau of medical economics has studied these plans and is now ready and willing to advise medical societies in the creation and operation of such plans. The plans developed by the bureau will serve the people of the community in the prevention of disease, the maintenance of health, and with curative care in illness.

"They must at the same time meet the apparent economic factors and protect the public welfare by safeguarding to the medical profession the functions of control of medical standards and the continued advancement of medical education requirements. They must not destroy the initiative which is vital to the highest type of medical service. In the establishment of all such plans . . . the house of delegates would again emphasize particularly the necessity for separate provision for hospital facilities and the physician's services."

In those paragraphs the spokesmen for organized medicine sketched the battlefront on which they intend to fight any proposals for national, compulsory health insurance, control of medical service by laymen and socialized [governmental] medicine.

Offer Counter Proposal.

As an alternative they offer voluntary plans, controled by physicians in the communities in which they originate, and adapted to the needs of those communities with a flexibility impossible in a national plan.

After reaffirming "its opposition to all forms of compulsory sickness insurance," the report paid a qualified compliment to the President's committee on economic security which has drawn up an 11-point program broadly defining the essentials of sickness insurance, noting that it had recognized "some of the fundamental considerations" for proper medical service long advocated by the A. M. A.

"However," the report continued, "so many inconsistencies and incompatibilities are apparent in the report of the President's committee thus far presented, that many more facts and details are necessary for a proper consideration."

Dissects Wagner Bill.

The report then turned its fire on the Wagner bill, which in addition to the President's program for unemployment insurance and old age pensions, provides $4,000,000 annually in federal subsidies for maternity and infant welfare and state public health work. The report stated:

"The house of delegates recognizes the necessity under conditions of emergency for federal aid in meeting basic needs of the indigent; it deprecates, however, any provision whereby federal subsidies for medical services are administered and controled by laymen.

"While the desirability of adequate medical service for crippled children and for the preservation of child and maternal health is beyond question, the house of delegates deplores and protests those sections of the Wagner bill which places in the children's bureau of the department of labor the responsibility for administration of funds for these purposes.

"The house of delegates condemns as pernicious that section of the Wagner bill which creates a social insurance board without specification of the character of its personnel to administer functions essentially medical in character and demanding technical knowledge not available to those without medical training."

The report denounced the so-called Epstein bill for compulsory health insurance, for which the American Association for Social Security is lobbying in a number of state legislatures. The bill was condemned as "a vicious, deceptive, dangerous and demoralizing measure . . . introducing such hazardous principles as multiple taxation, inordinate costs, extravagant administration and an inevitable trend toward social and financial bankruptcy."

The church is facing an unprecedented world crisis, Dr. John R. Mott, president of the International Missionary council, said yesterday in an address at the Union League club.

Dr. Mott was introduced to 250 national committeemen of the laymen's missionary movement as "the outstanding missionary statesman among the laymen of today." He gave his views on the world outlook for Christianity, basing his address on forty-five years of travel in sixty-seven countries.

"Outstanding among the dangers," he declared, "is the Marxian aphorism 'Religion is an opiate of the people,' promulgated from soviet Russia."

CHICAGO DENTAL SOCIETY SESSION TO DRAW 10,000

Delegates Gather for the Opening Tomorrow.

The Chicago Dental society will open its seventy-first annual convention at the Stevens hotel tomorrow with more than 10,000 physicians, dentists, scientists, technicians, and college representatives in attendance. Delegates will include 1,500 teachers. The Chicago society is the only dental or medical group in the United States which draws larger representation than its parent body.

Outstanding in the four day program are a conference on dental relief under the Federal Emergency Relief administration, and an address on Tuesday evening by Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture and brain truster in the national administration. Dr. Tugwell's paper, "The Problem of Social Insecurity," will share honors with the Tuesday morning paper of Dr. Edward J. Ryan of Evanston.

Health Insurance View.

Dr. Ryan will present an analysis based on a national poll of dentists and will give the dental view on "The Attitude of the Dental Profession on Health Insurance." Particular attention is being given Dr. Ryan's study in relation to the attitude of the medical profession now being considered by the house of delegates of the American Medical association.

Nine scientific sections of the convention will be in session simultaneously during the convention. Exhibits prepared by the federal bureau of standards, the Mayo clinic of Rochester, Minn., the American Society for the Control of Cancer, the American Dental association, and a dozen universities will be set up. Table clinics will be held by technicians from 40 states.

The society will present such speakers as Dr. John T. Hanks, dental adviser to the FERA; Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the Chicago board of health; Dr. Willis J. Bray, chairman of the public service committee of the society; William H. Bogan, superintendent of schools, and Dr. C. J. Hollister, former director of the department of health of Pennsylvania.

Study New Developments.

Particular attention will be paid during the session to new developments during the year, medicine in relation to dentistry, and a general public and industrial dental program.

Groups that will meet in conjunction with the society include the Chicago Club of Women Dentists, the Chicago Dental Assistants' association, the Illinois State Oral Hygienist association, Northwestern Dental School Alumni association, University of Illinois college of dentistry, and several dental fraternities.

BLOCKS EXPERT TESTIMONY IN AID OF KENNAMER

State Keeps Psychiatrist from Answering.

Pawnee, Okla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—State's attorneys succeeded today in blocking expert testimony that 19 year old Phil Kennamer was insane when he killed John F. Correll Jr., 23, at Tulsa on the stormy night of last Thanksgiving.

Dr. Karl A. Menninger, Topeka, Kas., psychiatrist, qualified as an expert on mental ills. Then he listened for 40 minutes to a summary of the strange life, words, and deeds, of the federal judge's son, ending with the question:

"Now doctor, taking these facts into consideration in addition to your own information, would you say the defendant was rational or irrational?"

Court Recesses for 3 Hours.

Before the alienist could say "Yes" or "No," J. Berry King, former state's attorney general, objected. He argued there was much in the involved hypothetical question, propounded by Defense Attorney A. Flint Moss, which should be stricken. Other matters, such as Kennamer's drinking, should be included, he added.

Court recessed. For three hours opposing counsel dissected and revised the question. Judge Thurman Hurst reserved decision over the week-end.

Upon reopening of court, Charles W. Mason, who was chief justice of the Oklahoma Supreme court when the defendant's father, Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer of Tulsa, was a member, testified briefly he believed Phil was irrational and admitted on cross-examination that "probably" he wouldn't have appeared to testify if young Kennamer "hadn't killed this boy."

Kennamer Admits Slaying.

Kennamer, admitting the slaying, claims he shot Gorrell in self-defense after frustrating an extortion plot he claims Gorrell had aimed at 19 year old Virginia Wilcox, heiress to an oil fortune. His attorneys, however, contend he temporarily was insane.

Judge Mason testified to three acts of irrationality on the part of young Kennamer.

That he once remarked while pacing Judge Mason's 16th floor office that "It would be a swell place to commit suicide. Just jump out head first."

That he wanted a job on an Oklahoma City newspaper, but wanted to start as editor.

Wanted to Rule Country.

That he told Judge Mason he wanted to be a flyer in a Central American revolution and thought he could rule the country as its dictator.

Under cross-examination by W. F. Gilmer Jr., assistant county prosecutor, Judge Mason said he did not consider it irrational for a boy to want adventure in foreign lands nor to own a large newspaper. Both, he said, he considered normal impulses.

Q.—You wanted to have adventure and fly yourself, didn't you? A.—Yes, and I did so—in 1917.

Finally, Gilmer demanded:

"If you thought this boy hadn't killed that boy, you probably never would have testified he was crazy, would you?"

The witness squirmed.

"That is true. I would not have testified in this way under other circumstances."

NO ALIMONY FOR 'COUNTERPART' OF FEMALE SPIDER

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Remarking that the female spider which devours its husband "is not without its human counterpart," Supreme Court Justice Wenzel, in Brooklyn today, denied alimony and counsel fees to Mrs. Sonia Radow, pending trial of her suit for a separation from Paul Radow, proprietor of a brass foundry.

"It is a well known fact that after their feast of love, the female spider partakes of a more substantial meal, devouring her husband," Justice Wenzel said.

"The spider is not without its human counterpart. The affidavits of this defendant ring true. This wife, having consumed the substance of her husband, finds her appetite unappeased and takes this method in attempt to secure the last few morsels remaining to them. He gave her all he said; she cannot cry as we hear so many justly do: 'I gave him the best years of my life.'

"She has been fortunate. She has gained much and lost nothing. Motion for alimony and counsel fees is denied."

STATE TO ASK CONTINUANCE IN INSULL'S CASE

A continuance will probably be sought tomorrow morning in the embezzlement case against Samuel Insull, former utility magnate, which is scheduled for trial before Judge Cornelius J. Harrington in the Criminal court. First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley said yesterday a continuance would be asked because of the crowded court docket and the necessity of disposing of a number of smaller cases waiting trial.

The case involves Insull's alleged embezzlement of $63,000 from the Middle West Utilities company. The outcome of this trial will determine further prosecution of Insull and his brother, Martin, Mr. Crowley said. Should it result in an acquittal, as have three other trials involving the Insulls or their associates, the prosecution probably will be dropped, he said.

SARAH MACKEY, EARLY CHICAGO RESIDENT, DIES

89 Years Old; Brought Here by Parents in '49.

Mrs. Sarah Peters Mackey, 89 years old, one of the city's oldest settlers, died yesterday in her home at 1409 Summerdale avenue. She had been in good health until last Tuesday. Heart disease caused her death.

Mrs. Mackey was the widow of B. Palmer Mackey, a nephew of the late Potter Palmer. She is survived by two daughters and two sons, all of Chicago. They are Miss Ella M. Mackey, Mrs. W. Irving Clark, W. Irving Mackey, and William P. Mackey.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the residence. Burial will be in the family plot in Rosehill cemetery.

Brought to Chicago as Child.

Reminiscences of early Chicago, of civil war days and the havoc and excitement of the great Chicago fire of 1871, which Mrs. Mackey delighted in retelling, were recalled yesterday by her relatives.

Mrs. Mackey, then Sarah Peters, was brought here as a child, 3 years old, in 1849, when Chicago was only a thriving young town. She lost both her parents in the cholera epidemic in Chicago that year. Her father and mother had come to America from Stockholm, Sweden, and for a time had lived in New York state, where Sarah was born.

On March 21, 1861, she was married to Mr. Mackey in the residence of Mrs. M. J. Tucker, which then was on Michigan avenue, a short distance south of Fort Dearborn. That night a newly recruited regiment, led by Col. George Sturgis, marched to the home of the newlyweds and serenaded them.

Home on Site of Coliseum.

The young couple lived for many years in what is now the loop area. Their home was on the site of the Coliseum at the time of the Chicago fire.

Her husband, with Marshall Field and Levi Leiter, was a clerk in Potter Palmer's department store on State street. When the latter sold out, Mr. Field and Mr. Leiter took over the dry goods departments, while Mr. Mackey took over the carpet, upholstery, and lace curtain units. Mr. Mackey's store, on State street near Adams street, was burned down in the fire of 1871, but only after much of the merchandise was carted away to safety when it was apparent the store was doomed.

Tomorrow all Belgium will observe the day in commemoration of its heroic soldier king, who met his death while pursuing his favorite sport of mountain climbing.

With only three dissenting votes, the chamber of deputies today ratified a bill establishing a national memorial library at Brussels in honor of Albert.

MILK BARGAINING POINTS TO END OF AAA PRICE SETUP

Farmers and Dealers Talk Individual Contracts.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

A breakdown in the Agricultural Adjustment administration's local milk license plan was indicated here yesterday when it became known that the Pure Milk association, coöperative bargaining agency for 18,000 dairy farmer members, is quietly negotiating with a group of representative distributors for individual contracts between producers and dealers.

The outcome of meetings held during the last few days between producers and distributors is expected to determine the fate of the federal license under which milk has been sold for several months. A weakening of the AAA program was indicated a few weeks ago when producers and distributors agreed among themselves to increase the price of milk from $2 a hundred pounds [4.30 cents a quart] to $2.20 a hundred [4.7 cents a quart].

Price Fixing in U. S. Hands.

Under the federal license plan governmental officials have the authority to fix the price paid to farmers, but it was not until after dealers had agreed to pay the increase of 20 cents a hundred [.43 of a cent a quart] for class 1 milk delivered in January that AAA made the official monthly farm price announcement.

The effect of the contracts now being discussed by representatives of producers and dealers would be to render federal supervision unnecessary and leave the farmers' coöperative and the distributors practically in control of Chicago milk market.

Representatives of dealers' groups yesterday indicated that distributors welcomed the opportunity to negotiate directly with farmers or their authorized representatives.

Dealers Oppose Outside Control.

It was pointed out that as far as dealers are concerned they had never been in favor of outside control of the Chicago milk market. They have taken the attitude, however, that the matter rests with the farmers as to whether they wish the federal government or any other outsiders to control their market.

Since farmers and distributors practically took the matter in their own hands in determining what the January farm milk price would be, submitting the agreed price to AAA officials for routine approval, reports yesterday indicated that the next move likely would be to submit a formal request to Washington for the termination of the present federal supervisory system.

BARE MACARTHUR SENATE ATTACK ON SMALL ARMY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staf, was disclosed today to feel that the shortage of officers and men in the army had brought about a condition where "most of our garrisons, most of our commands, are practically nothing but caretaking establishments."

In testimony before a senate military committee on the administration's army promotion bill, made public today, the general said:

"We would find difficulty in throwing together any fighting elements of substantial size."

Along with the testimony was made public a letter from Secretary Dern saying the Sheppard bill to accelerate the promotion of every officer below the grade of colonel had the approval of President Roosevelt.

MacArthur said the "minimum which would enable the regular army to perform its peace time training mission, to have a small nucleus to protect us during the mobilization, and to act as a force immediately available in a crisis, would be 14,000 officers and 165,000 enlisted men, which is an increase of 2,000 officers and 46,500 enlisted men over what we have now."

'XERXES,' HANDEL REVIVAL, BRINGS URBANE DELIGHT

Charming Opera to Be Repeated Tonight.

"XERXES, OR THE AMOROUS KING."

A pleasant opera in three acts by George Frideric Handel, given for the first time in Chicago by the University of Chicago chorus and Orchesis in Mandel hall, Saturday, Feb. 16.

THE CAST.

Xerxes, King of Persia....Stanley Morner
Prince Arsamena, his brother..........
....................Joseph Wilson Haden
Ariodat, general of the Persian armies
......................Lawrence Goodnow
Romilda } his { Ruth Emery Riddle
Atalanta } daughters { Janet Fairbank
Amastris, betrothed of Xerxes.........
......................Alice Mary Baenziger
Elviro, Arsamena's servant.............
......................Winfred Stracke
Cecil Michener Smith, Conductor.
Thornton Wilder, Stage Director.
Marian Van Tuyl, Director of the Dances.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

If the University of Chicago continues to pursue the course it has followed for the last two seasons there is some likelihood that it will acquire the renown of possessing the only progressive operatic organization in this part of the country. Last season its choral and dance organizations put on Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas," following it last night—and with a repetition scheduled for tonight—of "Xerxes, or the Amorous King."

These, ancient operas though they may be, were first presentations for Chicago. Not only that, they were entertaining operas, presented with style, manner, and high spirit. This was particularly the case with "Xerxes," which was about as amusing a performance as several seasons have revealed.

An Appropriate Observance.

This year is the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Handel's birth. It was a fine thing to celebrate the occasion this way, to let the public learn that the famous "Largo," sung by Xerxes, is the first solo in this opera, and that there is a long succession of other tunes that need only a little repetition to be popular also. There was one of sentimental import splendidly sung by Miss Baenziger; a light, florid one, also well sung by Miss Fairbank; a comic song that was the hit of the evening by Mr. Stracke, and so on.

Thornton Wilder, who rewrote the translation of the libretto and staged the work, says that it has a complicated and preposterous plot, but only a few degrees worse than most operatic plots. Not being able to simplify it as he would have perhaps liked, he devoted himself to making a stylized production.

Frankly Anachronistic.

There is nothing in the least historically accurate about it. Xerxes, the Persian king, is a young gentleman of the eighteenth century in jabot, lace cuffs, knickerbockers, and long stockings. Incidentally, Mr. Morner, who sang the part, has a striking talent, with looks, voice, and personality well marked, needing only to get final control of his top voice.

Amastris indicates her life as a warrior by wearing a helmet on top of another eighteenth century costume. And with stylization of performance went the most intense earnestness of demeanor, which made it all the more effective.

Dancers Complete Picture.

Miss Van Tuyl's dance groups were trained in stiff kneed, angular evolutions, well done in themselves and fitting accurately into the general scheme. The orchestra, strings, wood winds, and piano were responsive and in much better playing form than last year.

A trip out to Mandel hall is advised for this evening. For "Xerxes" is not announced for further performances, though it might well be.

Weekly Review of the Experimental Farm

By Bob Becker

Amused and Amazed!

SILVER VICTOR, the big white bull here on the experimental farm, has developed into a trained animal during the last week, much to the amusement and amazement of everybody on the farm. The other day Herman Guenther looked out into his yard and saw the bull and ten hefers standing in the barnyard when they should have been south of the road in a field. Nobody had let the animals out of the field, yet there they were, waiting for their evening meal.

The next day the boys solved the mystery. They saw the bull come up the field to the gate around 4 o'clock. He was alone at the time. Then they saw the animal start scratching his head against the gate. Before he finished his calisthenics and his grooming he had opened the gate. By this time the hefers had joined him. Slowly Silver Victor marched his squad across the road and into the barnyard to look around for somebody to hand out a little food.

Clarence Thurow, farm manager, said yesterday that if Silver keeps this up it will be necessary to change the catch on the gate.

Last week was hard going for the boys on the farm on account of the rainy weather and the mud. Louis Thurow found that his old overshoes [without buckles] pulled off his feet when he waded in the mud around the barnyard, so he had to go to town and buy a new pair. Everybody on the place has been obliged to wear some kind of rubber footgear while doing chores.

Clarence remarked yesterday that it had been a long time since he had seen as much water on the farm as the thaw brought last week. Rob Roy creek on the north side of the river is a raging little torrent. Down in the pasture there are big pools of snow water standing in the low places. In fact, these low fields are so wet and so soft that all stock is being kept out of them.

Now that 55 more Hereford steers have been sold [the last of the group of 117 finished on the farm] all the attention and interest that has been centered on that bunch has been transferred to the 37 yearling Herefords.

Clarence shipped the 55 steers during a steady, active market and apparently is well pleased with the return on them. [Details of this sale will be given by Frank Ridgway tomorrow.]

The 37 yearlings don't have to worry about feed between now and the time pasture is ready. There is about 14 feet of silage left in the big 80 foot silo built last year, and two more silos are as yet unopened. The 37 young steers get corn, silage, alfalfa, and some soy beans every day.

Twin lambs, the first to arrive this season on THE TRIBUNE auxiliary farm near Wheaton, had John Rawlings running around excitedly yesterday morning. The lambs are Oxfords and are fat and healthy little fellows.

When Rawlings went out early, as usual, to the sheepfold to do the feeding he looked around in the quarters of the Oxford sheep and saw two frisky lambs up and walking around. He had every reason to be surprised because he has been expecting the first 1935 lambs to arrive March 1. During the last week preparations have been going ahead to get the sheepfold ready for the new families. The big tent which is put up every year so that the ewes will have plenty of room for their offspring probably will be erected around the first of March.

While these preparations go ahead Rameses and the other rams continue to grow their "spring overcoats," fill their stomachs with food, and put on weight. They look fine now that their wool is growing.

GIRL'S OPERATION FOR UPSIDE DOWN STOMACH NEARS

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Hope that faded yesterday blossomed anew today in the eyes of Alyce Jane McHenry, 10, of Omaha, who is going eastward tonight on a journey that will end in a serious operation.

Alyce Jane is going to Fall River, Mass., where Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale will perform a delicate operation designed to correct a ruptured diaphragm that has resulted in her intestines crowding upward into the heart and lung space and pulling the stomach into an upside down position.

Plans for her departure appeared wrecked last night when it was learned Dr. Truesdale, a specialist in operations to correct ailments such as Alyce Jane's, was in the East Indies. Today, however, word was received from Dr. Truesdale's hospital at Fall River for the girl to come on. And the operation likely will be performed in about two weeks.

BODY OF MISSING OHIO GIRL, 3, IS FOUND ON FARM

Believed Kidnaped Last November.

Jefferson, O., Feb. 16.—Special.]—The body of 3 year old Rita Margaret Lent, whose disappearance last November was attributed to kidnaping, was found today on a farm less than two miles from her home. The child had been the object of a nation-wide search.

A neighbor boy, Everett Cosnell, discovered the body lying in a lane on the farm of Carl Hall, about 15 miles from here. The body was about forty rods from the farm buildings.

The child was last seen alive leaving the farmyard of her mother. She was accompanied by a police dog. A short time after her departure, neighbors saw her walking on a road near her home.

Scores of men searched the woods and marshlands in the vicinity of her home during the weeks she was missing, but could find no clews to her whereabouts. Deputy Sherif R. M. Blanche, who headed the search, said he believed the girl had been kidnaped.

Her father, Darrell Lent, estranged from his wife, was among the several persons questioned in the mystery, but he declared he knew nothing of his daughter's disappearance.

Conneaut officials said the child's mother, Mrs. Olive Lent, 34, had made several attempts to give Rita away, and allegedly made the statement that her husband "would never get the baby."

It was said that Mrs. Lent once left Rita in a Conneaut police station and another time placed her on the judge's and asked him to take her. There are five other children in the Lent family.

Rita was born in Chicago after her parents had separated.

The Women's Christian Temperance union, preparing to observe the 37th anniversary of the death of its founder, Frances Willard, will launch today a five year program designed to forward the organization's ideals, it was announced yesterday by the national president, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith. The five year program will be concluded Sept. 28, 1939, on the 100th birthday anniversary of the temperance leader.

The long time program, Mrs. Smith said, will have five major goals: The deepening of spiritual life, a renewed campaign against liquor, promotion of character building, increased appreciation of citizenship, and furtherance of peace.

Mr. Green said yesterday Mr. Hurley would act as liaison officer between the government and the state's attorney's offices, especially in cases where there may be a conflict in jurisdictions due to some of the new federal statutes.

Mr. Hurley, who has been an assistant to State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney since Mr. Courtney assumed office in 1932, is 34 years old and lives with his wife and two small sons at 1101 Pratt boulevard. He is a graduate of the Notre Dame law school.

FOUR ARE HUNTED IN DEATH OF 2 BY KNOCKOUT DROPS

The police yesterday were searching for two women and two men in connection with the deaths of William Pyper and David Layton, who died last Sunday from an overdose of "knockout drops" administered while the victims were drinking in downtown cafés. The women are known as Shirley and Pat and are said to frequent loop taverns. The men being sought are unidentified.

The women are believed to be the two who were seen with Layton in the Morrison hotel bar shortly before his body was found in a passageway at 624 South Sangamon street. Layton, who was 55 years old, lived at 5352 Kenmore avenue. Pyper, who was 49 years old and lived at 6248 South Kedzie avenue, was last seen with two men drinking at the Subway café, 509 North Wabash avenue. Both men had been robbed.

The police continued to question Miss Winifred Caldwell, 23 years old, and Miss Irene North, 21 years old, both of 6220 Woodlawn avenue, hostesses at the Crown café, 503 North Clark street. Both had been arrested and placed on probation recently after one of their male drinking companions had been found drugged in a loop hotel.

U. S. APPROVES CALUMET PLAN TO SAVE MILLION

Would Straighten River and End Torrence Detour.

Mayor Kelly was informed yesterday that the federal government has approved his plan for saving Chicago taxpayers $1,000,000 by digging a new channel through which the Calumet river would flow to its juncture with the Little Calumet river.

The new channel would shift the confluence of the Calumet and Little Calumet rivers near 138th street from the east to the west side of Torrence avenue. It would eliminate the necessity for the city's building a new bridge at a cost of $1,000,000 to replace the old pontoon bridge crossing the Calumet river in Torrence avenue at 134th street.

Many Advantages to Trafic.

Besides the saving to taxpayers, motorists and navigators would benefit from construction of the new channel. Nevigation will be easier through the straightened course of the Calumet river, the mayor said, and for motor trafic there would be eliminated the present detour into Hoxie avenue between 134th and 138th streets in which there are several sharp turns.

The new channel, about a mile in length, would start just south of 130th street at a distance 3,280 feet west of Torrence avenue. The beginning would be approximately where Clyde avenue would strike the river if Clyde were continued northward. The new channel would connect with the Little Calumet river near 138th street at a point just west of Torrence. The channel would be 300 feet wide at the bottom, with a water surface of 350 feet, and would have a depth of 12½ feet.

"The federal government will dig the new channel," said Commissioner of Public Works Oscar Hewitt, who worked on the plan for the mayor. "The material excavated will be used to fill the channel to be abandoned between where the new course begins and a point east of Torrence avenue 1,000 feet south of 134th street.

Would Improve Torrence Avenue.

"With this river straightening project completed Torrence avenue will be improved throughout as a major highway entrance to Chicago. It is such now south to 130th street with the exception of a bridge near 125th street. The mayor has approved the appropriation of $800,000 from the city's share of the gasoline tax, and an application for a federal grant of $300,000 to construct a new bridge there.

"Work on that bridge is ready to start within 24 hours after the state and federal governments give their approval."

From its allotment of motor fuel taxes, the county has agreed to pave Torrence avenue between 130th and 138th streets, and to erect a new bridge in Torrence avenue across the Little Calumet river at 138th street. This will be a fixed span with a clearance of 25 feet.

Half Million Saving to County.

The county had planned to improve a detour for Torrence avenue between 134th and 138th streets. By straightening the course of the Calumet river, thus permitting the continuation of Torrence avenue between those two streets, the county will save, according to reports, in the neighborhood of $500,000.

NEW HENROTIN HOSPITAL OPENED AT FORMAL TEA

The new $600,000 Henrotin Polyclinic hospital at Oak and La Salle streets was opened formally yesterday afternoon as hundreds of invited guests attended a reception and tea given by the board of trustees in the trustees' room and then inspected the rooms and equipment of the 105 bed institution.

Tomorrow morning patients in the old hospital building, adjacent to the new, will be moved in, and later this week demolition of the vacated building will start.

In the receiving line yesterday were Mrs. John A. Graham, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the reception; Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze, Mrs. George M. Seaman, and Mrs. Channing W. Barrett. Mrs. George F. Fiske, Mrs. Edward W. Mosser, Mrs. George Mahoney, and Mrs. Eugene F. McDonald Jr. presided at the tea following the reception.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the Delta Tau Delta fraternity will be in charge of ceremonies dedicating the Frank A. Wieland memorial operating room.

U. S. Appeal Court Spurns Insull Collusion Charge

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals denied yesterday a petition for a rehearing on its recent decision upholding the ruling of Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley that there was no collusion in connection with the filing of the receivership petition against the Middle West Utilities company, the main Insull holding concern. Former Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson, who preferred the charges of collusion, said he would carry the appeal to the United States Supreme court for a review of the lower court's decision. Ettelson charged that the receivership petition was filed collusively by Samuel Insull Sr., his attorneys, and certain New York and Chicago banks.

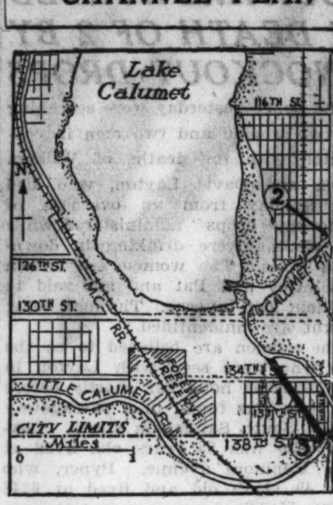
Slap on the Wrist Fails to Win Wife a Divorce

A slap on the wrist is no grounds for divorce, Superior Judge Francis B. Allegretti ruled yesterday in denying a divorce to Mrs. Lucille P. Malia, 2418 North Parkside avenue. She had sought an uncontested divorce from her husband, Jerome, on testimony that he often slapped her. "Such a slap does not constitute cruelty," said Judge Allegretti. "Even a biff now and then isn't real cruelty. Such things happen in the ordinary happy marriage.

GIVES BEAUTY A LIFT; LOSES $115.

Arthur Richman, 6722 North Maplewood avenue, reported to the police yesterday that after he had given a lift on North Michigan avenue to "a beautiful blond" hitch-hiker he missed his wallet containing $115.

CHANNEL PLAN



(1) Proposed new channel joining Calumet and Little Calumet rivers. (2) Location of proposed new Torrence avenue bridge. (3) Point at which county will build new span over Little Calumet.

URGES CREATION OF CITY AIRPORT PLANNING BOARD

Ald. Grealis Seeks Improvements.

Creation of a civic commission to draft a long term plan for the development of Chicago aviation facilities and to propose a method for bringing an airport close to the loop will be sought in a resolution which Ald. John J. Grealis [44th] will introduce at the next meeting of the city council on Feb. 27.

"The appointment of such a commission by Mayor Kelly will go a long way toward ending the present tieup in Chicago aviation progress," said Grealis, who is a member of the council committee on aviation.

Look Ahead 10 Years, He Urges.

"I will propose that the commission include representatives of the mayor's office, the council committee on aviation, Chicago industry, the United States postoffice, and civic groups. The group should function similarly to the Chicago plan commission in outlining a development program for at least the next ten years.

"One of the first problems to come before such a commission would be whether the creation of a lake front airport or the construction of a high speed road to the present Chicago airport would best bring adequate flying field facilities close to the loop.

Agree on Needed Facilities.

"We are all agreed that such facilities are needed and we should be ready for action if at any time federal funds become available for such a project.

"We have spent large sums in Chicago digging subways on paper and planning railroad terminals that are still unbuilt. We can and must afford the lighter expense of planning our future in the air, if we are to have such a future. If we had a group of really civic and air-minded men concentrating their attention on the solution of this important problem, I am confident that we would make rapid progress."

MEXICO DEPUTIES PROTEST BORAH PROBE PROPOSAL

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 16.—The national revolutionary block of the Mexican chamber of deputies placed on record this evening an energetic protest against the proposal of Senator Borah that a United States inquiry be made into the state-church situation in this republic.

The resolution involved the dispatch of a message to the American house of representatives and senate stating that the Mexican deputies believe the high political representatives of its sister nation will oppose Senator Borah's proposal, which they consider an unjustified interference in Mexican internal affairs.

The Mexican deputies emphasized that the entire issue has arisen from alleged Catholic seditious activities fomented by discontented Mexican politicians exiled abroad and that should any such movement obtain practical result it would be a grave danger to the cordial relations of Mexico and the United States on their present basis of mutual respect. The statement concludes:

"Mexican deputies cannot with self-respect remain silent on the Idaho senator's activities."

SLAYS ONE AND WOUNDS THREE; KILLED IN FALL

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 16.—[U. P.]—Archulis Hofshanesian, 60, was shot to death here today after he had killed one man and wounded three others.

Believing himself to be the victim of wrongs at the hands of his family, Hofshanesian began his wild spree at 2 a. m. in his farm home by wounding two of his nine children. Sophie, 16 year old daughter, was wounded by a bullet in her head. Johna, a son, was shot in his arm.

The farmer went by taxicab to a bakery run by Abraham Arakelian, who had once given shelter to Hofshanesian's wife and employment to a son. As the Arakelians came into sight he shot Arakelian dead and wounded his wife.

Hofshanesian's son, Andrec, who worked in the bakery, called police, who were sent to guard two daughters of the mad farmer. Hardly had they arrived when Hofshanesian arrived.

Hofshanesian tried to run and tripped, causing his pistol to discharge. The bullet ripped through his head.

Mrs. Paul G. Burt of Hinsdale, state chairman of children's reading for the Illinois Congress of Parent-Teacher associations, said every home might have a good collection of books by consulting the neighborhood librarian.

Suburban Building for January Shows Loss from Same Month of 1934

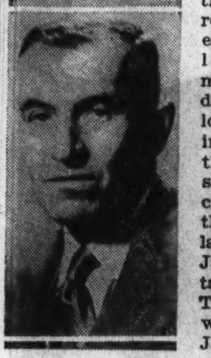
But Outlook Is Better, Villages Say.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]



R. J. SEARS.

Suburban building figures for January, made public yesterday by the Straus Securities corporation, reached the lowest level in the last eleven months. Not only did they drop below the preceding month but they made a poor showing when compared with the same month last year. The January, 1935, total was $293,698. This compares with $450,848 in January, 1934, and with $380,243 in December, 1934.

During only one month in 1934 did the suburban building figures get below last month's. The total for February, 1934, was $240,000.

Not So Bad as They Seem.

These figures are not so discouraging as they seem, however. The January total for last year included three unusual items which boosted it to the $450,000 mark. In Winnetka a permit was taken out for additions to the New Trier High school amounting to $140,000. Hammond had some permits for Shell Petroleum buildings totaling $82,000, and in Evanston a new parish house for St. Mark's Episcopal church costing $40,000 was announced. Without these three projects last year's January total would have been considerably below the same month this year.

There are two comparisons, however, which can be made which reflect a bit of cheer. The January, 1935, total is larger than that of the same month in 1932, which was $270,000, and of 1933, which was $235,000.

The survey points out that just because January of this year got off on the wrong foot, it doesn't mean that 1935 will make a poor showing. The year 1934 exceeded 1933 by 64 per cent and indications are that 1935 will surpass 1934 by an even higher percentage of gain.

R. J. Sears, building commissioner of Villa Park, gives the leading figure for the January suburban record. He reports a $50,000 new postoffice on which work is now under way.

Big Job to Start Soon.

Mr. Sears states that work will start about April 1 on the quarter of a million dollar plant of the Wander company.

W. A. Wolff, building commissioner of Wilmette, made this comment in a report to Frederick Doyle, who has conducted the Straus survey for several years: "The value of building permits issued by this office for January is a poor indication of what is anticipated during the early months of 1935.

"Work will start on the new Wilmette postoffice as soon as weather permits. Judging by the number of inquiries, work will start on at least three single family residences at an early date. A large filling station is contemplated."

Frank Brothers Lease Field Building Store

Howard L. Cheney, Chicago architect, now in Washington with the procurement division of the treasury department, designed the above Lincoln Park postal station to be erected at 2643-51 North Clark street. Washington has allocated $212,000 for site and building. This is one of fourteen new postal stations to be erected in Chicago shortly, according to Postmaster Ernest Kruetgen.

PECK & PECK TO HAVE NEW AIR CONDITIONED MICHIGAN AVE. SHOP

Peck & Peck, furnishings and sportswear, who have been at 38 South Michigan avenue for many years, have leased the 20x100 store at 28 South Michigan, a few doors north of their present quarters. The term is for five years on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis, beginning March 1. The lessor is the McCormick estate, represented by John Hasecoster of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company. Murphy & Co. were the only brokers in the transaction.

Plans for elaborate modernization of the new quarters have been made by John Matthew Hatton of New York with Loebl & Schlossman, Chicago architects, associated. The motif will be modern. An air conditioned system is to be installed.

The new store front will be of Virginia serpentine marble with enameled bronze trim. A feature will be vertical Venetian blinds as a background for the show windows. Over the door will be the firm's name and insignia cut into the marble and enameled. The Krahl Construction company has the general contract.

Field Annex Corridor Will Be Remodeled

Remodeling of the first floor west corridor of the Marshall Field & Co. Annex building, from the Washington street entrance, is contemplated according to W. M. Branch, manager. In the 140 foot marble passageway nineteen bronze framed display windows will be installed, all to be kept lighted during the hours the building is open.

The display windows will be approximately 4x5 feet, of varying depths, and will be used for the display of merchandise by the shops in the Annex building. An electric clock, with directional signs, will be installed at the bend where the corridor joins with the passageway from Wabash avenue.

The modernization program includes redecoration of the entire first floor corridor ceiling and installation of indirect lighting fixtures. The work is scheduled to start within ten days and to be finished early in April.

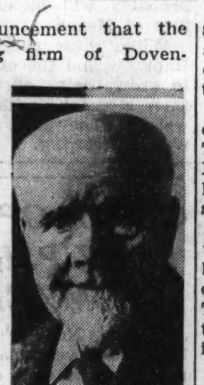
Dovenmuehle, Inc., Enters 80th Year as Organization



WM. F. TEMPEL.
[Koehne Photo.]

With the announcement that the mortgage banking firm of Dovenmuehle, Inc., is now entering its eightieth year as an organization, George H. Dovenmuehle, vice president, yesterday recalled a bit of its early history and growth. He said that although one man has, of course, succeeded another as directing head of this business, the organization has had a continuous existence for eight decades.

"In 1855 two brothers, Edmund and Bruno Knauer, took over the real estate and mortgage business of a man named Malcolm," said Mr. Dovenmuehle. "That is eighty years ago but there is every evidence that Malcolm had conducted the business for several years prior to that.

"Later on William F. Tempel became associated with the Knauers. He had been taught the loan business by his father, William Tempel, a picturesque figure of early Chicago, who at one time operated a grocery and tavern which Lincoln often visited.

"He was interested in the development of the north shore and used to relate with great gusto the story of his battle to have New Trier High school located where it now stands, and the important rôle played by several barrels of rum in that educational campaign.

"When the two Knauer brothers died in the early 90's the younger Tempel purchased the interest of the Knauer family and conducted it under his own name, developing it into a substantial mortgage firm."

H. C. Dovenmuehle, pioneer Chicago wholesale shoe merchant, had long been a client of Tempel's and subsequently purchased an interest in the Tempel firm. In July, 1920, he bought the firm outright, and it has remained in the Dovenmuehle family ever since.

When Mr. Dovenmuehle retired from the wholesale shoe business to devote his whole time to the mortgage field, the family name was transferred to the banking house. Upon his death, Theodore A. Buenger, his son-in-law, who had been general manager of the old Tempel firm, became president of Dovenmuehle, Inc., and George H. Dovenmuehle, his son, became vice president and treasurer.

Under their management the company has grown steadily both as a private mortgage banking house and as loan correspondent for several large insurance companies.

"At the start of 1935," said Mr. Dovenmuehle, "we're again preparing to make mortgage loans in large volume after several years of curtailed lending activity. We are going to make these loans to bondholders' committees and individual property owners at rates that compare favorably with those prevalent in our eighty years of business."

Plan Air Conditioning for Thompson Restaurant

The John R. Thompson company yesterday signed a new lease for ten years, effective May 1, on the space it now occupies with a restaurant at 73-77 West Monroe street, with the Sharpe estate, owner of the building. It will be on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis. J. A. Kelly represented the Thompson company. The 45x190 room is to be redecorated. The owner contemplates an extensive remodeling and modernizing program, which includes an air conditioning system. The latter will be used by the restaurant. According to C. Colton Daughaday, trustee of the Sharpe estate, negotiations are under way to rent the upper floors to a well known loop health gymnasium.

Gift Shop Leases Space at 700 North Michigan

Margaret P. Colt, owner of the Peggy Colt Gift shop, now at 540 North Michigan, has leased 1,200 square feet of ground floor space in the 700 North Michigan avenue building, owned and operated by the estate of Marshall Field, and managed by Robert Booth. The lessee will move about March 1.

The firm of Robert S. DeGolyer & Co., will continue the practice of architecture under the "Robert S. DeGolyer and Walter T. Stockton, architects," a partnership. In addition to DeGolyer, Stockton has been the only active member of the former firm for over ten years. DeGolyer recently was made head of the group of architects selected by the government for the federal north side housing project.

OLSON RUG CO. PLANS $415,000 FACTORY ANNEX

Will Be Third Expansion Since 1926.

WALTER E. OLSON.

Walter E. Olson, president of the Olson Rug company, yesterday announced plans for the erection of a six story addition to the present factory at Crawford and Diversey avenues. This will be the third unit built by the Olson Rug company since 1926, when the concern launched an expansion program to give Chicago one of the largest rug and carpet manufacturing plants in the world. When completed it will cover a ten acre tract.

It was stated that the total cost of the new project, including the building, boiler, generating plant, and other equipment will amount to $415,000.

Plan Unusual Features.

In announcing his building plans Olson is supporting a statement made in 1926 and again in 1928 that some day Chicago will be an important, if not the leading center of the rug and carpet industry in this country.

The new addition will be 135 x 155, of reinforced concrete construction, and with exterior walls of face brick as in former units. According to the architects, Weiss & Niestadt, and John D. Small, consulting engineer, the factory will embody many special features in construction, floor plans, and lighting, unusual in present day factory design.

There will be a high pressure boiler plant on the ground floor which, according to Olson, will contain revolutionary ideas in power plant design, and will include equipment of unusual capacity.

"Our architects and engineers, together with Edmund Higginson, our own mechanical engineer, have traveled far and wide, studying new ideas in construction and equipment," said Olson. "The new unit, when finished, particularly the boiler plant, will embody features so modern that they should establish a precedent in that field.

Believes It's Time to Build.

"Contrary to the opinion of some business men with whom I've discussed this new unit, I consider the present an excellent time to build for industrial purposes as well as homes.

"We are erecting this building not alone because our business warants it, but because we anticipate an ever increasing volume this year, next year, and the years thereafter. We are building because we have utmost faith in Chicago's future and equally as great a faith in the future prosperity of the nation."

The Olson Rug company has been a Chicago concern since it was established on the west side over sixty-one years ago. In addition to a nation-wide mail order business, it maintains large retail salesrooms in its factory building, and since last May a loop store at 35 East Madison street. The company deals exclusively and directly with the consumer and has no dealers or jobbers.

The late Frank E. Davison, architect and engineer, designed the first unit of the Olson plant, which has walls of nearly 90 per cent glass.

WHITE CAP CO. PLANS $50,000 2 STORY ANNEX

Ground will be broken tomorrow on a 100x120 two story addition to the plant of the White Cap company, at 1806 North Central avenue, in the Keeney industrial district, owned by the Phipps Industrial Land Trust. J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. were brokers in a lease of additional land for the plant expansion.

The Campbell-Lowrie-Lautermilch corporation has the general contract. The new building will cost a reported $50,000. The company manufactures tin caps for glass jars. It has been in business eight years. Four years ago it erected a plant with 40,000 square feet of floor space. The new addition will have 24,000 square feet.

Cigar Chain Rents Corner Store at Wells and Jackson

Schermerhorn Cigar Stores, Inc., has leased the corner store in the new two story building recently completed at the northeast corner of Jackson and Wells, and shortly will open the 11th Chicago unit. The lease is for five years beginning March 1. The George S. Lurie company represented the lessee and V. J. Coakley the lessor, the Levy Mayer estate.

Walgreen Renews Lease at 2000 North Park Ave.

The Walgreen Drug company has renewed its lease on the store at 2000 North Park avenue from J. A. Drell, owner, for five years at a reported monthly rental of $451 for the first year and $500 for the remainder of the term. I. Schuman was broker for both parties.

At the Realty Board

Louis T. Orr has been made chairman of the PWA housing coördinating committee of the Chicago Real Estate Board, formed to study the federal housing projects in this city. Arthur Bohnen is serving as liaison officer of the PWA to coöperate with the realtors. Members on Mr. Orr's committee are: Clinton R. Bechtel, James J. Carroll, William F. Conlon, Chester A. Cook, Howard Haynie, Thomas J. Fleming, D. Avery Kimbark, Fred M. Lorish, Ray McCarthy, George Ottenhoff, Leo G. Varty, and Milton S. Yondorf.

PLAN INCREASE IN STATE TAXES FOR RELIEF CASH

Horner Administration Opposes Bonds.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Tax increases, rather than another bond issue, appears to be the conclusion of the Horner administration on the matter of raising thirty-six millions annually for the state's share of unemployment relief.

It also has become known that the governor believes another $12,500,000 must be raised at this session of the legislature for old age pensions. Since the federal government appears to regard $30 monthly as a proper pension and the state is expected to raise half the governor's estimate indicates he has been advised that there are from sixty to seventy thousand aged in Illinois who would need such aid.

Out of the score of proposals made to the governor and the executive committees of both houses of the general assembly for a relief plan, suggestions for adding to the sales and gasoline taxes, or a bond issue backed by excess sales tax collections, seem to have met with most approval. The conference will be resumed Tuesday night at the executive mansion.

Relief a Permanent Burden.

Mr. Horner feels, it was reported, that the legislature and the taxpayers must prepare to consider relief as a permanent part of the state's burden which, therefore, requires long range treatment. A bond issue, according to this report of the governor's beliefs, would be only a temporary measure and would necessitate more legislative action next year.

Gasoline taxes now are collected at the rate of three cents a gallon which last year totaled thirty millions. Presumably the addition of another cent would bring ten millions into the relief coffers. At two per cent, the sales tax is producing about forty millions annually, and the administration believes that by raising the levy to three per cent, another twenty millions would be gathered.

This would leave six millions to be raised from miscellaneous sources. It is possible that another attempt would be made to require public utilities to pay a sales tax on their services. This would require special legislation, for the Supreme court held that the original sales tax bill did not confer that power.

Would Use Gas Tax.

Some of the farm bloc in the legislature is said to feel that the problem should be met by applying the uncommitted share of the gas tax to relief and imposing a state tax on general property at a rate sufficient to bring in about twelve or thirteen millions annually.

Gas tax receipts were pledged behind the two relief bond issues passed during the last three years, but since the bonds mature over a period of twenty years, not more than from three to five millions will be needed in any year to meet the obligation.

Want Unemployables at Work.

Many of the farmers would like to see all unemployables at work on roads and streets. Thus, use of the gas tax, which is intended for highways, for relief purposes, still would result in roads being built and streets improved.

As far as could be learned, no definite plans have been made for raising old age pension funds. The 1930 census gave 421,073 as the number of persons 65 years or more in age in Illinois. The governor's estimate that from sixty to seventy thousand persons would require aid indicates about one in six of those within the age limit are, potentially, wards of the government.

City Hall Furnishes Old Phone Numbers in Rebate

Telephone subscribers entitled to a rebate under the United States Supreme court decision but who cannot remember their old numbers are obtaining this information at the city hall, Mayor Kelly said yesterday. The city has a collection of old telephone books, and anybody desiring to know what his old number was can get it by calling Randolph 8000.

CITES SUCCESS OF POLICE RELIEF SYSTEM IN 1897

Commissioner Peter Kelly Quotes Report.

How the police carried on relief work in 1897 without any extra cost to the taxpayers is revealed in an old departmental report which was pointed out yesterday by County Commissioner Peter M. Kelly as a standard for judging the present administration of relief.

Mr. Kelly, who is chairman of the public service committee of the county board, recently suggested that policemen be employed in making routine investigations of relief families.

"The old record provides plenty of food for thought in looking at our relief problem," Mr. Kelly said. "Maybe we have gone too far in setting up so-called 'scientific' methods of relief control. These new methods have been developed to the point where they are costing $10,000,000 in this state. We ought to at least consider changes to simplify the relief machinery."

Describes Suffering of Poor.

In the 1897 report J. J. Badenoch, then general superintendent of police, pointed with some pride to the fact that "not one cent was paid out for salary, extra time, room [office] rent, or for any other expense." To Mayor George B. Swift and the city council he described the achievement as follows:

"During the last year a new field of usefulness was opened to the department by the destitution and suffering among the poor of the city through the extreme inclemency of the weather. During January and February for a protracted period the thermometer ranged from 5 to 20 degrees below zero. Thousands of the honest working people of the city had been without work for the greater portion of the winter, and the general depression of trade during the last three years, with reduced wages and lack of opportunity to work, had caused them to exhaust their savings of former years.

"On the evening of Jan. 24, 1897, the mayor ordered me by telephone to make arrangements for the relief of the suffering and destitute. By 9 o'clock on the following morning all the heads of the department were called in consultation as to the best means of distributing supplies.

Food Distributed from Stations.

"Large quantities of food and fuel were purchased and the members of the department were called upon to assist in the distribution of the same. Every member without exception entered upon the work with a spirit and determination worthy of the highest praise. I believe that never in the history of the department have the officers worked harder or with more self-sacrificing devotion to their duty than when carrying food and fuel to our deserving but unfortunate fellow citizens.

"Every police station was turned into a distributing station of relief, and the 40 stations of the department, being equally distributed about the city, made convenient points from which the poor in all sections obtained speedy relief.

"During the first week no investigation was made as to the merit of applications, the intense suffering imperatively demanding instant relief. After this had been accomplished the work of granting relief was thoroughly systematized, all applications being regularly recorded and thorough investigation made by the officers of the district. I am pleased to say that in view of the strict surveillance thereafter maintained over the distribution of assistance comparatively few impositions were attempted.

Rations for Family Fixed.

"At the expiration of the first week, the weather having moderated somewhat, a fixed ration was established, and for families of four persons the following relief was given, to last for a period of five days: Five pounds of beef, five pounds of cornmeal, five pounds of peas, five pounds of beans, four loaves of bread, and 200 pounds of coal.

"We found that this supply of provisions and coal was sufficient to keep a family of four in health, strength, and warmth. For families of greater number this ration was increased proportionately."

[At the prices paid at that time relief for a family of four cost $4.32 a month, in contrast to the present average cost of relief per family in Cook county of $34.50 a month.]

"Supplies were furnished to 65,557 families, a total of 304,802 persons. Every dollar that was contributed to the mayor's fund bought one dollar's worth of goods for the poor."

CAUTIONS CITIES ON EXPERIMENTS WITH NEW TAXES

Expert Deems Property Levy Safest.

American cities must rely on the property tax as a chief source of municipal revenue, A. M. Hillhouse, research director of the Municipal Finance Officers' association, wrote yesterday in a report to members of the association in the United States and Canada. Attempts to tap new revenue sources must be regarded as purely emergency measures if permanent financial stability is to be obtained, he added.

The report, issued from the headquarters of the association at 850 East 58th street, was based on a tax study of nearly four hundred cities. It lists new methods of raising revenue from beer drinking licenses and city sales taxes, but points out that none of the methods are proving dependable enough to be considered permanent.

Reduce Delinquencies First.

"The first emergency measures that should be attempted include the reduction of delinquencies by determined collection, placing all taxable property on the assessment rolls, and reduction of the amount of exempted property," the report says.

If no increase in tax collections follows these measures, then cities may have to resort to new or undeveloped sources by emergency legislation until the machinery which will insure long range stability starts moving. They should, however, seek to obtain the largest possible share of state collected taxes before turning to the new methods.

The property tax remains an anchor for American cities, the report continues, though its relative importance as a revenue producer has decreased for the state. In 1922, Hillhouse's studies show, almost 41 per cent of all state taxes were derived from assessments on property, whereas in 1932 they were less than 20 per cent. At the same time cities received 94 per cent of their revenue from the property tax in 1922, and in 1932 they received 92 per cent.

Calls Many Impracticable.

City sales taxes, gasoline taxes, and taxes on inheritance and income seem impractical because they tend to drive business and wealth to other communities, Hillhouse declared.

Among new revenue raising methods now in use is the drinking fee charged by cities in New Mexico, according to the report. The annual license to quaff beer costs $1, wine $2, and stronger drinks $3.

In Lincoln, Neb., car owners must pay 25 cents twice a year for having brakes and lights tested, and Atlanta hopes to raise $25,000 annually by this method. Port Arthur, Tex., makes a special charge for sewer service; Sacramento and Oklahoma City have a service charge for garbage collection, and Hinton, W. Va., charges each man, woman, and child 50 cents for fire protection and a similar amount for street lighting.

CITY OF LIVERPOOL PLANS A 'NEW DEAL' TO ABOLISH IDLENESS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The municipality of Liverpool has drawn up a new deal scheme intended to abolish unemployment in Great Britain's third largest city.

It suggests the establishment of agricultural settlements where youthful unemployed can reside and produce food to become self-supporting, and also provision of facilities for settlement of families on small holdings and loans to settlers at low rates of interest.

It is further proposed that the school leaving age be raised, that the employment of children outside school hours be prohibited and that overtime for all young persons be abolished, with a maximum working week of 44 hours for all under 21 years of age.

WISCONSIN WHIPS INDIANA IN OVERTIME, 37-27

BADGERS SCORE FIVE GOALS IN EXTRA PERIOD

Purdue Beats Illini, 35-27.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Wisconsin's basketball team scored five baskets in an overtime period tonight to defeat Indiana, 37 to 27, and seize second place in the Big Ten standing. The Hoosiers, who had been tied for the lead, dropped to third.

The score was tied 27 all at the end of a furious battle, but the Badgers dominated play during the five minute extra session.

Gil McDonald, Wisconsin guard, dropped in two baskets before the overtime period was a minute old, and he added another before it was over. Preboski and Fuller, forwards, made their only field goals of the game during overtime.

8,700 Watch Battle.

The regular game ended in wild confusion as more than 8,700 fans attempted to shout down a dazzling Indiana rally led by Ken Gunning, sophomore guard.

Wisconsin led, 12 to 9, in the first half, and walked away from the Hoosiers early in the second period with Demark and Poser leading the attack. After the Badgers had taken a 25 to 19 lead, Gunning and Stout scored seven points to put Indiana ahead, 26 to 25.

McDonald sent Wisconsin back into the lead with an overhand hook shot, but Gunning tied the score with a free throw just before the gun sounded.

Two Badgers Ousted.

Demark and Jones of Wisconsin were ousted on four personals in the second half and Gunning played part of the period with three against him.

The crowd stayed in the stands after the game to pay tribute to Poser, McDonald, and Ray Hamann, Wisconsin senior guards who were playing the last home game of their college careers.

PURDUE GETS REVENGE

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Purdue tonight whipped Illinois, 35 to 27, and avenged its only defeat of the basketball season. The victory was the Boilermakers' sixth in the Western conference.

Purdue led at the half largely as the result of the accurate shooting of Jim Seward and Norm Cottom, but Illinois, led by Frank Froschauer, came back with a threatening, although shortlived rally that threw a scare into the Boilermakers.

The Boilermakers were ahead, 30 to 17, with ten minutes left to play when the rally started. Ten points, six of them by Froschauer, cut the Purdue lead to three points.

Cottom then slipped down the floor for a short shot that increased Purdue's lead to 32 to 27. Cottom added a free throw a moment later and Kessler made a field goal from well out on the floor just as the gun sounded.

Froschauer with 15 points on six baskets and three free throws took high point honors. Cottom led Purdue with five field goals and two free throws.

MICHIGAN BEATS IOWA

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Michigan spoiled Iowa's attempted comeback in a Big Ten basketball encounter here tonight when the Wolverines rallied in the last five minutes to win, 29 to 27, before a crowd of 5,000.

Behind 24 to 19, Michigan began a scoring spree when Meyers, forward, dropped in two free throws as Blackmer, Iowa lanky center, fouled out of the game.

Tamagno, Wolverine center, dribbled in for a setup to bring his team within one point of the Hawkeyes. Rosenthal, Iowa forward, nullified this with a long shot to put Iowa ahead, 26 to 23, with three minutes left.

Joslin, who substituted for Capt. Plummer at forward, made good on two follow shots and Evans, guard, clinched the game with a setup. Lindenmeyer, Blackmer's substitute, ended the scoring a minute later when he sank a free throw.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Packing grips and packing wallops will occupy the attention of Golden Gloves fighters all over Chicagoland for the next few days, for THE TRIBUNE'S Tournament of Champions is but a week away and each member of every team already has been notified when he is to depart for the scene of battle.

Twenty-five of the more than 40 teams of sectional champions already have been selected. Others will be named before it is time to start the march toward Chicago. The advance guard of invading wallopers will reach Chicago next Sunday morning. The fighting starts at 7 o'clock on the night of Feb. 25.

Battle in Three Rings.

And here's an astounding announcement:

For the first time in Chicago Golden Gloves boxing, on that opening night, there will be simultaneous fighting in three rings. Think of it! There's a possibility that you will see three knockout punches landed at exactly the same instant and hear three referees tolling off the "ten count" in perfect rhythm.

No adjectives such as "big" and "great" can adequately describe that opening night. It will be colossal and stupendous. Already one of the largest opening crowds on record has been assured. Every lad will bring with him a group of his own loyal rooters. For instance, the fans in Poseyville, Ind., are so worked up about a lad from their town who is a member of the Vincennes Sun-Commercial that they are talking about bringing along the Poseyville Silver Cornet band.

All Eager to Fight.

From a vast section of our country, on the fringe of which are Minneapolis, Sioux City, Omaha, Nashville, Louisville, Cleveland, and Detroit, will come the boxers and their followers. One punch on the chin may send some of them home disappointed, but until that punch lands they are all prospective Jack Dempseys.

The teams that have been selected, and whose warriors already are in the first line trenches, are as follows:

Dubuque, Ia., Telegraph-Herald.
Omaha, Neb., World-Herald.
Green Bay, Wis., Press-Gazette.
Cleveland, O., Plain Dealer.
Joliet, Ill., Spectator.
Sioux City, Ia., Journal.

GILLIE, AT 15-1, TAKES $20,000 STAKE ON COAST

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—Gillie, a bay colt by Victorian-My Tide, from the Greentree stable of Mrs. Payne Whitney, dropped out of the clouds to win the Santa Anita Derby at 1 1-16 miles this afternoon. He paid $32.20 to his $2 admirers and earned $19,650 for his owner.

So far as the Derby was concerned, it was Ladies' day and long shot day. Whiskolo, from the Milky Way farm of Mrs. Ethel Mars of Oak Park, Ill., was second, paying $16.80 to place. Demonstration, of the Warm stable of Mrs. Silas Mason, was third at $39.40 to show. Sound Advice, 9 to 10 favorite, coupled with Polar Flight, finished seventh with no apparent excuses, while his stablemate was fourteenth in the field of seventeen which went to the post.

Crowd Bets $579,841.

It was another day of record breaking attendance and betting on the part of these surprising Los Angeles turf followers. The crowd, variously estimated at 28,000 to 40,000 in absence of official figures, exceeded that of opening day. The mutuel handle set a new high of $579,841, compared to $459,780 two weeks ago. On the Derby alone, $95,077 was wagered.

About the only reason a turf analyst could advance for backing Gillie was the fact that Jocky Silvio Coucci was aboard the Greentree representative. He arrived from Miami late yesterday.

Even at that, Coucci came to ride Peradventure, a stablemate, which

Lee Agrees with Cubs on Salary Terms

The Cubs' list of holdouts was reduced to three players yesterday when Bill Lee, big right handed pitcher who had an imposing record last season, his first in the major leagues, agreed to salary terms for the coming season. Lee telephoned the Cubs' office from his home in Plaquemine, La., that he would deliver his signed contract when he arrives at the training camp at Catalina Island next month.

Three Yet to Sign.

With Chuck Klein, outfielder, and Woody English, captain and infielder, having signed their contracts on Friday, the only members of the squad still unsigned are Pitcher Larry French, obtained from the Pirates in a trade for Guy Bush; Billy Herman, second baseman, and Frank Demaree, outfielder who was with the Cubs two seasons ago and was brought back from the Los Angeles farm at the close of the 1934 season.

Lee is expected to be one of the mainstays of the pitching staf this summer. He won only 13 games while losing 14 in 1934, but his earned run record, especially in early season games, was impressive.

Wyatt Signs with Sox.

Mail to the White Sox offices yesterday brought the signed contract of Pitcher Whitlow Wyatt whose protracted silence had caused him to be listed in the holdout ranks. Four now remain unsigned, but Lou Comiskey, president and owner, has received assurance that three of them—Catcher Luke Sewell, Infielder Jack Hayes and Babe Phelps, a new pitcher—will be heard from early this week. The one stubborn case is that of Zeke Bonura, the large sized first baseman who is complaining that his pay boost wasn't sufficient. Comiskey insists that he will not raise the ante.

BARGAIN HUNTING?

Just look into your pocketbook, add up what you find there, and then see which of these Golden Gloves ticket prices appeals most:

55 cents, $1.10, $1.65, $2.20

Bargain prices all, you'll agree, for the finals of the Tournament of Champions at the Chicago Stadium March 8.

Every seat will be a good seat, with a clear view of the ring. That's why you don't have to worry about the fact that the supply of $3.30 tickets is exhausted.

Then, too, you'll want to get your tickets now for the first three nights of the Tournament of Champions—Feb. 25, 26 and 27. They're priced at 40 cents, 66 cents, and $1.10.

All are on sale now at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn Street, and at Tribune Tower. Or mail check or money order to Golden Gloves Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

TORONTO, Feb. 16. — (AP) — The Toronto Maple Leafs took some of the sting out of a long series of defeats tonight by whipping the New York Rangers, 5 to 1, in their last meeting of the regular National Hocky league season. A crowd of 13,000 saw the game.

The Rangers, who won the season's series, 4 to 2, were ineffective tonight. While Bill Cook and Murray Murdock of the Rangers and King Clancy of Toronto were in the penalty box in the first period, Buzz Boll and Joe Primeau snapped in the first two goals a few seconds apart.

Chuck Conacher added the third goal and he and Pep Kelly tallied in the second period to make it 5 to 0. The Rangers, who sent only 18 shots at Goalie George Hainsworth, averted a shutout in the final frame when Butch Keeling hammered home Earl Seibert's pass. Lineup:

MALONE FAILS TO FIND BUYER AT WAIVER PRICE

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals are holding as a club over the head of Pat Malone, their holdout pitcher, the fact that he is unwanted at the waiver price by any of the other major league teams.

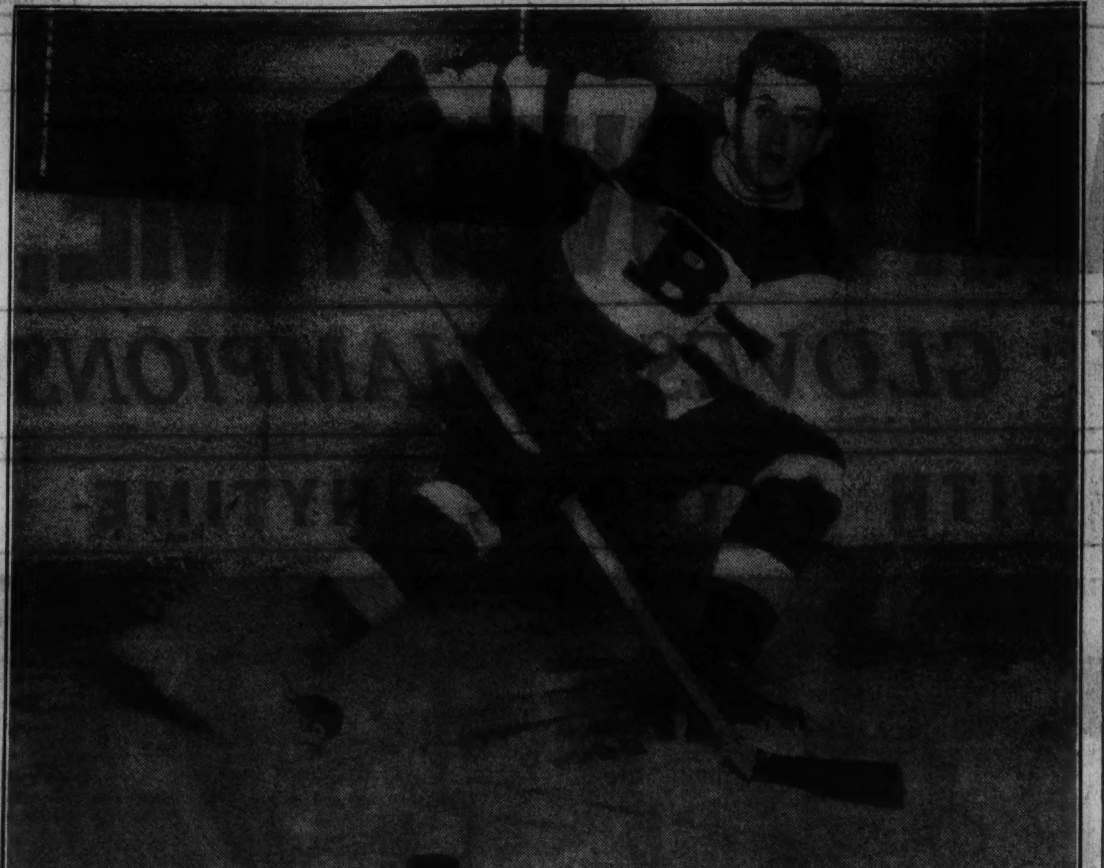
Branch Rickey, vice president of the club, confirming tonight that the Cards had obtained waivers, also said Malone had been unsuccessful in attempting to arrange a trade for his own services.

Malone has been invited to St. Louis to discuss terms, Rickey said, but he asserted firmly the burly right hander must "change his attitude towards baseball and club discipline."

The pitcher, once one of the National league's leading strikeout artists, was reported by the Post-Dispatch to have rejected a Cardinal offer of $5,000 and to have demanded $10,000, the salary said to have been paid him by the Chicago Cubs last year.

He is now at Hot Springs, Ark.

THOSE BOTHERSOME BRUINS!



Max Kaminsky (above) of the Boston Bruins, one of the two Jewish players in the National Hocky league, will be in lineup at center tonight against the Chicago Blackhawks at the Stadium. The other Hebrew player is Alex Levinsky of the Hawks.

One of the outstanding players on the Boston squad is Dit Clapper, right wing, who can be counted on to bother Goalie Chabot plenty tonight.

Dates Fixed for Stanley Cup Playoffs

TORONTO, Que., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Following the same system as in previous years, the National Hocky league today announced plans for the playoffs for the Stanley cup.

The playoffs, involving the first three teams in each of the American and international divisions, will begin either March 22, 23, or 24 and continue each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday or Sunday thereafter.

The first ranking teams in each division will meet in a best-three-out-of-five series for the league championship. The first two games will be played on the ice of the American division club and the last three on the rink of the international division club.

Teams finishing second in each of the divisions will clash in a home-and-home series, total goals to count, with the first game scheduled for the ice of the Canadian division club. The third place teams will meet in a similar series, the first game being played on the ice of the American division team.

The winners of the second and third place team series then will meet for the right to play the victor among the two leading sextets for the Stanley cup. The final series will be on a best three-out-of-five basis with the league champion having the right to name the site of the first game.

The league also decided to change its system of refereeing. Hereafter referees, instead of working for three periods at one end of the rink, will work the first period at one end, the third at the other and split the second.

Baby Ruths and Windsor Sextet to Clash Today

The Baby Ruth hocky team will play its second international game of the season this afternoon when it meets the Windsor Mic Macs of Ontario, Canada, in the main event at the Stadium. A regular amateur league game between Postl and C. Y. O. All-Stars will open the program at 2 o'clock.

The Mic Macs will present nearly the same club which gave the Baby Ruths a hard battle last year when the Chicagoans won, 4 to 3. The visitors also are the defending Michigan-Ontario league champions.

Among the players who are returning are Mets Skoleski, diminutive goalie; Red Curran, Tom Tobin, Doug Hatton, and Bert Foote, defense men, and Frank Doran, Bill Boyd, Bud Langlois, and Bill Mailoux. Hawks Renew Warfare with Bruins Tonight

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The quarrelsome Boston Bruins, ever ready to pick a fight, and particularly with the world champion Blackhawks, will storm onto the Stadium ice this evening with a stack of chips on their collective shoulders, chips which have accumulated since the start of the season. Aside from the vital fact that Boston and the Hawks are engaged at present with the rampaging Rangers of New York in a battle for the lead in the American section of the National Hocky league, tonight's foes should have plenty of reason to put on one of their traditional knockdown shows.

Since Boston and Chicago first met in the league there has been no great affection wasted between the two, and their position in the standings, whether it be at the top or bottom, has never affected the young men's desire to go after each other with their customary zest. Some of the best of the Boston-Chicago arguments have been conducted when both were trying to escape a cellar berth, let alone gain a spot in the playoffs, which happens to be the current purpose of both.

Can Bruins Get Even?

The Bruins have an honest motive of vengeance in tonight's game, and at their present pace are more than well equipped to wreak same. They have battled the Hawks four times this season, and the best they have been able to do was a 1 to 1 tie here on Jan 13. Prior to that the Hawks had given them a sound 4 to 0 larruping here on Nov. 25, a 3 to 2 whipping at Boston two nights later, and then on Jan. 5 handed them their year's biggest humiliation, a 6 to 0 beating. The last was administered at Boston, where the Bruins are perennially one of the hardest teams in the league to beat.

Skipping the team factor, the anticipated crowd at the Stadium will have an opportunity to witness a number of personal arguments. It is a question of whether the case of the Thompson brothers or that of Eddie Shore will be the more interesting.

Tiny Has Edge.

The Thompson business, one of the most unique in any sport, would provide an evening in itself, what with Paul, playing wing for the Hawks, doing his darndest to score on his brother Tiny, the Bruins' goalie. Tiny is given the edge in their quarrel to date, having allowed Paul to score on him only nine times in the seven seasons they've faced each other, but the younger Thompson is out to make it at least a dozen this evening. In any event, both will forget they are brothers, that they are co-owners of a wheat farm on the outskirts of Calgary, and that they both play in the outfield during the summer with the Pucksters, Red Dutton's hocky-baseball team.

Mr. Shore has no relatives playing with the Hawks, so he likely will settle the matter by playing the Hawks, the referees, and the customers on the top shelf all by himself, as he has done so satisfyingly in the past. If there be any suspicion that Mr. Shore is becoming weary with the years, let it be set down here that he is leading the league's defense men in scoring. It is necessary to go back only as far as last Tuesday, when for two periods the Toronto Maple Leafs were giving the Bruins a merry going over. Mr. Shore then went into a huddle with himself, and the Bruins came from behind four times to win, 6 to 5, with Edward getting a goal and three assists out of the evening.

O'DOUL RELEASED BY GIANTS; NEW SEALS MANAGER

Champion Slugger Returns to First Club.

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Frank J. [Lefty] O'Doul, world traveler, raconteur, and one of the great batsmen of modern baseball, today was given his unconditional release by the New York Giants to become manager of the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast league.

O'Doul, who duplicated Babe Ruth's stunt of switching from southpaw pitching to championship slugging, thus returns to the place of his birth to realize a managerial ambition after a glamorous career in the big leagues.

Klein's Mark Shades O'Doul's.

Of the players who finished on any National league roster last year only Chuck Klein of the Cubs shaded O'Doul in the lifetime batting list. Their figures are .3524 and .3523, respectively. O'Doul's high mark for a season was .398, in 1929.

O'Doul, who broke in with the Seals in 1917 at the age of 20, succeeds Jimmy Caveney as manager of the club for 1935. Although entitled to his unconditional release as a ten year man in the majors, he was let go by the Giants only after a cash payment by the San Francisco club, understood to be about $5,500.

O'Doul made his big league debut as a southpaw Rookie with the New York Yankees in 1919, the year Ruth came to the club from Boston. Lefty and Ruth quickly became pals, but while Ruth set home run records O'Doul was kept on the bench. He had two more unsuccessful trials, one with the Yankees and another with the Red Sox, before forsaking the mound to make his mark as an outfield slugger by batting .392 with Salt Lake City in 1924 and .375 with the same club the following year.

Comes to Stay in 1928.

Playing altogether with nine different clubs in four leagues, O'Doul came up to the majors to stay in 1928. After one season with the Giants he was traded to the Phillies for Fred Leach and quickly began to pound the fences of Baker bowl. He went to Brooklyn in 1931 in a deal, but his hitting failed to offset fielding defects, and the Dodgers released him to the Giants in 1933, along with Watson [Lefty] Clark, in exchange for Sam Leslie, hard hitting first baseman.

MR. MILLIES IS A BIT LATE, BUT GETS MARRIED

When Walter Millies, 27 years old, a catcher last year for the Brooklyn National league baseball team, makes up his mind to get married, it takes more than an automobile accident to stop him.

Mr. Millies demonstrated this yesterday. He was on his way to the home of his bride-to-be, Miss Leona Merker, 25 years old, of 7838 Loomis boulevard, where the ceremony was to be performed by his father, the Rev. Louis J. Millies.

In front of 6742 South Morgan street, Millies swerved his car to avoid hitting another machine, and it skidded into a parked car. Millies received a deep cut over his right eye. He stopped at the Englewood hospital to have it patched up, then proceeded on to his wedding.

Displaying a superior passing attack and a tighter defense, the Wildcats had control of the ball for most of the game. Marquette made only two field goals in the first half.

The Wildcats might have made a runaway of it had it not been for the work of Roy [Skippy] McMahon, a sophomore forward, who made four baskets in the last half. McMahon's playing featured Marquette's defense. Capt. Ray Morstadt, the Hilltoppers' leading scorer for the last three seasons, was held to three points.

PITT BEATS NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The University of Pittsburgh basketball team defeated Notre Dame, 27 to 25, here tonight in a game which went longer than the regulation time, due to a defective timekeeper's watch. The watch stopped after 12½ minutes of play in the second half, and the timekeepers failed to notice this fact until an estimated ten minutes had been played. Then they started time again with 7½ minutes officially remaining to play. The second half ran from 30 to 35 minutes as a consequence.

Notre Dame had led from the time Marty Peters sank his first free throw until Ross Emerick, Panther guard, made three baskets in a row, with five minutes of play officially remaining, to give Pitt a 23 to 22 margin. Co-Capt. Clare Cribbs and Frank Loucks, substitute guard, made a basket apiece to offset a field goal and a free throw by Peters.

ILLNESS FORCES ROSS TO PUT OFF WOODS BATTLE

A junior welterweight boxing championship bout between Champion Barney Ross and Henry Woods, scheduled at Seattle, Wash., Feb. 26, was indefinitly postopend last night after it was learned Ross would be unable to fight because of the recurrence of an old chest ailment. Ross, who with his co-managers, San Pian and Art Winch, had planned to go to Seattle this morning, first felt a chest pain Thursday. He continued to drill, however, and his trainer, Izzy Kline, gave him several ray treatments. These failed to cure the disorder so yesterday the champion went to a west side hospital where he was examined by his physician, Dr. J. P. O'Connell. Dr. O'Connell said Barney was suffering from inter costal neuritis, a chest congestion. He added it may be six or seven weeks before Ross will be able to box.

NEW MARK SET BY CUNNINGHAM FOR BAXTER MILE

Beats Venzke by 25 Yards in 4:09.8.

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham again demonstrated his mastery of American milers tonight with a smashing victory over Gene Venzke and Bill Bonthron, his two eastern rivals, in the Baxter mile, feature race of the New York Athletic club meet in Madison Square Garden.

Cunningham, pulling away from his pursuers with a spectacular closing sprint, broke the tape 25 yards in front of Venzke in the fast time of 4 minutes 9.8 seconds, a new record for the event, but short of the former University of Kansas star's own indoor record of 4:08.4. Bonthron, third for the second time in two weeks, trailed Venzke by five yards.

Williamson Finishes Fourth.

Harry Williamson of North Carolina faded after sticking with the leaders for the first half-mile and finished fourth, ten yards behind Bonthron. The fifth starter, Erik Ny of Sweden, dropped out after setting a sizzling pace for the first quarter, which the foreign star covered in 57 seconds flat.

The issue was never in doubt after Cunningham moved out in front on the back stretch of the sixth lap. The powerful Kansas runner made every post a winning one from there on, while his rivals dropped steadily behind. Bonthron began to tire with four laps to go, and the crowd got its only thrill when the former Princeton captain was passed by Venzke on the tenth lap of the eleven lap journey. For a moment there was some hope that Venzke could put on enough steam to make it a race, but the Pennsylvania junior was unable to cut down the margin piled up by the pace setter. Cunningham received an ovation as he came down the stretch all alone.

Venzke Timed in 4:13.9.

Venzke was clocked in 4 minutes 13.9 seconds and Bonthron in 4:15. The times by quarters revealed unusually erratic pacing. In order they were 57 seconds, 64.4, 66.2, and 62.2.

Cunningham in capturing his second Baxter mile within three years gained revenge for the eyelash decision he lost last year in this event to Bonthron. It was Glenn's fourth victory in seven races with Bill. His time eclipsed the former Baxter mile record of 4:10, set by Venzke in 1932.

Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel, unbeaten so far during the indoor campaign, added the Matt Halpin half-mile trophy to his collection without difficulty. The Hoosier star stayed off the pace until the bell lap and then breezed in a winner by five yards over Bill Ray of Manhattan college in 1:54.1.

Maryland Wins Mile Relay.

The University of Maryland's one mile relay quartet came from behind to whip Princeton and Yale in a three cornered match race, an annual feature of the meet. Headly, the Maryland anchor, finished a good 20 yards ahead of his Princeton rival and helped the winners hang up a new record of 3:26.5 for the event.

TILDEN HEAVIES BEAT PHILLIPS QUINTET, 31 TO 18

Tilden Tech's heavyweight basketball team defeated Phillips yesterday, 31 to 18, to keep pace with Harrison at the head of the central section in the City league. They are tied for first place each being undefeated in five starts. Badeusz, Tilden center, scored ten points.

Twenty-five fouls were recorded, 15 against Phillips, which was held scoreless the first period. Tilden led at the half, 14 to 3.

In the only other league contest the Farragut lightweights won from Phillips, 47 to 27. Smicklas, center, contributed eight baskets and two free tosses. The victory sent Farragut into a tie for second place with Lindblom, each having won three and lost two.

Briergate Golf Club Files Petition to Reorganize

The Briergate Golf club, at Deerfield, yesterday filed a voluntary reorganization petition in the United States District court under section 77b of the amended bankruptcy law. The petition lists liabilities of approximately $100,000. The assets consist of a clubhouse and an eighteen hole golf course.

was withdrawn on symptoms of lameness. Gillie started fourteen times as a 2 year old and won one race. He started six times this year with one victory at six furlongs. Most of those he opposed this afternoon had finished ahead of him in previous races here.

Just Like His Daddy.

That was before the Derby and accounted for Gillie's price. The estimate held good for six furlongs of the Derby route. Then things began to happen. Gillie no doubt began thinking back there in ninth position, and remembered that his daddy, Victorian, was a distance performer, winner of the Agua Caliente Handicap in these parts in 1930, and that his mother, My Tide, was a daughter of My Play. Thereafter it was different. But let's begin at the beginning.

When the field of seventeen lined up, Carmanchita, Polish Beau, and Sound Advice, favorite, were outside the starting barrier, which has only 14 stalls. Jocky Schutte hustled Sound Advice as Starter Dickerson sent them away in good alignment, but Bluebeard, Shining Jewel, and Toro Nancy broke fast and obtained the lead, so Sound Advice took position in the middle of the pack, with Gillie in the rear guard.

Sound Advice on Outside.

Going down the back stretch, Bluebeard and Toro Nancy battled for the lead, with Whiskolo within striking distance. Sound Advice was racing safely on the outside to avoid pockets and Gillie was still on the second flight but saving ground on the inside.

Between the far turn and home turn Sound Advice made his challenge and raced up to third, from where his admirers expected him to come on to easy victory. The pacemakers, however, swung rather wide entering the stretch. Sound Advice seemed to meet mild interference and hung in his tracks. He finished about four lengths behind the ultimate winner.

Whiskolo Takes Lead.

Meantime Pantoufle, from the C. V. Whitney stable, with A. Robertson piloting him, got through on the rail and stepped up to the throatlatch of Whiskolo, which had moved into the van in the scramble for positions. It looked like a stretch duel between Whiskolo and Pantoufle. But there was something coming with long strides on the outside. It was Gillie, ninth at the far turn and fourth entering the stretch. He sped past Pantoufle and Bluebeard, and finally, a sixteenth out, reached Whiskolo.

The Milky Way colt made a game effort to retain his lead, but Gillie passed him in that last dash to win by a length and a half going away. Whiskolo was the same distance before Demonstration, with Pantoufle, Bluebeard, Pundit, and Sound Advice clustered in that order for the next four positions.

Here is how the others finished: Ann O'Ruley, Pitter Pat, Shining Jewel, Toro Nancy, Gallaclay, Toro Flight, Polar Flight, World Series, Carmanchita, and Polish Beau. Time was 1:44 3-5.

Cavalcade Works Out.

Cavalcade, which must still be classed no better than an extremely doubtful starter in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap next Saturday, took his first exercise this morning since being confined to his barn by injury eleven days ago. Trainer Bob Smith had him jogged a mile and cantered a half mile. Smith still is unwilling to say the 1934 three-year-old champion will not start, but his manner indicates his doubt.

"Cavalcade looked and worked all right," said Trainer Smith. "He was far advanced before his mishap. However, he has missed what would have been three conditioning workouts. I don't want him to go unless he is fit."

Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, who arrived in a special car with a party of friends, said that she did not expect her colt to start.

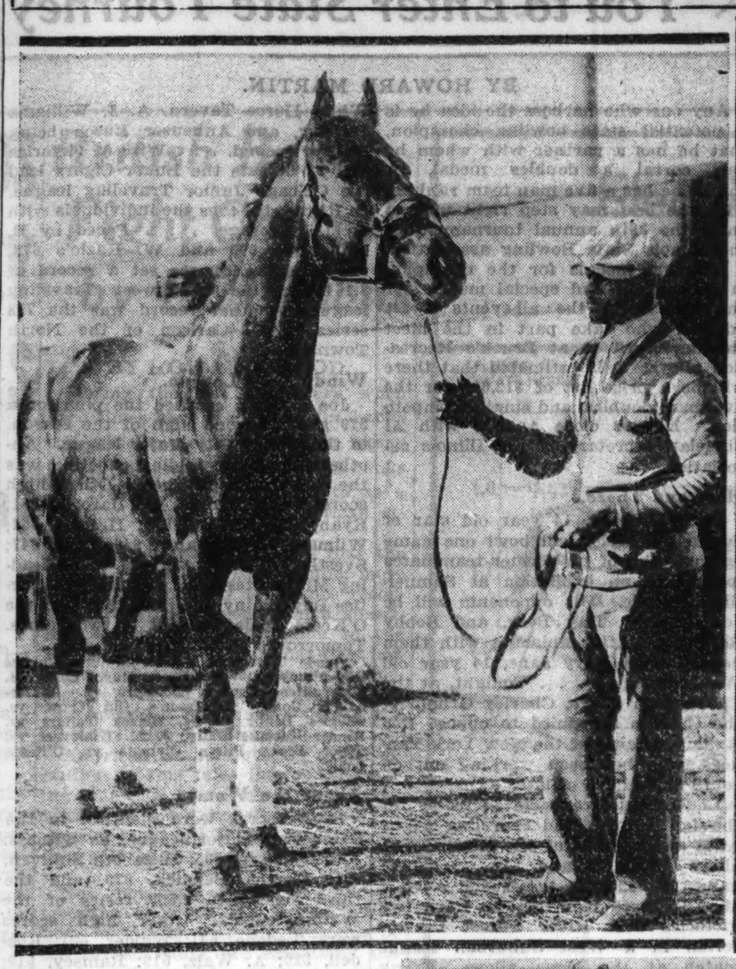
PUT 'EM TOGETHER AND YOU HAVE GREATEST HORSE RACE

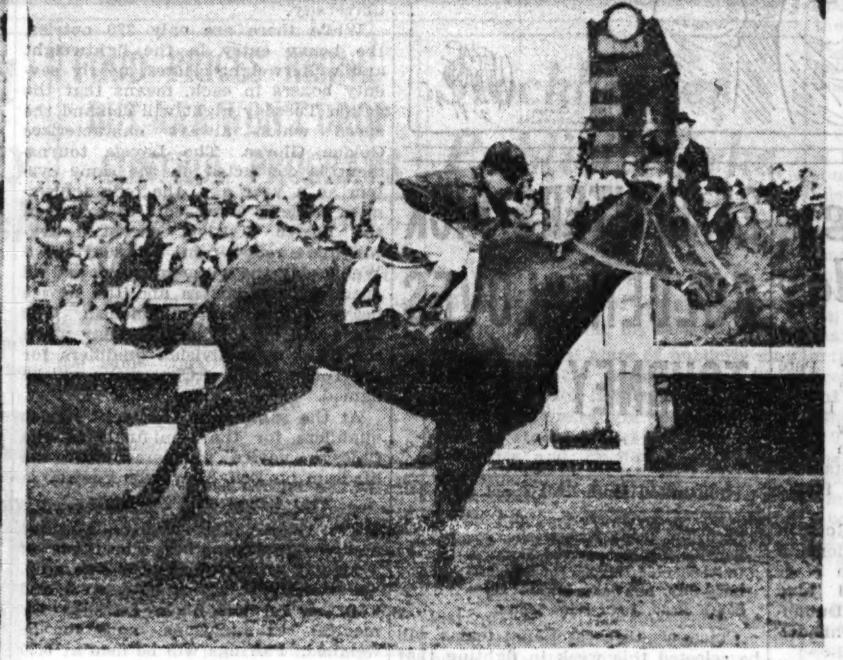


Equipoise, American handicap champion for three years, will be one of the favorites to win the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap next Saturday afternoon.

Jocky Sonny Workman and his family. Workman will ride Equipoise in bid for richest turf prize.

Booby Jones, one of the leading jockies for several seasons, will ride Cavalcade, according to latest reports from the Brookmeade stable.

Moose Peters, American jocky champion in 1934, will have a mount in the big race, probably Top Row.



At top is Cavalcade, gallant stretch runner which won 1934 three year old title. Below, Head Play scores victory.

Hello there, Riskulus! This four year old will be one of the Norman Church colorbearers in the handicap and will be liked by fans hoping for an upset.

Jackie Westrope (left), national jocky champion in 1933, when he rode more than 300 winners, will be up on one of the best horses in the race, while Charley Kurtsinger also will have one of the real contenders—Head Play, 1933 Preakness winner. Head Play, after failing in several efforts, a week ago won a test race easily at 16 to 1. It was the first time Kurtsinger had ridden him since that Preakness triumph.

BOYS' CLUBS CLASH.

Basketball teams of the Off the Street club and South Side Boys' club, will meet for the eleventh time at the 8th Regiment armory this evening.

Sir Malcolm Gloomy; Rain Erodes Beach

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Gloom settled heavily on the shiny sands of Daytona Beach today. Conditions never appeared worse for Sir Malcolm Campbell's speed ventures, and the possibility appeared that ten days may pass before the Bluebird can attempt to better its own record of 272.108 miles an hour.

The beach was rougher than at any time since the Englishman came here two weeks ago with his entirely rebuilt car, hoping this time to lift automobile speeds to the point of 300 miles an hour, five miles a minute.

Sir Malcom Discouraged.

Rain drummed down on the beach most of last night, the wind was from the west and south, and there were gullies and trenches all down the length of the 11½ mile racing stretch. The 50 year old Briton was completely discouraged.

"I've never seen it quite so bad," he said despairingly. "The beach is miserable, simply miserable. At this rate there's no telling when we can try for the record. I'm disconsolate."

He looked it. Several of the hours he spent with his mechanics in the garage, trying to find something to do for the Bluebird, the seven ton car that needs only proper conditions to test the ultimate in speed design and construction. There was nothing to do; the Bluebird glistened inside and out. The readjustments necessary after the first test drive Thursday have all been made.

Cummings Has Bad Luck.

In the haze that hung over the beach today, Bill Cummings, 1934 Indianapolis speed race winner, attempted to break the Diesel motored record Dave Evans, another American racer, lifted to 125.065 yesterday. Campbell watched moodily, debating whether to make a last minute try for the second test he wants before trying for the record.

But Cummings had a bad time of it and failed to complete his runs. On the south run his oil pressure failed, and coming back he bumped around a great deal and was forced to cut his motors as the car belched smoke and fire going into the measured mile. He failed to approach the record.

Minnesota Gym Team Wins Meet from Iowa

Three other records were broken. Carlton Crowell, Wisconsin, ran the 440 in 53.5 seconds, to break the record set by Tierney, Marquette, in 1933. WHAM! BOMBS ECHO ILLINOIS WAR ON CROWS

One Blast Does Away with 5,000 Pests.

BY BOB BECKER.

The state of Illinois has been waging a war again this winter against the huge flocks of crows which are downstate. This is the second season that the department of conservation has attacked the big flocks of crows with dynamite bombs and shotguns in order to reduce the number of these birds.

Illinois is a favored state for concentration of crows. Thousands of these smart birds come down from the north in the fall to spend the winter in the southern part of the state. The birds seem to like the climate and the food possibilities from Springfield south to the fruit country in the extreme southern part of the state. Although we have crows in northern Illinois all through the winter the flocks are small when compared to the thousands of birds that will get together every night in some of the counties downstate.

First Use of Bombs.

In order to wipe out large numbers of crows in a single night the department of conservation has been using bombs. As far as we know this is the first time that a department of conservation in the central states has utilized such a method of crow extermination.

Director of Conservation Charles F. Thompson informed us a short time ago that his men had been trying several types of bombs loaded with No. 6 shot in order to determine which was the most effective. Moreover, an eastern powder company had offered to conduct experiments in its laboratory to see if it could perfect a very efficient bomb for the killing of crows assembled in large flocks.

Put Bombs in Trees.

At present the conservation authorities in Illinois loaded several pounds of No. 6 shot in a bomb. During the day they place these bombs in the trees where the crows assemble at night. As soon as the flock is settled after dark all of the bombs are set off by remote control and thus thousands of crows are killed with a single blast. After the blast men with shotguns mop up the roost to get birds that are just nicked by one or two shot.

Because the crow is such an egg stealer and nest robber, preying on both song and game birds, this crow campaign is being cheered by all bird fans. As has been pointed out in this department for many years, the crow stands convicted by irrefutable evidence that he is an enemy of bird life, and sportsmen should not miss an opportunity to wage war against him.

Get Busy, Farmers!

Right now the campaign downstate involves the use of bombs to kill 3,000, 5,000, or more crows in a single night. Later when the birds scatter it is up to the farmer, landowner, and sportsman to decoy the birds and shoot them with shotguns, a game that is real sport.

The Milwaukee Viennas defeated the Rangers in their first cup game, 5 to 0. Several former Chicagoans, including De Pratt and Huber, will be in the lineup of the Wisconsin team.

MEDWICK ASKS CARDINALS FOR $10,000 CONTRACT

Cartaret, N. J., Feb. 16.—[U. P.]—Joe Medwick, outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, notified club officials today that he would not sign his 1935 contract until his salary is made $10,000.

Medwick said that the club had offered $7,500 which was "a little increase" over his 1934 wage.

"I'm not worried about it," Medwick said today. "I've got a nice, long wait until the training camp opens and I'm going to sit tight at my home here and see what happens."

Augustana Triumphs Over Wartburg Quintet, 50-23

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Wartburg of Clinton, Ia., provided little opposition for Augustana this afternoon in a nonconference game, losing 50 to 23. Augustana closes its home conference schedule Tuesday when it meets Monmouth before an expected crowd of 1,800.

Louis Takes Another Swing at Ramage's Chin Thursday

Important boxing bouts this week will include those to be held at St. Paul, Minn., Tuesday and at the Chicago Coliseum and Los Angeles, Cal., Thursday. Frank Battaglia, former Winnipeg, Man., middleweight, and Solly Dukelsky of Chicago will fight at St. Paul. The contest at Los Angeles will pair Joe Louis, 1934 Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion, and Lee Ramage, San Diego, Cal., and that match at the Coliseum will bring together Davey Day, lightweight stablemate of Champion Barney Ross, and Bobby Pacho. All three are scheduled for ten rounds.

The Battaglia-Dukelsky and the Ramage-Louis encounters are rematches. Dukelsky handed Battaglia a ten round trimming Aug. 6 and Louis won an eight round technical knockout over Ramage at Chicago Stadium Dec. 14. Ramage has been idle since his last match with Louis, while the latter extended his winning streak to fourteen by whipping Patsy Perroni at Detroit Jan. 4 and scoring a knockout over Hans Birkie at Pittsburgh Jan. 11.

The Boys Get Better.

Both Battaglia and Dukelsky have compiled fine records since their first meeting. Battaglia knocked out Bud Saltis at St. Paul last Oct. 23, and then fought a draw with Hayden [Young] Stuhley of Kewanee, Ill., at Chicago Stadium Nov. 2. Then he scored successive knockouts over George Black, Karl Ogren, and Kid Leonard. In his latest Dukelsky held the widely ballyhooed Babe Risko of Syracuse, N. Y., to a ten round draw at the Stadium Jan. 31.

Pacho is expected to give Day some of his hardest competition at the Coliseum. Day, eliminated by Don Gonzales of Cleveland, O., in the 1931 Golden Gloves tournament, is undefeated since his loss to Tommy Corbett at Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 7, 1934. He followed up that discouragement with triumphs over Patsy Burke at San Francisco, Cal., March 5; Gus Vegas at Oakland, March 14; Kenneth Reed at Los Angeles, March 27; George Engel in Chicago, April 23; Frank Marchese at New York, May 28, and Joey Kleko in Chicago.

Day Whips Sagilio.

Day failed to create much enthusiasm, however, until he knocked out the veteran Chilean, Stanislaus Loayza, in Chicago July 11. This accomplishment earned him a combat with Frank Sagilio, right after Sagilio earned national recognition by registering a knockout over Pete Nebo, at Mills stadium July 30. The battle was called a draw. After Davey stopped Frank Cinque at New York Sept. 17 he whipped Sagilio in a return engagement at Chicago Stadium Nov. 2. The contest against Pacho will be his first since then.

Pacho extended Champion Ross in junior welterweight championship matches at Los Angeles March 27 of last year and at Cleveland nine months later. He held Harry Dublinsky to a ten round draw at Philadelphia last Oct. 15.

The largest crowd to attend a boxing show in January was recorded at Detroit when 17,000 paid $28,000 to see Joe Louis whip Patsy Perroni. These receipts were topped at the Barney Ross-Frank Klick junior welterweight title fight at Miami, Fla., which was won by Ross. The gate was $36,000, but the attendance was 3,000 less than that at Detroit.

At Cicero stadium—One show drew 1,495; receipts, $1,469.

At Midway arena—Three shows drew 2,700; receipts, 1,260.

At Marigold Gardens—Four shows drew 3,900; receipts, $2,916.

The sectional champions this year represent the largest field of entrants in the history of amateur boxing. Every high grade amateur boxer within the territory has sought a place on these sectional teams this year.

Can Cleveland Repeat?

As a result practically all the teams are stronger than ever before. It is hard to pick a favorite in the splendid field. The Cleveland Plain Dealer team occupies that post of honor now because of the team championship it won last year and the presence of four of last year's title winners on this year's team.

Still in the contention for the world title were Ivar Ballangrud, Norwegian veteran, with fourth place in the short race and second in the 5,000 meters, and Hans Engnestangen rounding out a Norwegian big four, with second place in the 500 meters and fourth place in the long race.

THIS IS BIGGEST WEEK IN CHICAGO GOLDEN GLOVES

North, West, South Siders Pick Champions.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's Golden Gloves sectional tournaments, prelude to the mammoth Tournament of Champions, sweeps to a climax this week. Not only will this week's bouts on the north, west, and south sides name the amateur boxers who will pit their skill, strength, and endurance against the champions from eleven states, but the Chicago tournaments will establish a new mark for efficiency in conduct of the sectionals.

On Thursday night all three of Chicago's sectionals will be in action. At the Community Recreation center, 4711 Madison street, and at Loyola university gymnasium, Sheridan road and Loyola avenue, the finals of the west and north side tournaments will be held. At White City on Thursday night the semi-finals are scheduled. The south side's finals are booked for Friday night.

Open Tuesday at Loyola.

Despite this tremendous program, which will tax the experience of the officials as well as their numbers, interest centers on the north side meet which opens Tuesday night at Loyola university.

While there are only 320 entries, the heavy entry in the lightweight and welterweight classes, nearly seventy boxers in each, means that the action Tuesday night will demand the speed which always characterizes Golden Gloves. The Loyola tournament is conducted on the same system as a year ago, the only tournament to be so arranged. All boxers in the novice division, except heavyweights, report on Tuesday. On Wednesday the winners return and all open division boxers and the novice heavyweights are summoned. The finals will be held on Thursday when the eight open division qualifiers for the Tournament of Champions will be named.

At the same time the eight novice qualifiers for the semi-finals of the Chicago novice tournament at the Stadium on Feb. 25 will be known.

Two Rings on Two Nights.

Two rings will be used on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The finals on Thursday will require only one ring.

Boxers must report between 4 and 6 p. m. on the night assigned for medical examinations and to be weighed. Pairings will be held at 6:30 and boxing will start at 7 o'clock.

Admission will be 60 cents, plus tax, the same price that prevailed on the south and west sides.

The system in the sectionals which carried over the south and west side trials into the second week has been hailed as a complete success. It has given the boxers time to rest between their early bouts and the semi-finals. This reason alone is sufficient to insure that the idea will be retained next year.

Boys Get Fair Deal.

Golden Gloves this year also has strictly adhered to a major premise that no boy ever boxes more than twice in one evening. Many only appear once in the three round bouts of two minutes each. Secondly, in the six programs during the first week of the sectionals all boxers were on their way home before 11 o'clock on three nights. At White City the first two shows finished before midnight, while the opening program at the Recreation center ended a few minutes after midnight. However, less than ten boxers were in the building at midnight.

By these rules the officials believe they have safeguarded the boys as well as by stringent regulations for examination (each boxer is examined three times by the medical staf), and by rules for protection while in the ring. Most spectators do not know, for instance, that double padding is used under the ring canvas.

Another change in the conduct of the tournament has favored the spectator. Pairings are made only once in each weight and thus when the semi-finals and finals are reached the pairings for each program are known in advance. The Friday night program for the west side, as an example, was printed in THE TRIBUNE Friday morning.

32 Represent Chicago.

Thirty-two boys in the open class (four in each weight) will represent the Chicago sectionals in the Tournament of Champions. All will receive gold medals for winning these positions. Gold medals also will be awarded the thirty-two novice qualifiers who win places in the semi-finals Feb. 25 at the Stadium.

This is Chicago's contribution to the world's greatest tournament which will open a week from Monday and will require three rings, another record for the eighth Golden Gloves tournament.

Any one who harbors the idea he is a potential state bowling champion, that he has a partner with whom he can corral a doubles medal, or thinks he has a five man team ranking with the best may step right up and enter the 38th annual tournament of the Illinois State Bowling association.

Diamond medals for the champion in each event and special medals for the leaders in the all-events await bowlers who take part in the meet starting April 19 at Bruck's Recreation alleys. SETTER WINS NATIONAL QUAIL CHAMPIONSHIP

Mexico, Mo., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Victory today by Blackhawk Kid, 3 year old black and white setter owned and shown by C. E. Duffield, Tyler, Tex., who was named the 1935 National quail champion at the annual field trials for bird dogs conducted by the Association Amateur Field Trial clubs of America, was the first triumph for a setter in the national championship since 1923.

The trials, conducted over a tri-county central Missouri course of 16,500 acres for the last week, were concluded today. Gen. Jackson Jr., 3 year old setter, owned and shown by Dr. F. J. Boyd, Cincinnati, was named runner up.

USE U. S. BONDS TO BACK MONEY 2 MORE YEARS

President Extends Emergency Act.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Acting to insure an ample supply of federal reserve bank currency, President Roosevelt today continued for another two years the use of government bonds as security for federal reserve notes.

His proclamation did not affect the requirement that all federal reserve notes must be supported by a 40 per cent gold reserve. Since nationalization of gold, this has meant reserve banks must hold at least 40 per cent of the value of their note issues in gold certificates representing metal actually deposited in the treasury.

The proclamation extended until March 3, 1937, an emergency remedy forced in the early days of 1933, when the short term commercial paper ordinarily employed as collateral for federal reserve notes—the bulk of the money supply—dwindled to a vanishing point.

Treasury's Gold Depleted.

This situation demanded the use of more gold as collateral. At one time reserve note issues tied up as much as 72 per cent of the nation's gold supply and left the treasury in a precarious position in the face of heavy European withdrawals of the metal.

On the recommendation of Ogden Mills, secretary of the treasury under Herbert Hoover, who told congress a larger supply of free gold was needed, the reserve law was amended to permit the use of direct government obligations as reserve note collateral.

The authority was extended one more year by the banking act of 1934, which gave the President power to extend it for another two year period. This was the authority Mr. Roosevelt exercised in his proclamation.

How Money Can Be Issued.

On the basis of present federal reserve bank holdings of government bonds, the system could issue up to $4,050,000,000 in circulating notes. But each use of bonds as reserve note collateral requires the approval of a majority of the federal reserve board.

Originally, federal reserve note circulation was supported by 40 per cent gold and the balance in "eligible paper." This consisted of 30, 60, and 90 day commercial bills and, in some instances, nine month agricultural paper. This short term paper has not regained pre-depression volume.

The new banking bill just sent congress by the treasury would empower the federal reserve board to define the collateral for reserve notes. Broadening the collateral base, if the bill becomes law, was expected to remove the necessity of using government bonds.

Wheeler Urges More Money.

A broadside against issuance of government interest bearing notes came from Senator Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] tonight. Advocating issuance of currency to finance the $4,880,000,000 relief bill now being debated before the senate, he said if financed by bonds as now called for it would cost the people $100,000,000 a year.

"We would have no problem of underconsumption, socalled overproduction, unemployment and breadlines if this crushing debt structure could be removed," he said. "The United States government has borrowed nearly thirty billion dollars. Interest on this sum is paid at the rate of $900,000,000 a year.

"I have introduced an amendment to this bill which will provide for the issuance of non-interest bearing United States notes instead of bonds, with provision for retiring them from circulation at the rate of four per cent a year."

URGE HIGH COURT TO RULE ON FARM MORTGAGE LAW

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Supreme court was urged today to rule on the validity of the Frazier-Lemke law, virtually forced through in the closing hours of the last congress to help mortgage-harassed farmers.

The act has been a subject of dispute since its passage. President Roosevelt, in signing it, said it probably would need amendment.

In this particular case the Louisville Joint Stock Land bank held a $9,000 mortgage on the farm of William W. Radford Sr. He applied for the protection of the Frazier-Lemke law and obtained it in District court and Circuit Court of Appeals.

UTILITY RESCINDS BOND CALL, BUT WILL BUY THEM

Because of uncertainty over the gold clause decision, the Kansas City Power and Light company has rescinded its call for redemption on March 1 of $3,000,000 of its first mortgage thirty year 4½ per cent series B bonds.

However, it has offered to purchase at 104½ and accrued interest any or all of the bonds that had been called. Bondholders may present their bonds to the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, Chicago, or the Chase National bank, New York.

Report Ford Will Produce Car Parts in Spanish Plant

MADRID, Feb. 16.—[U.P.]—The Ford company has decided to make parts for its automobiles in its Bilbao factory, it was reported today. The decision followed a report from engineers that the Bilbao plant would be able to turn out quality work as fast as needed. Another American automobile manufacturer with a good Spanish market is reported also to be considering making parts for cars in Bilbao.

British Banks Fight Control by Politicians

BY HOWARD WOOD.

During the last five years when hard times have focused on the banks the criticisms of a depression weary public, the record of the British banks has frequently been pointed to as a pleasing contrast to the American experience.

The assumption has been that the British banks have been lending more liberally to industry to finance recovery. Even the President in a speech last autumn called attention to the British banks, inferring that they had aided their government in its financing problems to a greater degree than the American banks have helped the United States government.

American bankers quickly called attention to this false inference, showing that they hold a much larger proportion of the national debt than the proportion of the British government debt held by the British banks.

* *

Now, however, comes a new and interesting slant on the British situation, indicating that the problems of the British banks are essentially the same as those of banks in this country; that they are being subjected to the same sort of political criticism and that they, too, are having to defend themselves against the charge of holding up recovery by too conservative lending policies.

Copies of the annual reports of the chairmen of the big British banks, which have just arrived by mail, disclose that each institution is seeking to combat political agitation for socialization of banking. Each, too, feels called upon to explain that the cause of the low volume of loans is due to the unwillingness of good borrowers to ask for bank funds and not to the disinclination of the banks to lend.

* *

Chairman J. Beaumont Pease of Lloyds bank, one of the "big five," says in his annual report:

"Is it likely that they (the depositors) would willingly see their property put at the mercy of the whims of any political party by the nationalization of banks? And yet that is what is seriously threatened.

"We thrive by good trade and if we can do anything to promote it we shall be the first to benefit. But merely to be told that we have it in our power to restore prosperity to the country, but that either through stupidity or pigheadedness we refuse to do so, does not sound very convincing and would appear to be an insincere attempt to play on the ignorance of the public—who do not know what the possibilities and limitations of banking are—and to take advantage of the fact that they are not unnaturally on the lookout for some scapegoat on which to lay the blame for the present anomalies of want in the midst of plenty, the desire to work, and the lack of employment, the possibilities of vast supply and the continued shrinkage of effective demand."

* *

Mr. Pease, who recently returned from Australia, suggested that the mother country profit by the example set by the Australians in voting down the proposal to socialize banking.

"In Australia," he said, "I found that it was freely admitted, not only by the general public but by labor politicians themselves, that the threat against the banks had proved a very bad political cry.

"It antagonized all industrialists, who saw in the proposed nationalization of the banks a preliminary and acknowledged step toward the nationalization of their own businesses. It alarmed all depositors, who preferred the well tried trusteeship of their funds by the banks to the doubtful safety of their custody by a political party whose conduct of finance had been open to criticism in other directions, and they were further alarmed by the recent difficulties of the state owned New South Wales Savings bank.

"The result was the definite failure at the polls of this attempt to obtain possession of the banking business."

* *

There has been a lot of loose talk in England, Mr. Pease says, regarding "idle money in the hands of banks."

"The resources in their hands," he continues, "with the exception of their capital, are the result entirely of the deposits left in their safe keeping by the public, and their first duty is to see that these deposits are so employed that there can be no difficulty in refunding them to the rightful owners; that is, the depositors, when called upon to do so."

Lack of demand for funds by borrowers, he explains, has forced the banks to invest more in securities. In December all clearing banks reported an average of 30.2 per cent of their deposits devoted to such investments, compared with only 15.2 per cent in 1929.

* *

Chairman Rupert E. Beckett of the Westminster bank, another of the "big five," struck a similar strain in his annual report.

"I claim," he said, "that the banks of this country have surmounted the difficulties and complexities of recent years with enhanced prestige, and certainly with a record superior to that of any other group of banks in any country of the world. Is this the time, then, seriously to propose that the control of the banks should be taken out of the hands of those who have proved themselves and placed under the direction of a state department, and the savings of the millions of bank depositors made the basis of socialistic experiment?"

* *

Reginald McKenna, chairman of the big Midland bank, in his annual report warned against political monopoly of banking.

"We must not forget that a monopoly would still be a monopoly, even though under direct state management and control. If it stood for a private combination of the existing banks it would be called a money trust—a name of ill omen for commercial freedom. But it would be none the less a money trust if the control were exercised by a nominee of the government.

"What protection would the customer have if all banking were under one control? Then, indeed, the power of the single bank could be misused oppressively in a manner we are now hardly able to conceive."

Paris Scandal Bulletin Heavy Blow to British

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Paris gave London a heavy blow this week when a wireless station, in one of its news bulletins, informed the continent that Britain was on the eve of disclosing a scandal that would rival the Stavisky affair.

REGINALD McKENNA.

Heavy selling in British government securities from the continent immediately followed and the London giltedged market got the biggest jolt it has had since 1932. The "scandal" referred to was the recent heavy ities trust and Tobacco Investments.

Favors an Investigation.

The Economist does not suggest that McKenna has actually been gambling in those two commodities, but thinks there should be an investigation as to whether Mincing Lane brokers who overbought in behalf of the pools were led to do so by the fact that McKenna was chairman of those two companies which, to the outward view, were closely connected with metal and produce brokers, James & Shakespeare, which went down in the crash.

At present McKenna is on a holiday in South Africa, but he is not expected to ignore the Economist which has always been notably friendly to him, and the whole matter now seems headed for a clearing.

Walter Runcyman, president of the Board of Trade, has been called upon to disclose the "higherups" in the house of commons Tuesday.

But the broadcast from Paris synchronized with other adverse domestic factors which have been hard to bear. The ministry of labor reported a rise of 239,500 in the number of idle in January. This showing surpasses the worst January figures, those of 1932.

Some Well Meant Words.

On top of this the financial editor of the Daily Mail in an effort to encourage the fainthearted to keep their investments in Britain, discusses frankly the possible defeat of the national government and the return of the Labor party to power.

"What the British investor realizes," he wrote, "is that whatever political party is in power here, it is as good as, if not better than, any political party abroad. Financially and politically we lead the world and would continue to do so even if the very worst happened and the Socialist government should in the next year or two hold office for a short period." These well meant words have not had the effect intended.

Participants in the pepper "corner" have sought aid of Dutch interests in an effort to salvage something from the crash. A coöperative marketing plan is considered.

About the "stickiest" market we now have is tin which got into a "jam" through excessive control. Six months ago tin was pointed out as an admirable commodity whose price was stabilized. Today it is friendless.

MILD RECESSION IN TRADE SHOWN BY MAIN INDICES

New York, Feb. 16.—Statistics appearing during the last week indicated a moderate decline in business activity according to Moody's index figures for freight car loadings, electric power production, and steel ingot output. These index figures are adjusted for seasonal variation—that is, if the change from the previous week should coincide with the normal seasonal change the index figure would be unchanged.

Invest or Get Out, Mexico Tells Sun Life Company

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 16.—[U. P.]—The Sun Insurance company of Canada was ordered today by the treasury department to comply with Mexican law by investing 3,500,000 pesos or 70 per cent of its reserves in national securities or to leave the country for alleged evasion of the requirement.

FOOD PRICES RISING, BUT AAA WON'T DROP CONTROL PROGRAMS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Despite rising prices of food, the Agricultural Adjustments administration said today in a formal statement that it was "not considering abandonment of any program now in effect." At the same time the AAA said that statements that the farm prices of 14 basic commodities were 24 points above pre-war parity "is incorrect."

The administration, however, recently stated that the price level of the 14 basic commodities, those on which processing taxes may be levied for benefit payments, were virtually at the parity level. Parity is described in the adjustment act as the price for which farm commodities must sell to have the purchasing power they had in the 1909-'14 period.

AAA officials pointed out today that reduction programs are in effect for several major food crops this year. The statement said that "all of the major programs for 1935 call for increases over 1934 farm production."

DOLLAR LOWER ON GOLD MONEY, GAINS ON POUND

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—While gaining against the British pound and its followers, the dollar weakened against the gold bloc currencies in foreign exchange markets today. The movements were not large, but were somewhat beyond the scope of the usual Saturday dullness.

French francs were up ⅝ point to 6.60⅛ cents, guilders rose 4 points to 67.64 cents, belgas gained 1½ points to 23.35½ cents, Swiss francs rose 3 points to 32.39 cents. Sterling cheapened ⅜ cent to $4.87⅛. The Canadian dollar was off 1-32 cent to a discount of ¼ cent, the Japanese yen fell 2 points to 28.44 cents. Scandinavian exchanges were unchanged. Marks remained at 40.15 cents, and lire declined ½ point to 8.48 cents.

At the closing price on the French franc the dollar was worth $1.0049, compared with $1.0058 yesterday. The gold value of the dollar against francs was 59.35 cents, compared with 59.41 yesterday and par of 59.06 cents.

Gold prices in London were unchanged at 142 shillings 8½ pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.79, based on the opening of sterling at $4.87½. The New York Federal Reserve bank reported the arrival today of $7,293,200 gold from France and the receipt as of Friday of $344,000 gold from France.

GOLD COUNTRIES TRY TO BREAK TARIF BARRIERS

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

Brussels, Feb. 16.—The gold bloc countries have sent out a "feeler" to Great Britain asking for coöperation in suspension of the most favored nation clause. This plea is for international coöperation to increase trade exchanges which are declining rapidly under present conditions.

The move on the part of the gold bloc nations was revealed in an official communique issued today concerning a meeting held here on Feb. 12 about which no statement was issued at the time. Only delegates from France, Belgium, and Luxembourg attended this meeting and the communique by the Belgian government is issued in their behalf.

Should Britain agree to suspension or partial removal of the effects of the most favored nation clause, other countries would be invited to participate and a general lowering of tarifs and removal of restrictions on trade might thus be facilitated.

STEEL OUTPUT IN YOUNGSTOWN 60% THIS WEEK

Youngstown area steel mills will operate at the highest level for this season since 1930 during the current week, according to Dow, Jones & Co. Plants will start the week at 60 per cent of capacity, compared with 50 per cent a year ago, 17 per cent in 1933, 35 per cent in 1932, and 50 per cent in 1931.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube company's Brier Hill works will be operated for the first time in two years. Ingot production there will offset small losses in other plants.

Pittsburgh district operations are expected to drop 2 points, to 40 per cent. Last week output fell 3 points, to 42 per cent. The 40 per cent level is expected to hold until March 1, when a renewal of orders may again expand activity.

Stockholder Publicity Irks Stenographer

How annoyance of the average business man in having his personal affairs subjected to the glare of publicity may be spread to his associates was illustrated last week in telephone conversation with a distraught secretary. Figures on stockholdings reported to the Securities and Exchange commission by a number of prominent Chicagoans were released in Washington. A reporter was endeavoring to check the figures with the men affected. One was gone for the day and his secretary was perturbed.

"Do you really have to print it," the girl queried. "It's just going to be awful around here if that gets in the paper. He didn't like it very well, having to make the report in the first place, but now I know he'll just hit the ceiling and bounce."

Philip K. Wrigley seldom chews the gums his company has made world known. "I chew my competitors' gums to try and find out what's in 'em. I know what's in my own," he said.

Which recalls a remark made to a TRIBUNE reporter by William K. Wrigley Jr. several years before the world war had taught Europe how to chew gum.

"I used to carry packages in my pockets when I was over in England," he said, "and would pass out sticks to scrub women, stenographers, and others. Invariably they regarded it merely as candy and swallowed it.

"I tried to explain that it was to chew and not swallow, but they'd only grin and say 'Why chew it? We're not cows. It tastes good,' and then they'd gulp it down."

The recent news item concerning the members of the DePauw university economics class that had the assignment of investing a mythical $10,000 in the stock market brought to light a story concerning a similar assignment in an Illinois university quite a few years ago.

The students were required to turn in weekly reports on all trading done. One of the students, the son of a well known market plunger, got tips from his dad and made a good paper profit. He received an excellent grade for the course. Part of the reason for the grade, however, might have been the fact that the professor conducting the course had been following the son's "speculations" with hard cash.

Members of the Traffic Club of Chicago are to retrieve at least one prerogative usurped by women during A Century of Progress exposition. Club rooms for the period were thrown open to visiting women at all times. The fair ended but the women didn't stop using the quarters and irate members voiced loud protests over incursion of their rights.

Governors of the club ruled yesterday that the lounge and private dining rooms will be reserved for males until after 2 p. m.

"But," the statement added, "it is desired to emphasize privileges of the club will be available to ladies and their guests every day in the week, including luncheon and dinner." The governors, apparently, seek an easy out between the cross fire of club and domestic criticism.

Isador Lubin, federal commissioner of labor statistics, has hit upon a sure-fire method of cutting down his mailing list. Recipients of the commissioner's releases on labor statistics were notified by card, postmarked Feb. 7, that unless they signified the desire for future releases by Jan. 31 their names would be stricken from the mailing list.

PENNSYLVANIA LINE'S PROFITS DIP SLIGHTLY

Pennsylvania railroad earnings in 1934 were slightly lower according to a preliminary report released yesterday. The road placed net income at $18,815,693 after taxes and fixed charges, equal to $1.43 a share on 13,167,696 shares of $50 par stock outstanding. This compares with net of $19,281,169, or $1.46 a share, in 1933 and net of $13,753,536, or $1.03 a share in 1932.

The balance transferred to profit and loss was $206,092 after the company had applied $5,095,380 to sinking fund and other reserve funds, $13,167,696 to dividend requirements and $346,525 to construction expenditures, operating deficits, and advances to leased lines.

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railway, controled by the Chicago and North Western, reported a net deficit of $1,923,210 for the year, compared with a loss of $1,060,225 in 1933 and $2,864,234 in 1932.

REPORT OF AUTO LABOR BOARD RAPS A. F. OF L.

Relations Improved; No Union Problem.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The administration continued its running skirmish with the American Federation of Labor today through publication of a report by the automobile labor board that labor relations were improving steadily in the huge motor car industry.

There could be no question, the board said, that relationships between employers and employés "have been materially raised" since the board started work last March. Complaints of discrimination against union members have diminished materially, the board, headed by Leo Wolman, added, and "collective bargaining between the management and representatives of many groups of workers is being extensively carried on through the industry."

President Roosevelt's tacit approval of the board's work two weeks ago in continuing it at the time the automobile code was renewed brought into the open a row between the federation and the administration that had been simmering a long time. Nor did it show any signs of abating today.

"It is the board's judgment after ten months' experience in the industry that discrimination caused by union activity or union membership is not a problem of any magnitude at the present time and has not been for some time in the past," the report said.

The board's report did not touch the federation's primary complaint against it—that it did not provide "majority rule," which is that the labor organization representing the majority of the workers shall collectively bargain for all of them.

Finds Federation in Minority.

Primaries at 12 plants, the board said, showed that only 2,286 of 53,771 employés wanted the American Federation of Labor to represent them. More than 90 per cent of the employés voted. Nevertheless, the board reported that "officers of the American Federation of Labor local unions in the automobile manufacturing industry constantly are engaged in negotiations with the managements on various matters."

Departmental representatives and plant bargaining agencies from plants where the elections were held, the board said, "have freely presented their views not only on the general problem of facilitating the processes of negotiation and of collective bargaining, but on many detailed questions."

Many Disputes Settled.

The board said that its ruling and decisions "have been generally obeyed." In 1,061 of the 2,035 cases handled, the complainants were returned to work without a hearing. In 550 of the remaining cases complaints were withdrawn, dropped or lapsed; in 199 decisions were issued by the board; in 12 more decisions are soon to be issued; in 13 the cases are awaiting a hearing; in 139 replies from complainants are being awaited, and in 61 replies from companies have not yet been received.

"The board has served more as a personal agency for the companies than as an independent tribunal," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said tonight in a statement.

"The automobile workers, members of federal labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor," he added, "will have nothing to do with the automobile labor board."

U.S. Bank to Close Mukden Branch; Business Declines

MUKDEN, Feb. 16.—The Mukden branch of the National City Bank of New York will close May 31, it was announced today, reflecting the decline of American business in this section since the establishment by Japan of the state of Manchukuo.

COMMODITY PRICES MOVE IRREGULARLY DURING LAST WEEK

The trend of prices in the leading commodity markets last week was irregular. The outstanding changes were new high quotations reached in the lard and sugar markets. Some of the other markets also firmed up because of the reëntry of commercial demand. A new low price was established in the coffee market as a result of Brazil's manipulation of her exchange fund. Butter and eggs, which for several weeks had been advancing to successively new high prices, eased off slightly during the last few days.

Yesterday's closing quotations on a representative of commodities is shown in the following table, which also lists prices of the preceding Saturday and the high and low figures for the season:

Capital Plan of Wilson Co. Wins Support

Approval of Wilson & Co.'s recapitalization plan by stockholders is assured, it was learned yesterday. While Thomas E. Wilson, chairman of the company, declined to comment on proxy deposits other than to say "they are coming in satisfactorily," it was reported elsewhere a sufficient number has been received to put the plan across. Stockholders will vote on the plan at their annual meeting Tuesday.

THOMAS E. WILSON.

Meanwhile, Louis J. O'Malley, president of the New England Financial Service, announced in Boston he will attend the meeting, representing New England stockholders, to oppose the proposed reorganization and submit a plan which he termed "more equitable to all classes of stockholders than the plan proposed by the company."

Cites Objections to Plan.

"Under the present proposal," O'Malley said, "preferred stockholders lose their rights to 7 per cent stock, accepting 6 per cent shares in return. Class A stockholders are deprived of their rights to prior dividends and are placed on a parity with common share holders.

"It has been reported a majority of preferred and common stockholders has assented to the plan but class A stockholders are out in the cold. I intend to see class A shareholders are protected."

O'Malley's plan calls for exchange of present preferred for new $7 preferred in the ratio of 1.26 shares for each share now held; creation of new $2.50 cumulative convertible preferred class A stock, exchanged shares for share and an equal exchange of common for new common. The A stock would be callable at $50 and be convertible into 4 shares of common within a given time. Class A shareholders would be given a bonus of one common share in lieu of back dividends.

Wilson Defends Proposal.

Mr. Wilson said yesterday critics of the proposal ignore the position of the class A stockholders under the present setup. Capitalization is so constituted, he said, that many years must elapse before they stand the slightest chance of receiving any return on their investment. The new plan makes provision for dividend payments at a much earlier date than otherwise would be possible, he declared.

Under the plan each share of 7 per cent preferred stock on which there is $26.25 in unpaid dividends will be exchanged for 1.4292 shares of no par $6 preferred. Class A stock on which there is $21.25 per share in unpaid dividends, will be exchangeable into five shares of new common, while the present common will be exchanged share for share.

Completion of the plan would leave outstanding 324,783 shares of $6 preferred and 1,566,180 common shares, which the company has asked the New York Stock exchange to qualify for listing.

CITY NATIONAL, EVANSTON, MAY REPAY IN FULL

The liquidating committee of the City National Bank and Trust company of Evanston yesterday submitted a cheerful report to depositors. The bank failed to open after the 1933 moratorium, and 60 per cent of its deposit liabilities was assumed by the new First National Bank and Trust company of Evanston. The committee, serving without pay, was charged with liquidating the part remaining. Of the 40 per cent impounded, 30 per cent, or 12 per cent of the original liability, has been repaid.

"Given sufficient time, and assuming that there is a reasonable improvement in business conditions," the committee stated, "we believe that it will be possible to pay the depositors in full; and we hope that there will be something left for distribution among the stockholders of the bank.

"The committee expects to pay one or more additional liquidating dividends before the end of the second year of liquidation, June 21 next, and indulges the hopes that it may prove possible within perhaps one year thereafter to meet the balance of deposit liabilities." The liquidation period originally was to end next June, but an extension is expected.

Members of the liquidating committee are John S. Burchmore, James M. Flinn, and Nels M. Hokanson.

SEC TO FIGHT RULING CURBING ITS RIGHT TO SUE

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Securities and Exchange commission will test a federal court ruling that it cannot bring court actions through its own counsel, the New York office of the SEC disclosed tonight.

The commission will appeal from the decision of Federal Judge Francis G. Caffery, who held SEC suits could be prosecuted only by the federal district attorneys as representatives of the attorney general.

Judge Caffery dismissed SEC complaints recently in the Eurydice Gold Mining company and the Stock Market Finance cases, the latter involving sales of Fada Radio and Electric corporation stock, on this ground.

U. S. IMPORTING FOOD SUPPLIES ON BIG SCALE

Drouth and AAA End Self-Sufficiency.

American agricultural self sufficiency, maintained with few exceptions since the country was first settled, has been lost as the result of devastating drouths of the last two years and the New Deal crop control schemes.

Today the United States is importing corn and oats from Argentina, rye from Poland and Russia, wheat from France, Argentina, and Canada, butter from Argentina, New Zealand, and Australia, and eggs and cattle from Canada.

In some instances imports have been made because high prices here have made it possible for foreigners to ship to this country, pay existing tarifs, and still offer their product at prices attractive to the American consumer. In other cases actual need of the product caused the move.

Grain Import Figures.

In the last six months of 1934 a total of 12,933,000 bushels of wheat was brought in. During the same period 2,807,000 bushels of corn, 5,141,000 oats, and 3,680,000 bushels of rye arrived. Grain imports since the start of this year are said to be proportionately heavy.

More than 2,000,000 pounds of butter are said to have been shipped from foreign countries to the United States this season. Some observers place this figure as high as 2,500,000. Shipments totaling 1,500,000 pounds in addition are reported en route to New York.

Storage stocks and production are at extremely low levels. Stocks in Chicago which last year totaled 30 million pounds now amount to only 2,200,000. New York had 10 millions last year but now has 700,000 pounds.

Little Change Expected.

Little change in the situation is expected for several months. April usually marks the change in trend when production balances consumption and not until May do stocks normally start to creep up.

A similar situation exists in eggs where the bottom of the box is scraped about Feb. 1. Production thereafter starts its upward swing, but this condition has not prevailed this year. Current receipts are half those of a year ago. High costs of feed last fall moved many farmers to kill their chickens instead of gambling on a possible higher price for eggs after the turn of the year. No figures are available on Canadian shipments of eggs to this country, but a considerable quantity is said to have been exported.

Cattle Are Imported.

High prices to which domestic beef have risen because of small supplies due to drouth and the government's slaughtering program have resulted in several experimental shipments of Canadian cattle to this country. More than 200 head have been received here in the last few days.

With an average price of $10.55 per hundredweight, including the federal tax, prevailing on the Chicago market Canadians can afford to pay the $3 tarif and $1 shipping costs and make profit on sales above $9.

The extent to which cattle imports may eventually go is unknown. A moderate recession in price coupled with an advance in Canada would narrow the profit margin so much that further shipments would be halted, cattle men believe.

EXCHANGE READY FOR SAFETY ACT IN GOLD RULING

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Members of the board of governors of the New York Stock exchange were notified today to hold themselves in readiness for a possible special meeting on Monday in the event that the United States Supreme court hands down its decision in the gold clause cases. Twenty-one of the forty governors live outside of the city and are sometimes difficult to locate quickly in emergencies.

The governing committee has reached an agreement with the securities and exchange commission regarding the exchange's procedure in the event of a decision upholding validity of the gold clauses seriously affects the nation's stock markets. It is generally believed that members of the commission favor suspension of trading during and for a period following the reading of the court's opinion on the theory that such a course will provide a more stable market.

SUGAR SHARES GAIN ON UPTURN IN COMMODITY

General Market Is Highly Irregular.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 16.—Stocks milled around in their usual week-end fashion today. Prices were generously mixed with standard issues generally showing an inclination to seek easier levels.

Sugar stocks made the best impression of the more active groups, the demand for them being based on the rise of sugar futures to the highest price in five years. American and South Porto Rican rose a point or so each. Cuban American advanced 1⅝ and the senior stock of Guantanamo 3 points. Great Western marched with the procession in the earlier dealings, but a flurry of evening up orders in the late trading set it back to its previous close.

Utilities Sag Again.

The liquidation of utilities which this week forced the group's average to a new low figure, continued on a dribbling scale. Consolidated Gas bumped a new all-time bottom and United Gas Improvement, Public Service of New Jersey, American Water Works, and others were pressed fractionally lower. The selling in this corner of the market is due to the administration's attitude toward holding companies and to the pending legislation looking to the further intrusion of the federal power commission into the intra-state regulation of public light and power companies.

Announcement of the reorganization plan of the National department stores caused a flurry in the market for stocks of that company. At the outset traders bought the preferred and sold the common, but the bulge in the senior shares brought out offerings which broke the market a point between sales, wiped out all of the gain, and bore the issue down more than five points below its previous close.

Metal Shares Weaken.

Some further selling came into the gold and silver mining shares despite fresh flurries of inflation talk in Washington. Homestake dropped $8 a share on one sale and U. S. Smelting receded nearly a point.

Railroad shares did little either way. Farm implements backed and filled in the earlier dealings but the division closed slightly lower.

Steels were inclined to lag on uncertainties about the industry's operations. Youngstown output is scheduled at 60 per cent for the next week. Building and food shares were quiet.

American Can featured the industrial division, once more selling up to the best price since 1931 in response to improved earnings.

URGES BUSINESS OPPOSE UNSAFE AGED PENSIONS

Credit Official Warns of Social Security Plans.

Business men yesterday were called upon to realize that social security of some kind is in the making and that it is their responsibility to offer logical and spirited opposition to such dangerous proposals as the Townsend plan which would bring ruin to the country.

This was the message of Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men in his monthly review of business released through the Chicago Association of Credit Men. Calling attention to the pressure being put on congress for enactment of the Townsend plan of $200 a month for all over 60, Mr. Heimann urged business men to point out its defects rather than indulge in blind opposition.

Plan Now Before Congress.

"In the debate following the introduction of the President's social security program, and the bills attendant to that program," he said, "there has been a tendency to overlook the fact that the Townsend plan, no matter how fantastic in its conception and announced mechanics, is actually before congress.

"It is well to consider and realize that social security of some kind is in the making. Whether it will settle down as a permanent part of our governmental-social scheme is something that time will tell. It is, however, significant that 43 states are at present acting on social security and that over 300 bills have been introduced as a result of the President's message on social security to the previous congress last June.

"The Townsend plan is open to several criticisms. One of the strongest points against it is the haphazard manner in which it seems to have been put together. Yet its friends shrug their shoulders when obstacles or criticisms are brought forth.

Brands Scheme as Inflation.

"Essentially the Townsend plan is inflation of a different brand. Congress would not have to pass it to produce this inflation; it could simply vote to hand out 20 billion dollars of paper money within the next year. That would bring inflation.

"Living costs would rise, salary and wage earners would suffer, fixed income people would be brought close to ruin. A rise in prices is incidental to prosperity, but rising prices do not automatically bring prosperity. We have had the same thing brought home in the last two years with the efforts of the NRA, which intended to bring prosperity back by giving every one extra wages. Of course, the extra wages had to be added to the cost of the goods manufactured and immediately the gain was nullified.

Warns of Higher Taxes.

"Unfortunately for the advocates of the Townsend plan, the national income in 1934 was only about 45 billion dollars. To take almost half of the national income and turn it over to those over 60 would be economically impossible. Accordingly, it would be necessary to raise the amount, just as the Townsend planners advocate, by taxation. On the basis of the 1934 income it would be necessary to tax a $1 article so much that its price would be $1.45. Such taxation would lower the purchasing power of most every one by about 30 per cent."

Something must be done to help our aged people, however, Mr. Heimann agreed, pointing to insurance company statistics, which show that only 8 of 100 persons reaching the age of 60 are financially independent. Fourteen are dependent on charity and the other 78 are wholly or partially dependent on their earnings.

BUSINESS DONE BY BANK CHECKS SHOWS DECLINE

Business activity declined 15.9 per cent in the seventh federal reserve district last week, based on the value of checks drawn against individual accounts.

Chicago debits amounted to $436,085,000, against $381,526,000 in the 1934 period; Detroit reported $132,034,000, compared with $99,348,000; Des Moines, $15,694,000, against $10,713,000; Indianapolis, $26,741,000, against $23,773,000, and Milwaukee, $51,953,000, against $42,052,000.

RETAIL TRADE ENTERS NEW ERA, SAYS D. F. KELLY

Declares Business Must Plan Accordingly.

D. F. Kelly, president of The Fair store, yesterday told the Saturday Forum of the Economic Club of Chicago that retail merchandising is in a new era. The past must be forgotten, the NRA is here, probably to stay, and business must plan accordingly, he said. The need for change from old courses was imperative, he asserted.

Holding that salesmanship is the basis of all business activity, Mr. Kelly said that The Fair and all other progressive stores are changing their methods of management and operation, and are "getting rid of the mahogany, the walnut, and the oak fixtures" to produce a new and cheerful place which will attract the customer.

Some Codes Fall Short.

The NRA code for retailers, which he helped draw, is fair, but codes covering operations of manufacturers have fallen short of hopes and "in some instances advantage is being taken of the opportunity to add charges, to eliminate discounts and terms that will make it more and more certain that the codes themselves will be eliminated if the practices I have in mind are continued, or that the price of merchandise will have to be increased to absorb those charges."

"We are unalterably opposed to price fixing in any form," he said. "We are thoroughly in sympathy with the effort that is being made to protect the small dealer by eliminating so-called loss leaders, to the extent of insisting that no merchandise may be sold for less than actual cost plus 10 per cent. It is obvious that cost should include freight charges.

Helps Small Dealer.

"We firmly believe that if merchandise is sold in accordance with this loss leader feature of the code, there can be no question but that the small dealer is placed in the same position as is the larger store."

Mr. Kelly expressed firm belief that the President will be successful in efforts to improve conditions of labor and capital, but "only if everyone will do his part in an honorable manner."

EXTRA 15 CENT DIVIDEND VOTED BY GLIDDEN CO.

Glidden company yesterday declared an extra dividend of 15 cents and the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents on the common stock, in addition to the quarterly disbursement of $1.75 on the preferred stock. All dividends are to be paid April 1 to stock of record March 18. Similar extras on the common stock were paid in the two preceding quarters.

United-Carr Fastener corporation yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, payable March 15 to stock of record March 5. In the preceding quarter the company paid 15 cents and an extra of 10 cents a share.

Dividends voted in the last week included 12 favorable changes, compared with 19 in the preceding week and 5 unfavorable changes, against 6, Standard Statistics company announced yesterday.

Important dividend meetings scheduled for this week include E. I. du Pont de Nemours on Monday, National Biscuit, Texas Corporation, and Chesapeake and Ohio railway on Tuesday; American Telephone and Telegraph on Wednesday, and International Harvester and National Dairy Products on Thursday.

LIFE INSURANCE INVESTMENT IS MEETING TOPIC

The mid-winter meeting of the financial section of the American Life Convention of Chicago will be held next Friday at the Palmer house, featuring a discussion of bond investments from the standpoints of purchase, retention, and sale.

Yardsticks for analysis of securities from these viewpoints will be offered in three papers. "Governments" will be discussed by Don F. Roberts, treasurer of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance company, Washington, D. C.; "Municipals" by George A. Bangs, president of the United Mutual Life. "Utilities" by George E. Phelps of Duff and Phelps, public utility security analysts. Dan N. Bacot, consulting engineer with Railroad Analyses, Inc., will offer the paper on "Railroads."

The farm real estate and mortgage problems will be discussed by D. T Torrens, vice president of the Kansas City Life, and C. J. Claassen, president of the Farmers National company of Omaha.

EVENING UP CAUSES SLIGHT RECESSION IN LARD PRICES

Scattered profit taking in lard futures found new buying slow in developing yesterday and prices dipped 15 cents at the extreme before support was in evidence. Provision brokers were of the opinion a good part of the selling was in the way of evening up for a possible gold clause decision on Monday, and the aggregate trade was light. Little attention was paid to the government report on hogs on farms issued Friday. The trade was somewhat surprised by the reduction of only 500,000 pounds in local lard stocks during the first half of the current month, having anticipated a somewhat heavier decrease. Lard closed 7½ cents lower, while bellies were nominally 2½ to 7½ cents lower. Cash lard closed at $13.32; loose, $13.15; leaf, $13.25, and bellies, $16.50. Prices per 100 pounds follow:

Lard.

	High.	Low.	Close Feb.16 1935.	Close Feb.15 1935.	Close Feb.17 1934.
May	$13.47	$13.35	$13.42	$13.50	$6.72
July	13.60	13.52	13.57	13.65	6.80
Sept.	13.70	13.60	13.65	13.72	7.00

	High.	Low.	Close Feb.16 1935.	Close Feb.15 1935.	Close Feb.17 1934.
May			16.45	16.52	8.12
July			16.67	16.70	8.4

Note—Above prices include processing tax at 2.47c per lb on lard and 2.62c per lb on bellies taxed on produce made since March, 1934. This tax is rebated on produce exported, but varies according to the amount due to the fact that the tax was gradually advanced.

Weather Cycle Gives Hint of Dry Spring in Middle West

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—A strong hint that the midwest and west, baked dry last year, may expect at least a touch of drouth in 1935 came today from the weather bureau. The bureau said it had discovered an eleven month weather cycle which, if it runs true to form, means a warm and dry late spring for the midwest.

Phrasing its announcement carefully, the bureau made no mention of drouth, but it pointed out that much of the great plains district is still dry enough to make spring rains important in insuring good crops.

"Late spring will be warm and dry in the midwest this year if May conforms to its usual practice of bringing high temperatures eleven months after an abnormally hot June," the weather bureau said.

Report 11-Month Cycle.

"Climatologists of the weather bureau have discovered a definite eleven month weather sequence from May's habit of being warm when June of the year before has been abnormally warm.

"Past records show that every June for which temperatures five degrees above normal were recorded was followed the next year by a warm May over the most of the Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys. When June temperatures were five degrees or more below normal the sequence still held with cool Mays."

Last June was far above normal in temperature in this area, averaging as much as eight to ten degrees above normal for the entire month in some sections.

Sufficient Moisture in Parts.

From the central plains eastward there is now sufficient moisture to give crops a good start, the weather bureau reported, but the plains area from North Dakota and Montana southward is still lacking in moisture reserves to a considerable degree.

Good spring rains will be needed as far west as the continental divide to insure a good start for crops, the weather bureau said. Normally the heaviest precipitation in this area does not come until March or April. The east, south, southwest, and west coastal areas are well supplied with moisture in most regions.

STATE OIL PACT IS DESIGNED TO PREVENT WASTE

But Some Say It O. K.'s Price Fixing.

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 16.—(AP)—An oil production compact interpreted by proponents of price fixing and specific allocation of production quotas as permitting these two policies by implication was adopted unanimously at the oil states' conference today.

Actual mention of the debated policies on price fixing and production quotas was pointedly avoided. Representatives of nine oil producing states voted on the compact.

Gov. E. W. Marland of Oklahoma, who receded from a plan for determination of market demand and assignment of production allowables as a measure to boost prices, said success of the agreement "depends on the good faith of Texas."

To Eliminate Waste.

Gov. James V. Allred of Texas held out through two days and a night for limitation of the agreement itself to providing means for the elimination of physical waste of oil. He won his point.

The delegates from Kansas, California, Illinois, Michigan, and Arkansas said they questioned their authority to sign a compact as such, but would sign an agreement to recommend the measure to their governors and legislatures.

The pact will become operative upon ratification by the legislatures of any three of the states of Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and New Mexico, affecting only those which obtain legislative approval.

What Pact Provides.

Compacting states agree to enact laws, or to keep in force existing laws, to prevent operation of any oil well with an inefficient gas-oil ratio; the drowning by water of any stratum capable of producing oil or gas in paying quantities; the avoidable escape or the wasteful burning of gas from a natural gas well; the creation of unnecessary fire hazards; the drilling, equipping, locating, spacing, or operating of a well or wells so as to bring about physical waste of oil or gas or loss in the ultimate recovery thereof; the inefficient, excessive, or improper use of the reservoir energy in producing any well.

A provision that those should be the "sole" purposes of the compact was deleted and the following language added to the draft as submitted by Allred: "The enumeration of the foregoing subjects shall not limit the scope of the authority of any state."

Signatory states agreed to enact laws providing that oil produced in violation of conservation statutes should be denied access to commerce and to assess stringent penalties for waste of oil or gas.

FARMERS USE 3% OF U. S. LOANS TO PAY FEDERAL TAX

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Three per cent of the money loaned to farmers by the farm credit administration has been returned to the United States treasury as payment for current and delinquent taxes, according to a compilation made by Gov. W. I. Myers. This, he said, was a "happy sign" of better conditions.

From May 1, 1933, through Dec. 31, 1934, the federal land banks and land bank commissioner loaned $1,494,000,000 on the security of farm mortgages, and $45,211,018, or 3 per cent, was used to pay taxes, Myers said.

PRODUCTION OF PORK SETS 24 YEAR LOW RECORD FOR JANUARY

A 24 year low record for January pork production was established last month, according to an analysis published yesterday by the Institute of American Meat Packers. The number of hogs processed into pork under federal inspection during the month showed a decline of 43 per cent, compared with January, 1934.

Approximately 3,000,000 hogs were dressed by the meat packing industry in January as compared with more than 5,250,000 a year ago. Production showed a decline of more than 25 per cent compared with December, 1934.

Production from cattle and calves increased in January as compared with a year ago, due in part to continued liquidation of animals under the government's drouth relief program.

Federal inspected slaughter for January with comparisons follows:

	Jan. 1935.	Jan. 1934.	Pct.
Cattle	977,018	831,000	*17.6
Calves	511,523	471,000	*8.6
Hogs	3,047,033	5,391,000	†43.5
Sheep	1,344,636	1,407,000	†4.4

*Increase. †Decrease.

Cattle, calves and sheep purchased by the government as part of the drouth relief program are included in figures for January, 1935.

CATTLE AND HOG PRICES YIELDING FEEDERS PROFIT

Cattle and hogs soared to the highest levels in recent years on meager receipts last week. For the first time in many months both species at the same time are returning more for corn than the farmer can get for the grain in the market. Fluctuations were sharper toward the close of the week when wholesale meat prices failed to follow the rise.

The week's general average price of steers moved up 30 cents to $10.55, highest since December, 1930, and highest for February in five years. Steers a year ago averaged $5.60 and two years ago the price was $4.80, only 10 cents over the lowest level since February, 1905.

Since the AAA stopped buying cattle on Feb. 5, there has been a marked letup in the movement to all markets in the country. Cattle receipts at Chicago last week at 32,900 were smallest, barring the Christmas holiday week, since April, 1933.

Lamb prices moved up during the week on the smallest supplies since November, both sheep and lambs indicating net gains of 25 to 35 cents for the six day period. The week's general average for lambs at $8.35 was $1.10 under the same time last year and $1.50 under the high week of 1934.

Small receipts have driven hogs up $2.20 to $3.60 in the last two months. The week's average at $10.50, including $2.25 processing tax, stands highest since March, 1930, and compares with $6 a year ago, when $1.50 of the price was tax.

A deadlock developed in the hog market yesterday when buyers attempted to reduce quotations 5 to 10 cents in face of record light receipts. Salesmen finally held over practically all good to choice grades.

GRAINS STEADY; TRADERS AWAIT DECREE ON GOLD

Volume Tapers After Swell Earlier in Week.

May Halt for Decision

If the Supreme court hands down its gold decision tomorrow during the trading hours on the Chicago Board of Trade business may be suspended. Directors of the exchange have vested in the officers of the board the power to halt trading should the decision be given between 9 a. m. and 1:15 p. m., the regular trading period. It is considered unlikely, however, that such suspension will be necessary.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

After a week of comparatively active business, particularly in the cash grain markets, trading quieted down yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, and prices held around the levels at which they closed Friday. There was an absence of news of either a bullish or bearish nature that is necessary to furnish an incentive for operators to trade.

The possibility that the Supreme court's gold clause decision may finally be given tomorrow was added reason for traders to put off further commitments. In the foreign grain markets trading was likewise slow, and prices showed only trifling changes.

The feature of trading in the last few days has been the renewed interest shown by commercial users of grain who entered the market to buy corn in substantial quantities.

Sales of Corn Are Heavy.

The heavy sales of corn reported were the largest for a comparable period in several months. Purchases had been curtailed for several weeks, awaiting action by the Supreme court, but when the decision did not come last Monday the pent-up demand finally broke over. As a result, over three-quarters of a million bushels of corn were shipped out of Chicago, which further reduced the already short stocks here.

At its closing price of 83⅝ cents a bushel yesterday the May corn future was selling a little more than a cent a bushel above a week ago. Wheat, however, closed unchanged as compared with last week. Yesterday's last price on May wheat was a quarter cent below Friday, while May corn was unchanged from the preceding day. The closing quotations on the May contracts were:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Wk. ago.
Wheat	$.97⅝	$.97⅞	$.97½
Corn	.83⅝	.83⅝	.82¼
Oats	.51⅛	.51⅛	.50⅝
Rye	.66	.66	.65

Supplies of Corn Shrink.

When the figures on the visible supply of grain in the country are issued tomorrow it is expected corn stocks will show another sizable decline. In addition to the withdrawals from the Chicago market last week, other centers reported shrinking supplies. In Kansas City stocks fell an estimated 200,000 bushels, making approximately a million bushels in the two markets.

The visible supply of corn, representing stocks in the principal market centers, now stands at 30,348,000 bushels, or less than half the supplies on hand a year ago. Chicago stocks stand at 7,645,000 bushels, which is the largest amount held in any market. If the drain on stocks in the market continues at the rate it did during the last month, it is calculated by elevator firms that the supply will be entirely depleted by May 1.

GERMAN PRIVATE FOREIGN DEBTS EXTENDED YEAR

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Foreign creditors of Germany agreed today after two weeks of negotiations to extend last year's "standstill" agreement, covering the Reich's private debts abroad [about $700,000,000] until Feb. 29, 1936. The agreement reduces by ½ and ¼ per cent the maximum interest rates.

A statement said Germany's external trade exchange situation is more unfavorable because of greater obstacles to free international trade. To the contrary, considerable improvement was found in Germany's internal conditions with a "marked rise in production and a correspondent unemployment decrease and improved public finances."

The conferees expressed belief the position of many debtors has improved remarkably, so that the problem of liquidating has, for the time being at any rate, "more or less ceased to exist."

Union Objects to Building on Work Relief Pay Basis

East St. Louis, Ill., Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Central Trades and Labor union today sent a letter to the Illinois Rural Rehabilitation corporation at Chicago protesting against construction on a work relief basis of a proposed $3,000,000 St. Clair county rehabilitation community. The letter proposed that only skilled construction workers, off relief as well as on, be employed on a 30 hour week basis at prevailing wage rates. The community, according to present plans, would be constructed on a 5,280 acre tract near Belleville.

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Bond prices were fairly steady today, with total dealings during the two hour trading period amounting to $5,641,000, or about an average Saturday's business.

United States government bonds, however, were lightly dealt in, and closing prices for the group ranged from up 3-32ds to off 2-32ds point, with recessions in the majority. Two issues, the treasury 3s, due 1948 and callable in 1946, and the federal farm mortgage 3s, due 1947, touched their highest levels since issuance.

Speculative Rails Firmer.

In the domestic corporation group a number of speculative rail issues moved up a point or more, and in a few instances high grade rail issues bettered their previous peaks for 1934-1935, notably certain obligations of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe, the Erie and Pittsburgh, the Louisville and Nashville, Northern Pacific, and divisional bonds of the Union Pacific.

Public utility bonds closed irregularly lower on the day. Among the losers were American Water Works 5s, Consolidated Gas 5½s, Laclede Gas 5½s, and Northern American 5s.

Industrial List Strong.

In the industrial section of the corporate list small advances outnumbered the declines in the higher priced issues. Among the gainers were Bethlehem Steel 5s, National Dairy 5¼s, and Standard Oil of New York issues.

Foreign loans manifested considerable strength. Most of the leading European loans closed higher, particularly German issues. German government 5½s and 7s gained fractionally, and French government loans were unchanged to up 2 points. Austrian and Belgian government loans were especially firm, while issues of the Italian group which were dealt in today closed unchanged up fractionally higher. Latin-American bonds were irregular.

A Schoolgirl's Assignment.

Miss D. has her worries. She is taking a course in economics and—but let her tell her own story.

She writes, "We have been given a special assignment of investing a mythical $5,000. Our instructor has given us several questions which we are to keep in mind in undertaking this problem, such as, 'Is the income assured?' 'Can the principal be recovered in case of need, either through resale or maturity on loans?' 'Is there freedom from care?' 'How will the investment be affected by changes in the purchasing power?' I believe you can give me some definite information."

Were it not for the last question the answer would be easy—highest grade bonds would fill the requirement. But bonds of the highest grade today are quoted at substantial premiums and in the event an inflationary wave should hit the market the price of gilt edge bonds would ease off at the same time that commodity prices go up. The holder would be "whipsawed;" the dollar amount of his principal would go down, while the purchasing power of the principal and interest would likewise decrease.

One "out" would be the purchase of bonds that are convertible into common stocks. Bonds of investment grade that have this feature, however, are selling at even a higher premium than the ordinary high grade bonds. The purchaser would have to be satisfied with a very small income.

The necessity of having the investment "free from care" prohibits the purchase of income producing real estate, which would in some degree guard against the effects of inflation. Furthermore, not much in the way of high grade property could be purchased for the amount to be invested.

It is readily apparent that the "perfect" investment just does not exist. Only high grade obligations in terms of dollars give one assurance of maintenance of dollar income and the principal in terms of dollars; only equities, such as stocks, real estate, etc., will serve as a hedge against decreased purchasing power of the dollar.

The proper solution appears to be a "combination investment—a portion in equities and the remainder in highest grade obligations.

Still this advice cannot be taken literally in all cases. The speculative element is inherent in all equities. The person whose stake is small and whose needs are many cannot afford to assume that inherently speculative risk that is found in all equities. A loss to him would probably be catastrophic. It appears to us that the inexperienced investor whose stake is so small that he cannot afford a loss should better run the risk of curtailment of his principal through higher prices by purchasing good bonds than risk the uncertain values of the stock market.

REACTION IN EGG FUTURES FOLLOWS EARLY ADVANCE

Stormy weather over the west and northwest and continued light receipts caused February eggs to advance ¾ cent per dozen on the Chicago Mercantile exchange early yesterday but profit taking and week-end evening up brought a reaction with the close at 25¼ cents, or the same as Friday. While the price of fresh eggs in Chicago was unchanged to ½ cent higher, New York declined 1¾ cents on reports of imports from Canada.

Trade in butter was restricted but the trade was inclined to look for larger production within a short time and futures closed ½ to ¾ cent per pound lower. Sales of butter were 12 cars and of eggs 89 cars. Deliveries of 8 cars of butter were made on February contracts. Prices follow:

FRANCE SPLITS ON SCHEME FOR EASING CREDITS

Government Plan Opposed by Banking Leaders.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The government's proposition for loosening up credit by offering small business men a shorter term credit at lower interest is stirring up a fight between the Bank of France and the government.

Under the present arrangement small traders wishing short term loans must take them for a period of a month at least. Premier Flandin believes that if they could make seven day loans they would more readily do business and the flow of transactions would be increased. Hence the government proposal to that effect with a lower discount rate.

Conservatives Oppose Plan.

A definite proposal was made to the Bank of France board and a decision will come a week hence.

In the meantime Flandin's idea is being sharply opposed by conservatives on the board, notably the steel magnate, De Wendel, and another member with that magic international financial name, Rothschild.

The objecting board members stand on the ground that the statutes of the Bank of France forbid such a practice, taking the position that while the Bank of France rediscounts negotiable paper it does this at a rate fixed by law and that Flandin's proposed lower rate is illegal.

Big French Banks Object.

Objectors to the proposal are the big French banks, which are conservative and do not want rapid rediscounting, considering it a move in the direction of inflation—according to the Socialist organ, Populaire, which characterizes the battle as one between the Bank of France and the government.

Flandin himself was before the chamber last night and gave authenticity to the report of his battle with the Bank of France in the course of a speech justifying himself preceding the vote of confidence. He explained the Bank of France row and spoke about the "oligarchy" there which is opposing him—indicating he would press the fight.

U. S. BONDS RISE AS CORPORATION FINANCING FALLS

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The upward sweep of prices of United States goverment bonds this week resulted in eight treasury and treasury-guaranteed long term issues touching their highest levels since issuance. A number of other treasury issues are currently selling at their best prices since 1928.

The "gold payment" issues have figured far less in transactions than the non-gold issues. Specialists report that the gold clause factor has not figured importantly in dealings in government bonds of late. The gold clause issues, of course, are those which were outstanding up to June 5, 1933 and thus payable in United States gold coin of the then standard value of $20.67 on ounce.

In large measure the sharp rise in government bonds is attributed to the scarcity of offerings rather than to any sudden increase in the demand. Since the turn of the year the market has been virtually bare of new offerings of corporation bonds so that institutions with sizable blocks of maturing bonds in their portfolios have necessarily sought replenishment to a large extent in the government bond market.

Part of the buying which would normally go into treasury bonds has been shunted to the treasury-guaranteed Federal Farm Mortgage corporation and Home Owners' Loan corporation issues, five out of six of which scored new record highs last week. The three treasury issues to touch new peaks were the 3¼s due 1941, the 3s due 1948, callable in 1946, and the 3⅛s, due 1952, callable in 1949.

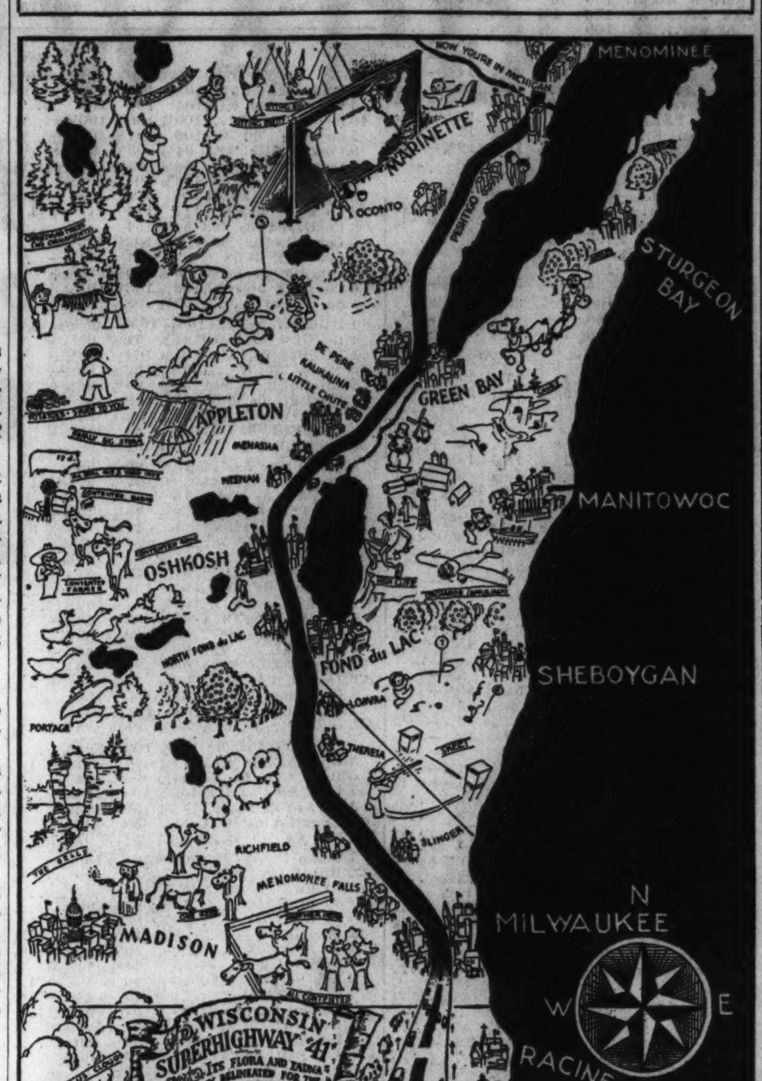
MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

U.S.41 IN WISCONSIN



This cartoon map of Wisconsin shows the route of U. S. 41, along which hotels, chambers of commerce, and civic groups are organizing to promote its improvement and beautification and to boost its tourist travel. The route approaches Chicago on Skokie road.

Will Divert $7,500,000 of Gasoline Tax

From an estimated $31,000,000 in gasoline tax payments to the state of Illinois in 1935, $7,465,662 will be diverted from the funds for purposes other than maintenance and construction of streets and highways, even if the present legislature does not authorize any new diversions.

The net revenue from the motor fuel excise will approximate $29,560,000 after $140,000 has been charged to the cost of collection and $1,300,000 has been refunded to purchasers of gasoline not to be used in highway vehicles.

Common School Fund.

The state common school fund will receive $2,463,000 from the January and February collections and the general assembly might authorize further allotments from collections later in the year.

This leaves a net of $27,917,778 available for division among state highway department, municipalities, and counties, each getting a third, or $9,305,926.

From the counties' share, $2,432,500 will be diverted for interest and principal payments due on the 1932 $20,000,000 relief bond issue. An additional $737,500 will be debited to pay half the interest and principal due on the 1933 $30,000,000 relief bond issue.

More Interest Payments.

Another $737,500 will be taken from the cities' gasoline revenue to meet the interest and principal on the $30,000,000 bond issue. From Chicago's share, there will be an additional $1,915,940 diverted to the city educational fund.

The motorists' contributions to relief will continue for twenty more years. The $20,000,000 will not be retired until 1944 and will include interest payments aggregating $6,345,000. The $30,000,000 will not be retired until 1954 and will include interest payments aggregating $11,240,750.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Insurance and police officers of the city of Detroit recently conducted a brake test on a 1935 Terraplane sedan. Reporting on the brake test, the insurance and police officers state that at speeds of 40 and 50 miles per hour the Terraplane stopped in nearly half the distance called for by the police department.

This department uses figures compiled as the result of a large number of tests made by the Bendix Brake company. For example, at 50 miles per hour the Detroit police department states that with brakes in excellent condition, the car should be able to stop in 111 feet. The Terraplane at 50 miles an hour stopped in 65 feet.

During the past month more than 600 salesmen have passed through the special training school at the local branch of the Ford Motor company in South Chicago, according to W. K. Edmunds, in charge of Ford activities in the Chicago area.

Approximately 1,000 salesmen from dealerships in the area, including territory in Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, have enrolled for the courses. The training school is scheduled to close about March 15.

"The courses are given the salesmen," Edmunds said, "to better familiarize them with developments in the industry. Salesmen taking the course are trained by competent instructors on every feature from front bumper to rear tail lamp. When their training is completed they are in a position to answer every question that might be asked in a Ford show room."

Packard got into production last week with its new low priced line. The schedule calls for 2,000 cars in February, 4,000 in March and 4,500 a month thereafter.

Production of new airflow and airstream De Soto cars reached capacity last week, with factory inspectors checking over one million pounds of incoming material daily. Vice President D. A. Wallace said De Soto has perfected its inspection system this year and also has added a factory new car service department to condition all cars for immediate retail delivery.

Seven new stock car records were established at Daytona Beach, Fla., last week by Sir Malcolm Campbell in a Hudson sedan, according to a Hudson announcement. The records were: Flying start mile, 88.2028 m. p. h.; flying start kilometer, 88.207 m. p. h.; flying start five kilometers, 88.105 m. p. h.; flying start five miles, 88.051 m. p. h.; standing start one mile, 68.252 m. p. m.; flying start one kilometer in second gear, 70.319 m. p. h.; flying start mile in second gear, 69.224 m. p. h.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Raw sugar was unchanged today with no additional sales reported. The undertone was steady, and it was believed that further buying interest existed at last paid prices at 2.90c per lb for spots, but there was nothing firmly offered below 2.95c. While price movements in futures were narrow, they were generally upward with some of the more distant positions not only reaching new highs for the season but selling at the highest level since January, 1930. The market closed net unchanged to 2 points higher in both contracts. Sales in the old were 9,450 tons and in the new, 13,300.

Prices in cents per pound:

In refined prices were unchanged with one refiner listing at 4.30c per lb for fine granulated, but all others quoting 4.50c. A good demand was reported, but it was mostly in the way of withdrawals against old contracts.

Note—Above raw sugar prices exclude processing tax of ½c per lb. Refined sugar prices include the tax.

U.S.GRANT WOULD RELEASE FUNDS FOR FARM ROADS

BY HAL FOUST.

The proposed $100,000,000 federal grant for the construction of an elevated highway system for Chicago would release state revenue for expenditure on secondary rural roads sought by the Illinois Agricultural association. It would relieve the state highway department of most of its obligation to allot funds derived from gasoline tax and from license fees to the improvement of Chicago's streets that carry half the motor trafic in Illinois.

The appeal of the city for the construction of the elevated highway system is perhaps more dramatic because it would save 700 lives annually as well as eliminating delays evaluated as a yearly economic loss of $16,250,000 to the community. However, the complaint from the farmers that they have been neglected is none the less just.

Secondary Roads Neglected.

Illinois, in its politically designed state bond issue system, laid an excessive mileage of expensive slab, limiting the mileage of low cost all weather roads. The Chicago Motor club, in a study of a state trafic survey, found 1,609 miles where usage did not justify the expensive concrete. A type of surface treatment in keeping with the trafic volume would have cost $32,000,000 less than the state spent on the slab, according to the club's engineers.

Mainly as a result of such extravagance, Illinois still has 68,000 miles of dirt and mud roads, according to the latest figures published by the Automobile Manufacturers association. This same source of information lists 8,979 miles of high type surface and 11 miles of low type. The statistics do not include Gov. Horner's recent efforts to correct the situation by adding a few miles of low cost roads to the state system.

Indiana and Ohio.

In contrast, Indiana has 4,174 miles of high type and 3,994 of low type, leaving 22,000 miles of unimproved road. Ohio, a midwestern state with a population more nearly equal to Illinois, has 6,341 miles of high type and 5,320 miles of low type, leaving 35,000 miles of unimproved road.

Probably no where in America is the unimproved road more impassable than in the black loam, clay and muck of the broad Illinois corn belt. In the February and early spring thaws farmers' flivvers are marooned.

The agricultural association, in petitioning Springfield for more secondary roads, points out that mud deprives farm children of educational advantages and that it isolates them from emergency medical attention.

As for the school situation, statistics show that Illinois, with 30 per cent of the mileage paved, has 10,000 one teacher schools; Indiana, with 70 per cent of its roads paved, has 2,148 one teacher schools, and Ohio, with 60 per cent of its roads paved, has 4,250 one teacher schools. Consolidated schools are more economical as well as better institutions of learning.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

THE RUNAWAYS.

Forest Park, Ill., Feb. 9.—Here's to the two men, if they may be called that, who smashed the side of my parked coupé on Adams street, near Des Plaines, Saturday evening. Any one who would deliberately rush away after doing the amount of damage they did is without question a coward.

I at least would think that one of them would have conscience enough in these times to be manly about it and inquire. One consolation is that they, too, are "drivers" and may some day experience the same regrettable misfortune. For goodness' sake, be a sport.

AL MALICKI.

INADEQUATE LIGHTS.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—In spite of the safety campaign of the mayor and the newspapers, last Friday evening while driving through Jackson park and the outer drive to the loop I noticed that about one out of every ten cars was being driven with either one front headlight, or both headlights not lighted, or no rear light.

The evening was quite foggy and three taxicabs of one large company only showed two very indistinguishable small green parking lights, while two taxicabs of another company were being operated with a very small light in the front of the radiator and two very small lights on the sides of the car near the top.

If situations such as the above are true throughout the city it certainly would seem a simple matter for the authorities to take action against these violations and in that manner eliminate the cause of many accidents.

EVART O. OSTBERG.

POLICE WITHOUT '35 PLATES.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 9.—I entered Illinois Feb. 1 through Cairo and proceeded straight to Chicago. Not until I reached there was I stopped and questioned about my license plates on my car. I have Georgia plates, 1935. I wasn't surprised at being stopped, for I had read in THE TRIBUNE of the drive to sell Illinois plates, and I was willing to prove that I lived in Georgia and was entitled to carry their plates.

I left Chicago Sunday noon, Feb. 3, and drove out South Shore drive behind a south park police car bearing 1934 license plates, No. 522032.

Do you know of any good reason why your citizens as well as visitors should be badgered into paying their taxes while the police system dodges?

E. A. CONNORS.

LIGHTS.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Right in line with the many good suggestions and efforts being made to reduce the fast mounting automobile accidents and death rate, may I tell my story?

Last night, between the hours of 8 and 9, I traveled from Damen avenue to Milwaukee avenue on Lawrence and met eighteen cars with only one headlight in working order, and two with only one parking light, and one with no lights at all; also several with no tail lights.

A study of those offenders will disclose that the majority are careless and not capable of driving a car safely. For the safety and welfare of our good drivers, let's all be for a driver's license and a rigid enforcement of all trafic laws.

ASPIRANTS ARE OWN WARD ISSUES

80 YEARS FAIL TO CLOUD VIEW OF LINCOLN BIER

Mrs. Jacobs Tells Story on Birthday.

BY ROE FOWLER.

Mrs. John M. Jacobs, 643 Arlington place, who celebrated her 80th birthday on Valentine day, recalled the incident as clearly as if it were only yesterday.

MRS. JOHN M. JACOBS.

She was just a little girl, and there was such a crowd of grown-ups around that she almost didn't get to see Mr. Lincoln.

"I can't see him, father," she complained, so her father lifted her up on his shoulders. Then she saw him, lying there amid banks of flowers, in the old Chicago courthouse—so calm and white and quiet—just like a statue. And that is the picture of him that she has always carried: A great pale man whose brown hair made even more livid the alabaster pallor of his face, from which the wrinkles so familiar in his portrait had all been smoothed out. The emancipator was at last emancipated.

Native of Chicago.

"Yes, I remember civil war days quite well," Mrs. Jacobs said, "for the soldiers camped across the street from our house on the west side, and I was quite a favorite of theirs. They were all wonderful in my eyes. I helped serve them meals at my father's house, though I was only eight or nine years old."

Born in Chicago on Scott street near State street, Mrs. Jacobs was the daughter of John and Mary Kirch, and shortly after her birth they moved to the west side. The Chicago fire started within two blocks of her home, and she witnessed it from start to finish, a feat at which she now marvels because of the narrow escapes which she recalls made little impression on her at the time.

She remembers that her clothes were scorched by the terrific heat, and that several times when the flames spurted suddenly, the crowds almost trampled her, but at the time she was "too excited and thrilled" to be afraid, though the spectacle awed her.

Sees Great-Grandchild.

In 1874 she was married to Dr. John M. Jacobs at the St. Francis church, 12th street and Newberry avenue, and they moved to the north side where he practiced until his death in 1930. Ten children were born to them during their 56 years of married life, and seven of their sons and daughters are still living.

One of the big features of Mrs. Jacobs' birthday celebration was her introduction to a great-granddaughter—Barbara Jane Fisher, six weeks old—whom she had never seen before.

Sons and daughters who helped celebrate the birthday include Dr. John M. Jacobs Jr., Mrs. Rose Bisdorf, Mrs. Ada Spohr, Mrs. Mabel Spohr, Dr. Fred C. Jacobs, Herbert W. Jacobs of Freeport, and Mrs. Gertrude Arbogast. Besides the sons and daughters, there are twenty-three grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Jacobs is extremely interested in the progress of the Dionne quintuplets, having been an incubator herself in days when that article was little known.

"Nobody would have believed then that I would live to see my 80th birthday," she ruminated.

Friends and relatives came Thursday to wish her many more happy birthdays, and to bring her Valentines.

CHURCH DEACONS WILL SPONSOR EVANSTON PLAY

"Listening In," a mystery comedy, will be presented under auspices of the board of deacons of the Second Presbyterian church of Evanston at 8:15 o'clock Wednesday evening, Feb. 27, in the Nichols school auditorium, Evanston.

The cast includes Mrs. Arthur E. Farrell, Ross Grant, John A. Guy, Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Jones Jr., William C. Keener, Robert D. Lowther, T. I. McKnight, Irwin L. Milton, Elmer J. Niehaus, Mrs. Charles E. Shomo Jr., Edwin F. Terras, Richard V. Trusdell, and Dr. C. Frank Wittenberger.

The leading feminine rôle will be played by Mrs. Jones, who was formerly known on the stage as Ethel Gibson. Her last professional performance was in the original cast of the musical comedy hit, "No, No, Nannette." Mrs. Farrell, another of the principal players, also spent a number of years on the professional stage.

Making his second appearance in a leading rôle with the church players this season, Mr. Lowther will play the male lead. Mr. Lowther played a prominent part in Kate Douglas Wiggin's story, "The Birds' Christmas Carol," presented during the holidays.

Mrs. John W. Musil, play director, is being assisted by Miss Helen M. Becker. William C. Keener directs lights and effects.

Winnetka Group Offers Spiritual Song Program

Rosary Alumnae Dance Promoter

Miss Bernice Kinsella, 1414 Arthur avenue, is active on the north side committee for the Rosary college alumnae dance to be held next Friday at the Opera club.

NORTH SIDE AREA CENSUS REVEALS 11,743 DECREASE

Figures on 3 Wards Show Increase.

A decrease since 1930 of 11,743 in the population of the nine north side wards—42d to 50th, inclusive—is shown by the city census which Mayor Kelly had taken last year with the coöperation of the University of Chicago. The population of the nine wards dropped from 604,859 to 593,116.

The census, which was made chiefly to provide information for the use of the schools, the public library, and the city building and health departments, was segregated into ward totals by Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works, as a basis for increasing the efficiency of the bureau of streets. These totals, which show the shift of population by wards and the ratio of each ward's population to the city as a whole, were made public last week by Mr. Hewitt.

Three Make Gains.

Six of the nine wards show a decrease in population varying from 5,950 to 178. The remaining three wards made gains. The 50th gained 8,608, the 48th 1.755, and the 49th 650. The advance made by the 50th gave it the lead over other north side wards in point of population with 78,629, against 76,009 for the 49th and 73,750 for the 48th. In 1930 the 47th, 48th, and 49th wards all exceeded the 50th in population.

The three wards which showed population gains also increased in percentage to the city total. The 46th, although it showed a decrease of 178 in population likewise made a percentage gain.

Table Shows Changes.

The following table shows north side ward populations for 1930 and 1934 and the amount of increase or decrease:

If the ratio of the ward's population to that of the city has not changed substantially since 1930 the city service received by the ward then still is adequate, Mr. Hewitt pointed out. Thus the census information is used to determine whether a ward is entitled to increased service.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About People You May Know

OUR handy, whittling philosopher, E. R. Shnable of 1005 Michigan avenue, Wilmette, whose jackknife produce in the way of dolls, whistles and other trinkets has the youngsters convinced of his close relationship to Santa Claus, bethought him kindly of the black eyed baby Dionnes the other day and went to work on five peachstone baskets which, in due course, were dispatched in care of Dr. Dafoe. The messages exchanged tell the friendly story:

Dr. A. R. Dafoe,
Callander, Ontario.
My Dear Doctor:

For a great many years I have been making peachstone baskets for the little girls in our neighborhood. Consequently I was unable to resist the temptation to make and enclose a few for the interesting bunch of little girls you so successfully brought into the world. For the present they will suffice as identification tokens, if they all look alike.

May they all grow up and make the little girls of our neighborhood a visit.

Yours very cordially,
E. R. SHNABLE.

E. R. Shnable, Esq.,
1005 Michigan Avenue,
Wilmette, Ill.
Dear Sir:

On behalf of the babies and their guardians may I thank you most cordially for your charming gift, which, I must say, is most cleverly made and much admired by us all.

Yours very truly,
A. R. DAFOE.

WELCOME newcomers to Evanston are Dr. and Mrs. Percy Earle Burtt and Jane and Robert, who arrived recently from Sioux City, Ia., where Dr. Burtt was minister of the First Presbyterian church. AFTER FIFTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Olsen, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary recently at the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. A. Powell, 808 Kenesaw terrace.

ROMANTIC SAGA OF NORWAY TOLD BY OLE OLSENS

Golden giants of the north—Vikings of legend on whose tall sails and winged helmets the sun of seven seas once glinted—had passed down their free spirit of adventure to the slim, brown haired girl, Bertha Serina, the daughter of Caroline Larsen and Otto Cederstrom of Stavenger, and to the stalwart blond and bronzed lad, Ole Olsen, whose birthplace was Akra Karmo. That is why when romance overtook the two they were in a city on the other side of the world instead of in their native Norway.

Young Olsen had followed in the way of his forebears, the way of the winds and tides, from Oslo to the Horn, from Zanzibar to Rio.

It was in Chicago that Ole Olsen met the girl from home. Between them was a deep bond of sympathy and understanding. Together they would walk down to the shore of Lake Michigan to watch the scudding clouds and the sheening water.

He would tell her stories of the waterfronts of the world with their strange sights and sounds and odors, of skies swept by the northern lights, of tropical nights under the southern cross, of black skies, rolling decks and beating rain, and of seas smooth as glass and streaked with the colors of sunset.

That was half a century ago, and now a third and fourth generation is listening as eagerly as she to the tales of clipper ships, to the traditions of the sea and the brave men who follow it that first won the heart of Bertha Cederstrom.

Mr. and Mrs. Olsen were married on Feb. 7, 1885. On their recent golden wedding day they received many friends and relatives at the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. A. Powell of 808 Kenesaw terrace. Of their five daughters, Mrs. Powell and Mrs. A. L. Paulson are the only two living. There are six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, all of whom were present at the anniversary celebration.

After they had received their guests, Mendelssohn's march was played, and Mr. and Mrs. Olsen renewed the vows they had taken on their wedding day.

Mr. and Mrs. Olsen's first home was at Erie and Carpenter streets. They were there only for a few years. They are pioneers of Logan Square, where they moved before the district had been opened as a subdivision.

In Evanston Operetta

Miss Virginia Knapp will be heard in the role of Mabel in "Pirates of Penzance," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta that the Evanston Light Opera company will present next Friday and Saturday nights in the auditorium of the Nichols school.

ECONOMY IS CRY ON ALL FRONTS IN VOTE BATTLE

Close Race in 49th, Center of Fight.

BY LLOYD WENDT.

The north side aldermanic campaign took on dignity last week as candidates finally brought issues before the voters and asked support for four year terms in the Feb. 26 election on the basis of a constructive program for ward and city improvement.

Three of the wards, however, were placed outside the pale of the present election, when the board of election commissioners ruled against petitions of all candidates opposing Ald. Dorsey R. Crowe [42d], Oscar F. Nelson [46th], and James R. Quinn [50th], and assured the reëlection of those incumbents.

In the remaining wards there was much conflict and many issues, if they may be called such, brought forth. This development did little to clarify the situation for the voter, however, since nearly all of the candidates are agreed on five major projects for city welfare.

Five Points at Issue.

The voter can only revert to his judgment of those best fitted to carry out the program, and possibly facilitate this task by first eliminating most of the candidates who completely forgot that any orthodox political campaign ought to have issues.

The five point program appearing in high favor with the voter, as expressed in a cross-section of platforms of the host of candidates, Republican, Democratic and Socialist alike, is already largely embraced either in the record or the platform of Mayor Kelly. The points follow:

First, further economy. This cry ranges from general endorsement of Mayor Kelly's economy program in the Democratic camp to a demand for a thorough reorganization of city finances and departments on the part of some Republican candidates.

Want Universal Transfer.

Second, the universal transfer. This plank, contained in Kelly's mayoral platform, appears in virtually every aldermanic platform set up to date. Several candidates are asking for a five cent fare. In most wards there are requests for traction extensions and improvements.

Third, added trafic safety precautions. Virtually all candidates approve the safety campaign of Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee, but additionally ask for more stop and go signals, wider streets, and better street lighting.

Fourth, reduction of the city's motor vehicle tax. This point appears in paradox with the third, since the money for street improvements comes largely from the motor vehicle tax. Candidates declare, however, that city receipts from the gasoline tax should provide such funds.

Schools and Politics.

Fifth, more schools and playgrounds, with a strong cry for separation of school from politics. On the latter point the Republicans are heartily whacking sitting aldermen, who, they charge, have delivered the schools to politics.

Probably the greatest array of issues has been brought forth in the 49th ward, where Frank Keenan, Democratic editor, desires to terminate the council career of Ald. George A. Williston.

Keenan promises the voters a centrally located ward office and a ward council of civic and business leaders to advise the alderman, more school facilities, elimination of dangerous intersections, more playgrounds and a new park on the lake between Greenleaf and Touhy avenue, and more feeder buses.

In addition, Keenan is campaigning for the universal transfer, asking for added police protection, the expenditure of the vehicle tax in the ward, and a generally cleaner ward. Keenan is at the time vigorously supporting Mayor Kelly.

Williston Gives Issues.

Ald. Williston, strongly backed by Republicans and holding some favor from the Democrats by virtue of his support of Mayor Kelly's economy and safety programs, last week presented his platform, which, he claims is already partially realized through his aldermanic activities.

Williston urges further economy, speedy completion of a unified transportation system with the universal transfer, ward feeder bus extensions, enforcement of spirit and rules of civil service law, and repair of streets through motor vehicle tax fund.

He asks also strict enforcement of state laws and city ordinances regulating the sale of liquor, added small parks and playgrounds for children, strict supervision and regulation of street trafic and the addition of stop and go signals, strict adherence to the zoning ordinance, and better street lighting.

"I should like to point out," said Williston, "that the resurfacing of streets throughout the city is being accomplished this winter because I proved that the work can be done in winter months and Mayor Kelly agreed and ordered the work started after engineers had advised delay."

Says "Baulerism" Issue.

In the 43d ward Candidate Irving Stevens dragged out a host of issues in his fight with Ald. Mathias [Paddy] Bauler.

"The 43d ward's chief issue is Baulerism," said Stevens, who is supported by the James B. Waller Republican organization.

"I am not, however, expecting the Economy Promise Leads All Programs.

voters to support me simply because they cannot support Bauler," Stevens continued. "My platform includes my pledge to fight for further drastic economy, with the savings to be divided between taxpayers and relief workers, the latter to benefit from increased public works made possible by operating economies. I urge that the city follow all the recommendations of the Jacob's efficiency report drafted under the Cermak administration.

"I favor the rebuilding of the downtown sewer system, an improved street lighting system, the reduction of city vehicle fees, and the equalization of other city fees, so that the small outlying business men will not be required to pay the same fee demanded of large loop dealers.

Would Add Playgrounds.

"I am for the universal transfer, and improved service on local lines within the ward, especially on Sedgwick street. I favor more playgrounds and believe that the city could rent vacant lots at nominal fees for this purpose. I favor construction of a lake front airport and the building of elevated super-highways.

"I want a cleaner ward, in more ways than one."

Late last week Ald. Bauler had proffered no issues or program for the campaign.

Stevens' position appeared to be strengthened last week when the petitions of former Ald. Titus Haffa and Louise D. Gullberg, both Republicans, were ruled out by the board of election commissioners.

The Waller group appears to be hopeful of Haffa's support, despite the fact that Haffa has had brushes with the law and they are attacking Bauler's record on similar grounds. Haffa, however, is powerful in the western portion of the ward, where Stevens needs aid, and the Wallers claim to be very gentlemanly in their courting of Haffa.

Busy with Machinery.

In the Forty-seventh, where John J. Hoellen, a former alderman, is seeking to unseat Ald. Albert F. Schultz, a Democrat, both candidates appear to be busier with their political machinery than with constructive issues. Hoellen, however, who was favored over Schultz in 1933 by the Municipal Voters' league, which characterized him as "able, alert, energetic," and a man "who applies good business judgment to public affairs," is pointing to his record.

"I sponsored safety loading zones in all wide streets and I secured the coöperation of Lincoln park commissioners to permit the city to dump ashes in order to create new land, thereby saving the city at least $1,000,000 in costs for dumping privileges, and saving the park district the cost of creating the land," Hoellen says.

Hoellen is, however, cordially disliked by the Democrats, who are making a special effort for Schulz, and his chances are none too good despite the fact that he was but narrowly defeated in a runoff election in 1933.

Two Quit Race.

The prospects of Ald. John J. Grealis for reëlection in the Forty-fourth were exceedingly bright last week following the withdrawal of former Ald. Albert E. Loescher and Virgil W. Riley, both of whom gave their support to Grealis, who is backed by the Democratic organization.

Ald. Grealis' platform includes street improvements, further consolidation of taxing bodies, home rule for Chicago to place utilities under city control, better lighting, and elimination of dangerous crossings.

At the same time, the strength of Charles Freedman, a Republican and chief opponent of Grealis, was reduced by the emergence of M. L. Quinn, president of the Diversey Business Men's association, who claims the aid of the Robert W. Dunn Republican group.

Nelson Lists Results.

In the Forty-sixth Ald. Oscar F. Nelson, who is unopposed, points to his river straightening ordinance and his work on the 1930 traction ordinance as his chief achievements in the council.

In the Forty-eighth Ald. John A. Massen, whose chief Republican foe, Lucile McVicker Lipman, was eliminated by election board action, is likewise not bothering with issues, since his remaining four opponents are not likely to threaten on Feb. 26.

EVANSTON GROUP EXTENDS LIMIT ON HOUSING SHOW

Displays to Continue Until March.

Extension of Evanston's better housing exhibit at 620 Davis street until the first week of March was voted last week by the executive committee composed of representatives of Evanston organizations interested in building and better housing. The committee, meeting with the Evanston Chamber of Commerce, decided that the success of the exhibit waranted its continuation. The exhibit was to have closed this week.

The decision was made just before the arrival of Leigh R. Putman, associate director for northern Illinois of the Federal Housing administration, on his official visit before the exhibit closed. Mr. Putman was greeted by Ira Rosenberg, chairman, with the announcement of the exhibit's success and the decision to keep it open until March.

500 Visitors Daily.

Mr. Putman was invited by C. O. Hemphill, president of the Evanston Chamber of Commerce and the Evanston executive committee, to discuss "Putting Men to Work" in his booth at the exhibit.

The exhibit, which draws an average of 500 visitors daily to 620 Davis street, is known as "The Little World's Fair." Loren P. Meyer, secretary of the chamber of commerce, reported that the visitors are not merely curiosity seekers, but people sincerely interested in home improvement.

Some Bring Families.

"Most of them spend several hours visiting the booths," Mr. Meyer explained. "Moreover, many return the next day with other members of their families."

Definite proof that many Evanston citizens have serious intentions to modernize their homes was offered by H. M. Hedges, who has charge of a lumber company display. He has listed more than 250 prospects for insulation jobs. M. J. Bamond has the names and addresses of a like number of Evanstonians who want estimates on improved heating and air conditioning.

JUVENILE SHOW SPONSORS MEET A THREAT IN EAST

Persistent Attacks Stir Radio Executives.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The persistent attacks by parent-teacher and kindred organizations on juvenile radio entertainers are beginning to give radio executives and advertisers a severe headache. For years these outbursts have been tossed aside as representing the opinions only of the vociferous one-tenth of 1 per cent, but of late the complaints have reached such proportions that they cannot entirely be ignored.

Juvenile entertainment is by no means entirely bad. There are programs on the air that are above reproach. Ireene Wicker's "Singing Lady" is certainly one of these. Uncle Bob's Safety club comes in for considerable praise among parents. Many programs are probably not as harmful as pictured. But there are plenty of blood and thunder serials that rouse the ire of parental groups.

So they hold indignation meetings, pass resolutions, and write letters to the sponsors and broadcasting chiefs. In return they get soft thank you letters inviting their suggestions as to the kind of programs they would recommend. Often the suggestions they make are impractical. Some of the program ideas offered are stodgy. Sometimes they take the stand that radio should educate the child, when radio pretends mainly to entertain the youngsters. They forget that Jack Benny, Gracie Allen, and Eddie Cantor are favorites of grownups and that educational programs for adults are largely ignored.

The other day something happened in the east that forced advertising agencies to take notice. Prof. Alvin C. Busse of New York university journeyed over to Palisades, N. J., to address the local P.-T. A. He took a few wallops at juvenile programs, saying much that has been said before, but he made one suggestion that frightened advertisers. He suggested that the Palisades group urge a national listeners' strike by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Listeners' Strike a Buyers' Strike.

Now a listeners' strike would become nothing more nor less than a buyers' strike, and the buying power of a couple of million families is a potent lever. No sponsor would care to incur the displeasure of such a big, influential, and well organized group.

Prof. Busse gave the program builders a real scare. And he may have given the crusaders for more satisfactory children's programs the wedge they've been looking for.

Haworth's Three Nieces.

Vin Haworth of Myrt and Marge now has three nieces in the movies. Rita Causino, the third one, was signed by Fox last week. The others are Ginger Rogers and Phyllis Fraser at R. K. O.

Letters Support Radio Editors.

Letters from listeners the past fortnight indicate that in the main they agree with the national poll of favorite entertainers in which 260 radio editors participated. The letters often start out: "I don't like your choice; here's mine." But strangely most of the first choices, though not necessarily the prime favorite of the critics, were nevertheless among the first half dozen on the editors' list.

Thoughts While Listening.

Vivian della Chiesa, that WBBM contest winner, has a gorgeous singing voice and ought to go far in radio, perhaps on the concert or operatic stage. And Billy Mills' orchestra gives her swell support. Like Frank Black at NBC Mills can handle any kind of an assignment well. . . . Lou Haddad's plan of teaching contract from the beginning sounds like a good idea. . . . Art Jarrett and State's Attorney Courtney resemble each other slightly. . . . Ricardo Cortez fits into the new Lombardo program neatly.

Mario Chamlee must have had plenty of listeners on his new Garden hour program last Sunday. Dozens of persons asked how come Chamlee started singing the wrong song at one point. There are two versions, but we don't know which is correct. . . . Worst commercial continuity heard to date is the laxative copy on WBBM on its 9:30 Sunday evening Melody Parade. . . . Berenice Taylor's voice is lovelier than ever. Catch it some time at 9:10 Sunday evenings with Henry Weber and the W-G-N orchestra.

BETWEEN BROADCASTS

When it comes to athletic skill in the W-G-N studios the billiard sharps are on top. Tom, Dick, and Harry, the singing trio, challenged Announcer Bob Elson to a match on the green cloth and the singers selected their accompanist and arranger, Carl Hoefle, as referee, while Elson picked Attilio Baggiore, W-G-N's operatic tenor, as his bodyguard. Here's how they lined up for the fray: Bud Van Dover (Tom), Marlin Hurt (Dick), Bob Elson, Gordon Van Dover (Harry), Attilio Baggiore, and Carl Hoefle.

PARTY EXPERT

Miss Eda McCready, or "Mickey," as she is known to the radio audience. Mickey conducts the popular morning feature, "Party Making with Mickey," presenting practical and unusual ideas for home parties. The party making hour is heard at 9 o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings over W-G-N.

MIDDAY SERVICE GIVES ATTENTION TO WASHINGTON

George Washington will provide the thought for the general theme on the W-G-N Midday Service this week. Washington's ideas about religion will be discussed on the Washington day broadcast, Friday, Feb. 22, by Orrin W. Auman, treasurer of the world service of the Methodist church. Other guest speakers: Monday, the Rev. F. D. Adams, Unity church, Oak Park; Tuesday, Father Thomas B. Byrne, Church of St Justin-Martyr; Wednesday, the Rev. Joshua Oden, Irving Park Lutheran church, and president Chicago Federation of Churches; Thursday, Rabbi Gerson B. Levi, Temple Isaiah-Israel, and Saturday, Dr. John L. Dickson, director.

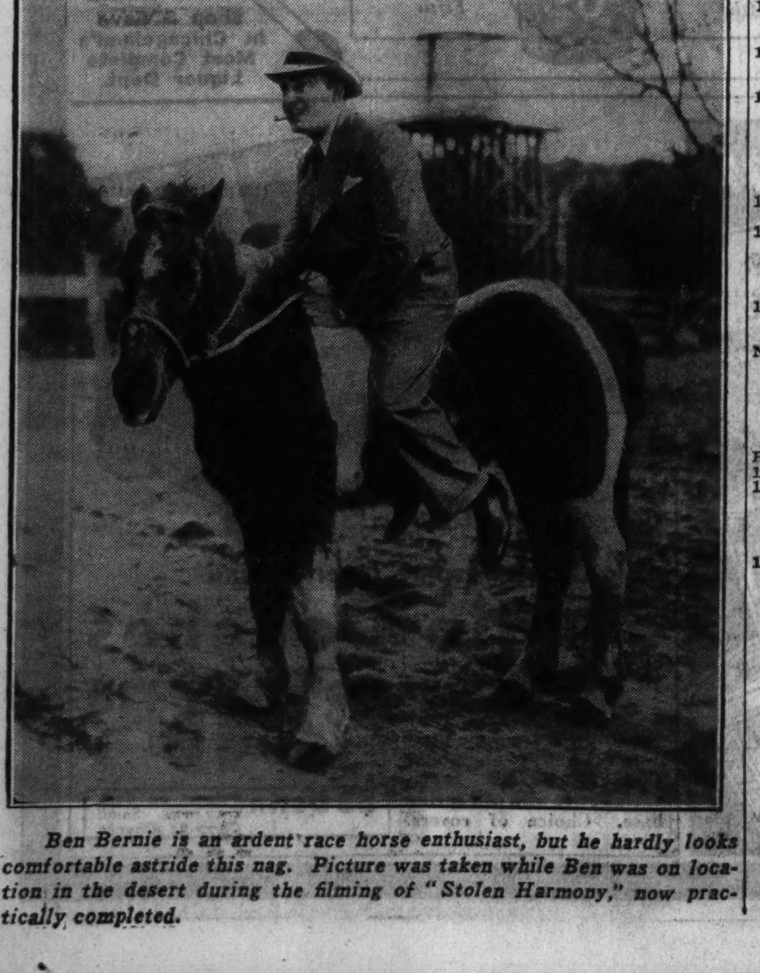
Chicago Symphony Again to Be Heard on Saturday

The tenth popular concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will be broadcast from Orchestra hall next Saturday evening through W-G-N starting at 8:13 o'clock. The concert will be directed by Dr. Frederick Stock. The program: Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony; the overture to "The Magic Flute," by Mozart; "Sorcerers Apprentice," by Dukas, and Glazounow's "Scenes de Ballet."

Dr. J. W. G. Ward Will Be Sunday Evening Speaker

Dr. J. W. G. Ward of the First Presbyterian church of Oak Park will be the speaker tonight before the Chicago Sunday Evening club. W-G-N will present an exclusive broadcast of Dr. Ward's address at 8:30 p. m.

BERNIE UP!



Ben Bernie is an ardent race horse enthusiast, but he hardly looks comfortable astride this nag. Picture was taken while Ben was on location in the desert during the filming of "Stolen Harmony," now practically completed.

TOM, DICK, HARRY AND CARL BACK WITH NEW SHOW

Tom, Dick, and Harry, W-G-N's harmonists, and Carl Hoefle, their accompanist and arranger, return to the air at 11 a. m. tomorrow for a three-a-week series. The boys will be heard every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday morning.

During five years of programs with W-G-N and on an NBC network show the trio has appeared in more than 2,500 programs and presented more than 10,000 songs.

Five years ago Tom, Dick, and Harry came to W-G-N as a singing trio with only a guitar, played by Bud Van Dover, Tom of the trio. After a year of sustaining programs on W-G-N Carl Hoefle, pianist, who has a great knack for arranging songs, joined the boys and a new deal in trio music was declared. The trio, composed of Gordon and Bud Van Dover, brothers, and Marlin Hurt, is much sought for as a stage attraction. The boys have a widespread audience and always draw a great deal of mail.

WASHINGTON TO BE TOPIC FRIDAY OF SINGING LADY

Stories taken from the childhood of George Washington and Handel, the great composer, will be retold by "The Singing Lady" on her programs this week at 5:30 p. m. over W-G-N and an NBC network. Wednesday evening the 250th anniversary of the birth of Handel is to be celebrated throughout the world and "The Singing Lady" will tell her own story of the boyhood of the famous composer, and her accompanist, Allan Grant, will present some of Handel's music. On Friday, Washington's birthday, the story of the first President will be told.

Pekingese Expert to Be Guest of Becker Today

Mrs. Anna C. Loring, outstanding feminine authority on dogs, will be a guest on Bob Becker's program over W-G-N at 6:30 today. Mrs. Loring will discuss the Pekingese breed in an interview with Bob.

BESS M'CAMMON IS NOT LIKE PART TAKEN IN 'SOTHERN' SKETCH

BESS McCAMMON.

As "Mrs. Sanders" in "The Life of Mary Sothern" series on W-G-N and MBS, Bess McCammon has the distinction of being the most universally disliked woman in radio, but in real life she is the very anti-thesis of the character she so admirably portrays.

Gracious and charming, Bess McCammon in reality possesses those characteristics that make her's a most delightful and lovable personality, devoid of the disagreeable traits that make "Mrs. Sanders"—prudish, self-appointed morals and social arbiter of the community—so heartily disliked by the radio audience.

Every day is a busy one for her. In addition to her daily broadcasts she keeps her day filled with activity as housewife, mother and drama teacher. She is the mother of two sons—Bill, 21, and Tom, 13. She is both head of the dramatic department, Notre Dame academy, Covington, Ky., and a member of the faculty of the Schuster Martin School of Drama, Cincinnati.

Quin Ryan and Cadets Move to 11:15 A. M. Spot

The W-G-N morning program featuring Quin Ryan in original poems and the Four Singing Cadets in songs of way back when will be moved to a new hour starting tomorrow. The fifteen minute period of reminiscences will be heard at 11:15 Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings henceforth.

An old timer of the W-G-N announcing staf, John Reed Tyson, returns to the station in this program. Sam Thompson, director of the quartet, was a W-G-N soloist for many years.

Amateur boxers from every large city of the central states have participated, and the Tournament of Champions will bring the title winners of the other cities into battle with the Chicago tournament winners to weed the field down to the final round, which will bring 32 boxers into action for the Golden Gloves titles.

SCHLOSS ORAVA ON ORAVA RIVER.

BY ALEX SMALL.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia. — [By mail.]—Foreign influences have played an enormous part in the history and development of this people.

In the western provinces three are worth mentioning here, leaving out the considerable Russian one. In the historical order in which they entered the life of this people they are Austro-German, French, and American. From long duration—over 1,000 years—and from proximity, there can be no question of the predominance of the first one. But the latest comer, the American one, has made giant strides, and in many ways may be considered to be on equal footing with the others, where it has not outstripped them.

The American mark of Czechoslovakia is in part the general one which our people have put on all Europe, not to mention all the world since the war. It is manifested in a taste for our movies, our cigarets, our dance music in attempts more or less successful, to imitate American mechanical competence, in styles and manners, in a thousand details of living.

Largely through the pedagogs, America played a big rôle in the creation of the new state. The driving force was supplied by the powerful cohesive organization of Czechoslovak immigrants to the United States. In 1914 the Slovaks alone had 30 associations in the United States, most of them benevolent, but ready to play a political part. Successive conferences during the war between Slovak societies and Czech ones did much to formulate the basis for the Czechoslovakia which was to be.

The first joint conference was in Cleveland in October, 1915. A more important one was that of Pittsburgh in May, 1918, when Thomas Masaryk, professor, former member of the Austrian parliament and inspirer of all Czechoslovak efforts outside of the central empires, was present. The "convention" signed at that Pittsburgh meeting, incidentally, has proved an engine of war for the Slovak Autonomist party.

The immense prestige which President Masaryk has had with his people—almost without parallel in modern democratic countries—has extended American influence. His connections with America date back to 1902 when Charles R. Crane of Chicago, visiting Prague, invited Masaryk to become a summer course lecturer in the chair of Slavic studies which he was creating at the University of Chicago.

More important through sheer bulk is the influence exercised by the enormous mass of Czechoslovaks who have kept up connections with their homeland, or the land of their ancestors. How many they are no governmental agency at Prague appears to know.

Significant figures can be had from Slovakia, or from what was that territory before the war. From 1900 to 1910 the annual average increase of population [excess of births over deaths] among Slovaks was approximately 25,000 each year. The net increase was, however, less than 2,500, because each year more than 22,500 emigrated abroad. All but an inconsiderable fraction of the number went to the United States.

There they have accumulated largely at four points. New York acted as a certain focal point for them, as it does for all nationalities. Beyond it, Slovaks flocked largely to Pittsburgh, to work in the steel mills, Czechs to Chicago and Cleveland. Today, I am assured in Prague, they have spread out, that there are Czechoslovak "colonies" in the Dakotas and Iowa, and that a large number have drifted to Texas.

A more curious phenomenon is that of the unconscious Americans. Some 5,000 American citizens—American because born in the United States—were sent back in their infancy to Slovakia, there to be reared cheaply by relatives. Come to adolescence they are entirely ignorant or almost so of the language and institutions of the land of their birth. They are as European as other emigrants.

Just the same they are American citizens, and come to the age of 17 or more, they turn up at our consulate in Prague to ask for passports—not visas, since for them there can be no question of quotas. Here is one unexpected development of the restriction law, for these people are in every sense of the word as much emigrants to America as the next woodchopper up in the Carpathians.

In America, in years before restriction, a constant complaint was heard about immigrants who came to earn a bit on money, send it back home, and then go home themselves to live in relative prosperity. There has been plenty of that in Czechoslovakia. Since the war in Slovakia alone there have been 30,000 people return. Some of them may have been animated by zeal for doing their part in building the new state. It is more reasonable to suppose that all were insufficiently Americanized and held to an original intention of never becoming American citizens.

Time will show, I should judge, that American influence in this country has been more pervasive than surface indications today reveal. In the short time it has been exercised it has penetrated into the life of the masses of Czechoslovakia and guides them at times in ways of which they are hardly conscious.

Mr. Small will continue his series in next Sunday's Metropolitan section of The Tribune.

SULLIVAN HIGH SENIORS TO EDIT JOINT YEARBOOK

Dual Staf Directs Work of Publication.

February and June graduating classes of Sullivan High school will combine their yearbooks into one annual publication to be placed on sale the latter part of this semester. This was announced recently with the appointment of Frederick Ross of the midyear class and Miss Beverly Frankel of the June class as co-editors of the annual. Both editors have had experience on the Sullivan Sentinel, weekly publication.

Business managers are William Komaiko [February] and Robert McCord [June]. The advertising department is headed by Sidney Klug [June], and the circulation managers are Clifford Nathan [February] and Miss Kathryn Kropf [June]. Miss Carole Johnson, a junior, is financial manager.

Makeup of the annual will be the work of Miss Dorrie Kammerer [June] and Miss Betty Boling [June]. Individual biographies of the members of the two classes will be collected by Jean Gilmore [February] and Byron Miller [June].

Miss Betty Greer [February] and Martin Metal [June] are the art editors of the publication, and Stevens Drake [June] and Lee Gluckman [June], snapshot editors. Taking of individual photographs will be superintended by Vivian Nelson [February] and Edward Fraser [June]. Kenneth Nelson [February] and Herbert Wolfson [June] are organization managers.

Although there are only 350 members in the combined graduating classes, at least 800 annuals must be sold in order to have a book of 100 pages or more, with special features such as snapshots, the class legacy, sports, and the other usual contents of such a book.

The coöperation of all classes in the school, as well as that of alumni and friends of students, is being sought. The annual staf is meeting almost daily to plan the book and a vigorous sales campaign is being initiated.

RUSSIAN TO TALK ON REVOLUTION TO UPTOWN LIONS

An eyewitness story of the Russian revolution will be presented at the luncheon meeting of the Uptown Lions club on Thursday at the Edgewater Beach hotel by Jacob H. Ruben.

He escaped, and with the assistance of the American Red Cross was released. While in Russia he met many famous figures of the revolution—Lenin, Emma Goldman, Alexander Berkman, John Reed, and Stalin—long before the dictator was recognized as a political power.

The plot of "Making Rosie a Cook," by Francesca Falk Miller, concerns a mother's plan to save her son's marriage by purposely ruining a dinner so that her daughter-in-law will not divorce him for constantly talking about his mother's cooking.

Miss Grace Morris plays the part of the mother, and Jerome Siegan, that of the son, while the part of Rosie, his wife, is played by Miss Shirley Frank. Miss Selma Lasker takes the rôle of a neighbor.

Return of two sons and a daughter to sit "sheeva" for their dead father from whose home they had run away gives rise to the dramatic situation of "His Children," a prize play by Rufus Learsi in 1924-'25.

The part of the temperamental brother, Joe, will be played by James Wells, and that of the hardened scientist, Dave, will be played by Maurice Miller. Royal Romance of George IV Theme in Mundelein Drama

Shane Leslie had heard the story—the love story of her friend, Maria Fitzherbert, and George IV. of England—from his grandmother, Lady Clara Leslie. He related it last year in the course of a lecture at Mundelein college. One of the students, her imagination stirred by its beauty and pathos, wrote a series of episodes that she named "Regi Semper Fidelis." "To My King Ever Faithful," the romance thus recorded, will be presented next Saturday and Sunday nights by the Mundelein Laetare players at the college theater, 6363 Sheridan road.

Miss Mary Agnes Tynan, the author, impersonating Maria Fitzherbert, will read the narrative while a costumed cast enacts the scenes.

Invited to Meet Prince.

In the first episode, Miss Tynan presents her heroine as a lovely young widow of 24, who, after her quiet life in rural Shropshire, is entering light heartedly into the gayeties of Mayfair. She is in the foyer of the Royal Opera house in London, and there she receives her first invitation to meet the prince of Wales.

The second scene, set a year and a half later, takes place in her drawing room in Park lane. For many months Maria has resisted the tempestuous wooing of her royal lover, unwilling to open to criticism the name that she bears so proudly. But at last she is yielding to George's pleading and the impulse of her own heart, and the romance that began in the foyer of the Royal Opera house is about to be climaxed in a secret marriage.

Ecstasy to Anguish.

The story moves from ecstasy to anguish. First comes malicious gossip, then public denial of the marriage in parliament, humiliation in the English court of law, and the desertion of old friends, until George, too, in reckless dissipation, forgets their high dream of enduring love. From the papers Maria learns of her husband's enthronement as king of England. No word even from his deathbed reaches the woman who waits "ever faithful." The years and a busy world pass her by.

Then finally comes another king, nephew of her royal husband, who would honor her with the title that long should have been hers. But he finds Maria, grown strong in wisdom and patience, still constant to the vow of her youth, "Regi semper fidelis."

At the University of Notre Dame, where he is giving a course in Shakespearean literature, Mr. Leslie heard of the forthcoming production at Mundelein and made known his interest in the Laetare players' undertaking. They responded with an invitation, and he will attend a dress rehersal on Wednesday as guest critic.

Dance Mimes on Program.

At both performances during the interludes between the episodes, dance mimes, accompanied by the Mundelein ensemble, will present interpretations of Bocherinni's "Minuet d'Anglais," the "Valse des Fleurs," by Tschaikowsky, and an original poem by Miss Tynan entitled "Epitaph," which will be given in solo.

The players assisting Miss Tynan will be: Miss Dorothy White, Miss Mercedes McCambridge, Miss Ella Jamieson, Miss Margaret Cleary, Miss Kathleen Feely, Miss Marion Green, Miss Catherine Heerey, Miss Katherine Kearns, Miss Jane Malkemus, Miss Caroline Palma, Miss Janice Quinn, Miss Concetta Alonzi, Miss Eleanor Bertrand, Miss Marguerite Dunnion, Miss Maryhelen Flanagan, Miss Betty Haffner, Miss Rosemary Lux, Miss Dorothea Nee, Miss Mary Russell, Miss Eileen Sullivan, Miss Alice Young, and Miss Mary Young.

DICK TRACY
By CHESTER GOULD
WHISPER
BUT I TELL YOU IT'S SO! THE DETECTIVE HAS MOVED THE KID AND HIS MOTHER TO A NEW HIDEAWAY - THE CLYDEMON HOTEL.
HOW DO YOU KNOW THAT?
BORIS' SISTER IN DISGUISE
STILL POSING SUCCESSFULLY AS BORIS ARSON'S LAWYER, ZORA ARSON-THE CRIMINAL'S SISTER, PAYS ANOTHER VISIT TO HER BROTHER AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS...
YOU SEE AS THEY WERE TAKING ME TO THE SHOW-UP ROOM YESTERDAY I PASSED THAT KID, JUNIOR TRACY AND THE CHIEF IN THE HALL! I OVERHEARD THE KID TELL THE CHIEF THAT TRACY WAS MOVING THEM TO THE CLYDEMON.
GET IT.
AT THIS VERY INSTANT THREE PEOPLE ARE ENTERING THE "CLYDEMON" HOTEL..
HOTEL
WELL, HERE ARE YOUR ROOMS -YOU CAN REMOVE YOUR DISGUISES NOW.
THANK GOODNESS FOR THAT! NOW TO GET OUT OF THIS DAME'S OUTFIT- AND TAKE "OSCAR" OUT OF HIS GRIP.
I'M SURE YOU TWO WILL BE SAFE HERE, MARY, UNTIL I CAN RUN DOWN THIS MURDERER WHO'S TRYING TO TAKE YOUR LIFE. REMEMBER, NEITHER OF YOU LEAVE THESE ROOMS- ANYTHING YOU WANT WILL BE SENT YOU - AND I SHALL CALL YOU OVER THE TELEPHONE EVERY TWO HOURS.
AS TRACY LEAVES THE HOTEL- ANOTHER FIGURE ENTERS..... UNNOTICED BY THE DETECTIVE.
HOTEL CLYDE
SINGLE ROOM WITH A SHOWER, PLEASE. HM-M.. YOU HAVE QUITE A LIST OF NEW GUESTS TODAY.
YES- BUSINESS IS ALWAYS GOOD WITH US, SIR. SERVICE IS OUR MOTTO.
ZORA ARSON
FIVE MINUTES LATER IN HER ROOM....
HA! THE REGISTER SHOWED A "MARY JONES AND DAUGHTER". THAT MUST BE THEM - ROOM 617 - THE NAME IS A PHONEY, AND THEY WERE PROBABLY IN DISGUISE ANYWAY. WELL, I'LL WAIT AWHILE.
TWO HOURS LATER - MIDNIGHT!
617
GET UNDER THESE COVERS AND KEEP QUIET, OSCAR! THERE'S SOMEBODY FOOLING WITH THAT DOOR LOCK! SH-H! THEY'VE GOT THE DOOR OPEN!
CLICK
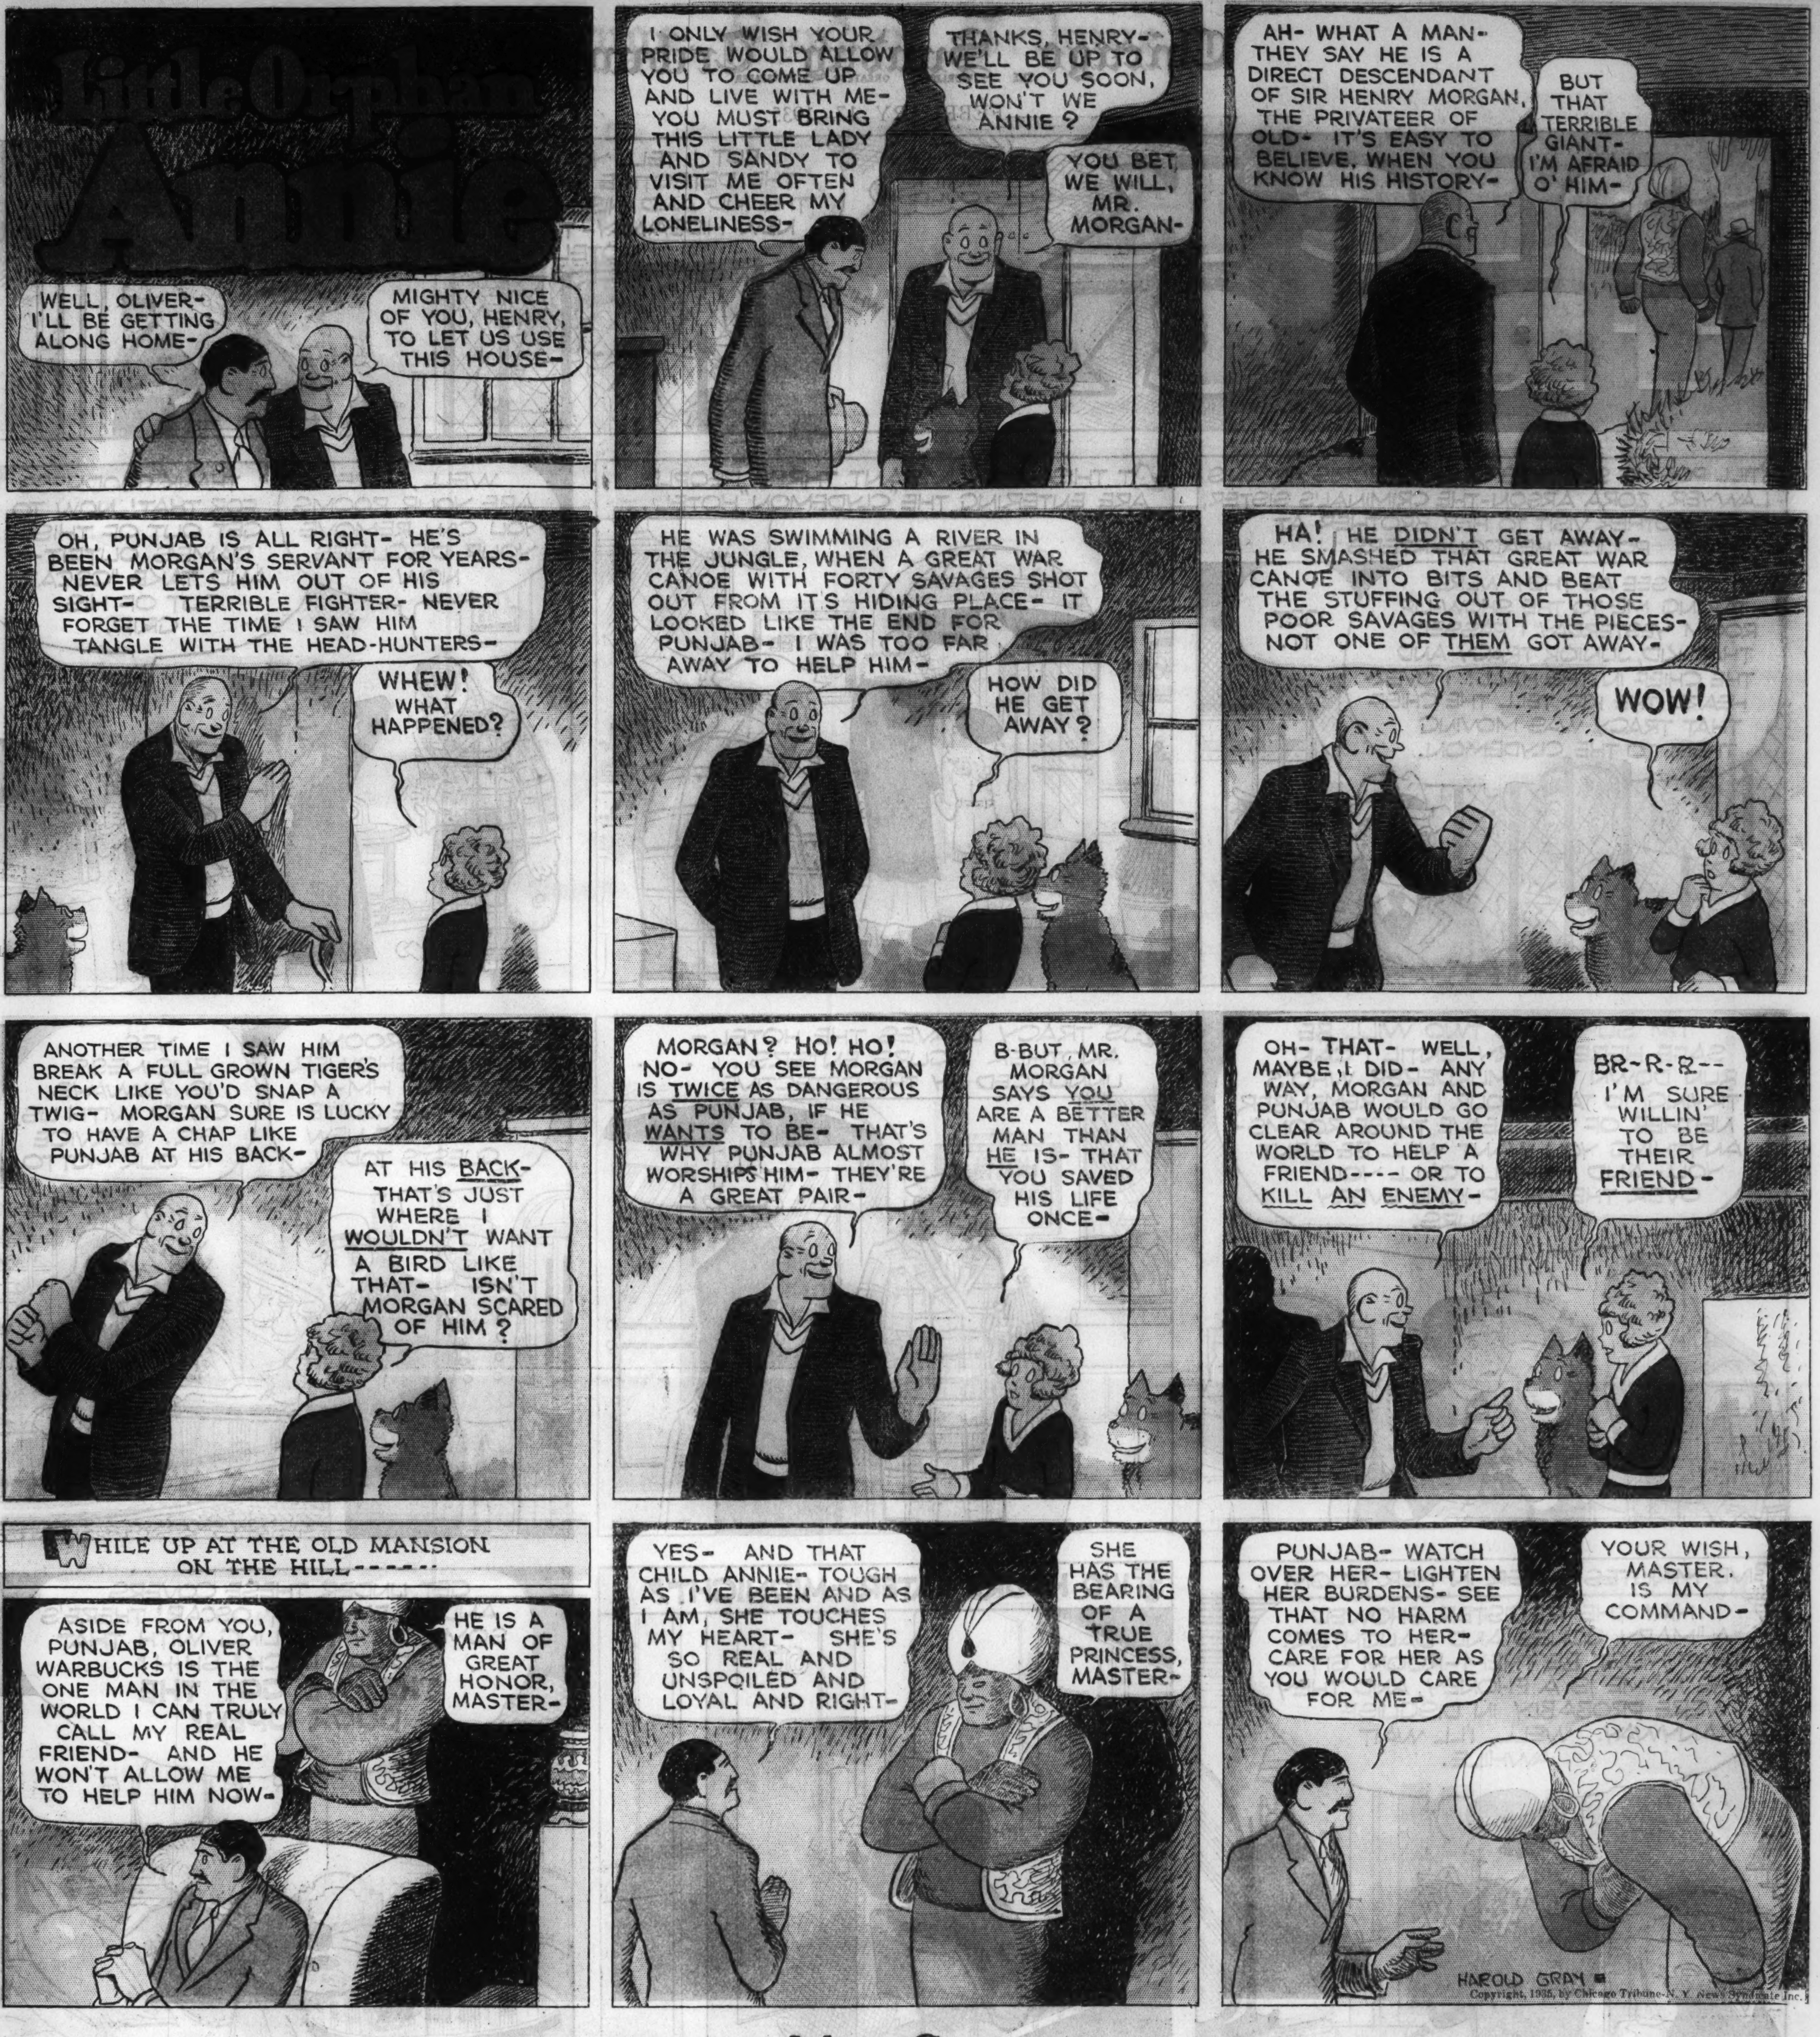
MOVING SILENTLY TOWARD THE SLEEPING FIGURES - THE SHADOWY FORM HESITATES AN INSTANT..THE CLICK OF A PISTOL BEING COCKED IS HEARD AS A CIRCLE OF LIGHT FROM A FLASHLIGHT IS THROWN ON MARY STEELE'S FACE...
-AND THEN....
TAKE THAT, YOU KILLER! MOTHER, LOOK OUT!
CRACK
HELLO - THE CLYDEMON? - ROOM 617, PLEASE.
I'LL RIDE HOME WITH YOU- JUST AS SOON AS I CALL JUNIOR AND HIS MOTHER, CHIEF. I TOLD 'EM I'D CHECK UP EVERY TWO HOURS TO SEE THAT THEY WERE OKAY.

Little Orphan Annie



WELL, OLIVER- I'LL BE GETTING ALONG HOME-
MIGHTY NICE OF YOU, HENRY, TO LET US USE THIS HOUSE-
I ONLY WISH YOUR PRIDE WOULD ALLOW YOU TO COME UP AND LIVE WITH ME- YOU MUST BRING THIS LITTLE LADY AND SANDY TO VISIT ME OFTEN AND CHEER MY LONELINESS-THANKS, HENRY- WE'LL BE UP TO SEE YOU SOON, WON'T WE ANNIE?
YOU BET WE WILL, MR. MORGAN-
AH- WHAT A MAN- THEY SAY HE IS A DIRECT DESCENDANT OF SIR HENRY MORGAN, THE PRIVATEER OF OLD- IT'S EASY TO BELIEVE, WHEN YOU KNOW HIS HISTORY-
BUT THAT TERRIBLE GIANT- I'M AFRAID O' HIM-
OH, PUNJAB IS ALL RIGHT- HE'S BEEN MORGAN'S SERVANT FOR YEARS- NEVER LETS HIM OUT OF HIS SIGHT- TERRIBLE FIGHTER- NEVER FORGET THE TIME I SAW HIM TANGLE WITH THE HEAD-HUNTERS-
WHEW! WHAT HAPPENED?
HE WAS SWIMMING A RIVER IN THE JUNGLE, WHEN A GREAT WAR CANOE WITH FORTY SAVAGES SHOT OUT FROM IT'S HIDING PLACE- IT LOOKED LIKE THE END FOR PUNJAB- I WAS TOO FAR AWAY TO HELP HIM-
HOW DID HE GET AWAY?
HA! HE DIDN'T GET AWAY- HE SMASHED THAT GREAT WAR CANOE INTO BITS AND BEAT THE STUFFING OUT OF THOSE POOR SAVAGES WITH THE PIECES- NOT ONE OF THEM GOT AWAY-
WOW!
ANOTHER TIME I SAW HIM BREAK A FULL GROWN TIGER'S NECK LIKE YOU'D SNAP A TWIG- MORGAN SURE IS LUCKY TO HAVE A CHAP LIKE PUNJAB AT HIS BACK-
AT HIS BACK- THAT'S JUST WHERE I WOULDN'T WANT A BIRD LIKE THAT- ISN'T MORGAN SCARED OF HIM?
MORGAN? HO! HO! NO- YOU SEE MORGAN IS TWICE AS DANGEROUS AS PUNJAB, IF HE WANTS TO BE- THAT'S WHY PUNJAB ALMOST WORSHIPS HIM- THEY'RE A GREAT PAIR-
B-BUT, MR. MORGAN SAYS YOU ARE A BETTER MAN THAN HE IS- THAT YOU SAVED HIS LIFE ONCE-
OH- THAT- WELL, MAYBE I DID- ANY WAY, MORGAN AND PUNJAB WOULD GO CLEAR AROUND THE WORLD TO HELP A FRIEND---- OR TO KILL AN ENEMY-
BR-R-R-- I'M SURE WILLIN' TO BE THEIR FRIEND-
WHILE UP AT THE OLD MANSION ON THE HILL-----
ASIDE FROM YOU, PUNJAB, OLIVER WARBUCKS IS THE ONE MAN IN THE WORLD I CAN TRULY CALL MY REAL FRIEND- AND HE WON'T ALLOW ME TO HELP HIM NOW-
HE IS A MAN OF GREAT HONOR, MASTER-
YES- AND THAT CHILD ANNIE- TOUGH AS I'VE BEEN AND AS I AM, SHE TOUCHES MY HEART- SHE'S SO REAL AND UNSPOILED AND LOYAL AND RIGHT-
SHE HAS THE BEARING OF A TRUE PRINCESS, MASTER-
PUNJAB- WATCH OVER HER- LIGHTEN HER BURDENS- SEE THAT NO HARM COMES TO HER- CARE FOR HER AS YOU WOULD CARE FOR ME-
YOUR WISH, MASTER, IS MY COMMAND-

SO YOU'D LIKE TO BE SHOWN AROUND THE LAND OF EREHWON. EH? WELL, JUST FOLLOW OLD ABRA CADABRA AND I'LL SHOW YOU THE SIGHTS—
GR-R-R-R-!
TUT-TUT! DON'T BE FRIGHTENED! HE WON'T HARM YOU—
GOOD NIGHT! WHAT'S THAT? IT'S AFTER US!
HE'S NOT GROWLING— HE'S ONLY CRYING— AND IT'S NOT A BIG DRAGON— IT'S A BABY DRAGON—
HE'S GROWLING AT US— WE'D BETTER RUN—
IT'S A GREAT BIG DRAGON, TIM!
ARE YOU REALLY CRYING, MR. DRAGON?
WELL, FOLKS— IT'S A LONG STORY— I'M THE LAST OF THE DRAGONS— JUST A BABY— 963 YEARS OLD— YOU PROBABLY HAVE READ IN THE STORY BOOKS ABOUT ALL MY RELATIVES— AND HOW THEY WERE KILLED OFF BY KNIGHTS OF OLD—
WHAT IF THEY DID DESTROY A FEW CASTLES AND EAT THE INHABITANTS— IT WAS ALL IN GOOD CLEAN FUN— BUT DID THE STORY BOOK WRITERS EVER LET THEM WIN A BATTLE WITH A KNIGHT— NO! HE'D JUST SWING HIS MAGIC SWORD AND THEY WERE GONERS—
THEY COULD HAVE HELD THEIR OWN IN AN EVEN FIGHT— BUT WHAT CHANCE DID THEY HAVE AGAINST ENCHANTED WEAPONS— NONE! AND NOW I'M THE LAST OF THE DRAGONS AND NOBODY WILL EVER HEAR THE TRUE STORY OF MY POOR DEPARTED ANCESTORS— THEN YOU ASK ME WHY I'M UNHAPPY— SNIFF— SNIFF—
COME ON, CHILDREN— YOU HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING YET—
WELL— IT JUST GOES TO SHOW, TIM— YOU CAN'T BELIEVE EVERYTHING YOU READ—
GEE— THE POOR LITTLE FELLER— I FEEL SORRY FOR HIM—

DISTINCTIVELY MOLER FEATURES

Nowhere but at MOLER'S Can Any One Learn Beauty Culture OR Men's Barbering with a Single One of the Refinements Enumerated Below

MOLER

Was the first institution of its kind in the World. Originated in 1893 by A. B. Moler—Branches in all principal cities.

Among the exclusive and distinctive features at Moler's are:

FIRST.

Individual booths for each pupil. A complete little beauty parlor in itself. No elbowing—no confusion—no distraction.

SECOND.

Teachers trained in Moler's Own Special Teachers' Training school—each as carefully prepared in every phase of theory or practice work as a trained nurse. No pickups from recent graduates—no hit and miss information—no discord.

THIRD.

One textbook—their own copyright that includes every unit of study required by any State Board and so illustrated that the study is like looking at a picture book. No last minute search for information not at hand at examination time—therefore no failures.

FOURTH.

Three distinctively different plans of school for three different kinds of positions.

THE UNIVERSAL COURSE—That prepares for every State Board Examination.

THE PRIVATE LESSON COURSE—That qualifies for the most exacting positions.

THE REGULAR COURSE—At half rate—that enables you to pass the Illinois State Board Examination.

FIFTH.

THE TEVERBAUGH HAIR CULTURE COURSE—A hair growing treatment—with wonderful possibilities—in itself a profession upon which any man or woman can build.

SIXTH.

THE TRIAL JOBS—The positions given advanced students before being sent to a permanent place or established in a shop of your own.

CLASS "A."

In addition to all of these distinctions, every Moler college through the Country has been classified by the National Barber and Beauty Schools association as class "A." This means highest quality.

Students from out of the City can earn board and room while learning, and, over and above all, terms within your reach.

Call if convenient.
Phone—if you can't.
Write—from distance.

NEAR NORTH SIDE

It's very nice when you close your desk at the end of the day to know that after a short, brisk walk, just 5 blocks north of the river, you will come to a quaint little lamp lighted court that makes you feel far away from Chicago, and where, up a winding stairway, you come to a studio that—well, it has a fireplace, it's cozy, or perhaps a lofty ceiling or 35 ft. living room or roof garden. Anyway, you like it and you're glad you live there. You are home long before most of your friends, with a full evening before you. 2, 3, or 4 rooms, one a bungalow. One a big, spacious family apt. with sun kissed rooms. Also shop space.

Less working hours per week make it possible to derive a good part of the living for the average family from a small tract. California offers this opportunity, where many varieties of fruits and vegetables are grown the year round. The Small Farm Home is a proven success in many localities in California. The Santa Fe Railway has no land to sell, but offers free information service to help you get right location. Low fares to California. USED AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE.

YOU ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW

THE TRUTH

WHEN YOU BUY A USED CAR

offers you over 200 fine slightly used cars to choose from. These were all traded in on new Studebaker cars, and then were carefully checked over by expert Studebaker mechanics.

These are not "REPOSSESSED" cars, nor "foreclosed" finance cars—but legitimate values. Every year model quoted and every representation made is CORRECT and will be backed up in WRITING. You know what you buy when you make a purchase at Studebaker Sales Co. You get 5 days' driving trial and a guarantee that means something.

What's more—every car purchased on time is financed through Studebaker's OWN credit department. That means lower rates, confidential handling—and it also means you will not be "pushed around" by some outside finance company. TYPICAL VALUES BELOW:

OLDSMOBILE—Sedan. 1933. You will look far and wide to find an auto anywhere in town to equal this one. It's the last word for smart appearance and sparkling performance. Today $595.

CHRYSLER—Sedan. A de luxe 1933. Free wheeling, etc. It has the appearance and performance of an auto fresh from the factory. Our special price, only $585.

GRAHAM—Sport coupe. 1933 de luxe model with rumble seat, and every conceivable extra. Examine this Graham from bumper to bumper and you'll agree that it still possesses all the original newness. Driven only slightly more than 12 months. Now $595.

STUDEBAKER—De luxe sedan. Recent 1934 Commander 8. Has every modern improvement. Free wheeling, safety glass, etc. Finish has not a mar on it. Expensive upholstery. Tires appear unused. Motor was driven just enough to be properly broken in. Offered at a bargain figure.

ROCKNE—Sedan. 1932. You can't beat this bargain. Free wheeling. Cushioned power, safety glass, etc. If it's a sporty car you like with magnificent performance—you'll go for this Rockne. A super bargain at $345.

NASH—8 Sedan. 1932. It was in storage for almost 2 years. We checked it over carefully in our shop. We recommend it as an outstanding Nash auto. It's topnotch thruout. Easily worth more than our price. $475.

ESSEX—Coach. 1932. A very clean car that is in dandy running order. Many nice extras. It's a very snappy car and the first man in with $295 drives away in it.

HUDSON—Custom Sedan. Late 1932 car with many extras. The finish, tires, motor, and upholstery are A-1. Only $395.

STUDEBAKER—Sport Coupe. Late '33 with free wheeling and big rumble seat. This wonderful coupe saw so little service that we defy any one to tell it from a brand new car. It's a real winner at only $595.

BUICK—Small 8 Sedan. Late 1931. Many extras. This is a lowslung car with a world of power and pep. It looks and runs as though never driven a mile. Now only $345.

CADILLAC—V-8 Sedan. 1931 de luxe model. Has wire wheels, side mounts, extras galore. In dandy all around condition. Now $695.

AUBURN—Brougham. 1931 de luxe model with extras galore. Was actually used for only a very short time. Every detail is positively like brand new. Special at $345.

LA SALLE—Sport Coupe. 1930. It was owned by a wealthy family who gave it the very best of attention. Now every detail of the interior and exterior is 100%. Has a sweet running motor. This looks like a real $1,000 value. Only $325.

CHEVROLET—Coupe. 1930. We recommend this as the outstanding Chevrolet value in town. Every detail is positively the last word. Priced low for quick sale. $145.

DE SOTO—Sport Sedan. '30. You'll be surprised when you see this one. It looks and runs better than cars priced $500. Now $225

Norma Shearer chooses curls and center part.

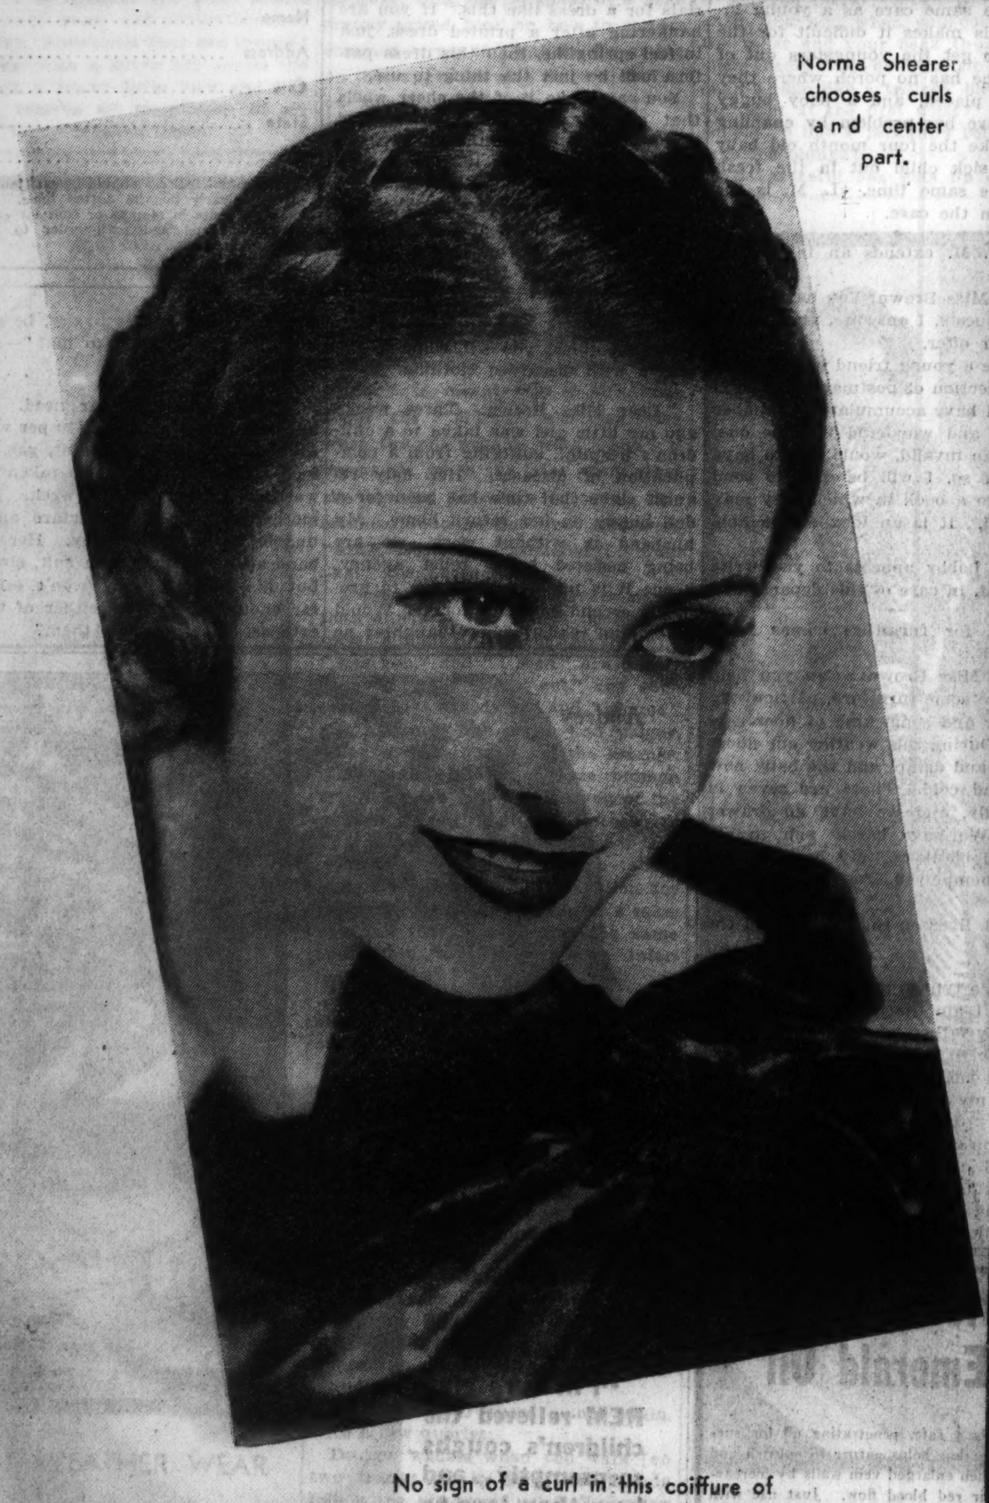
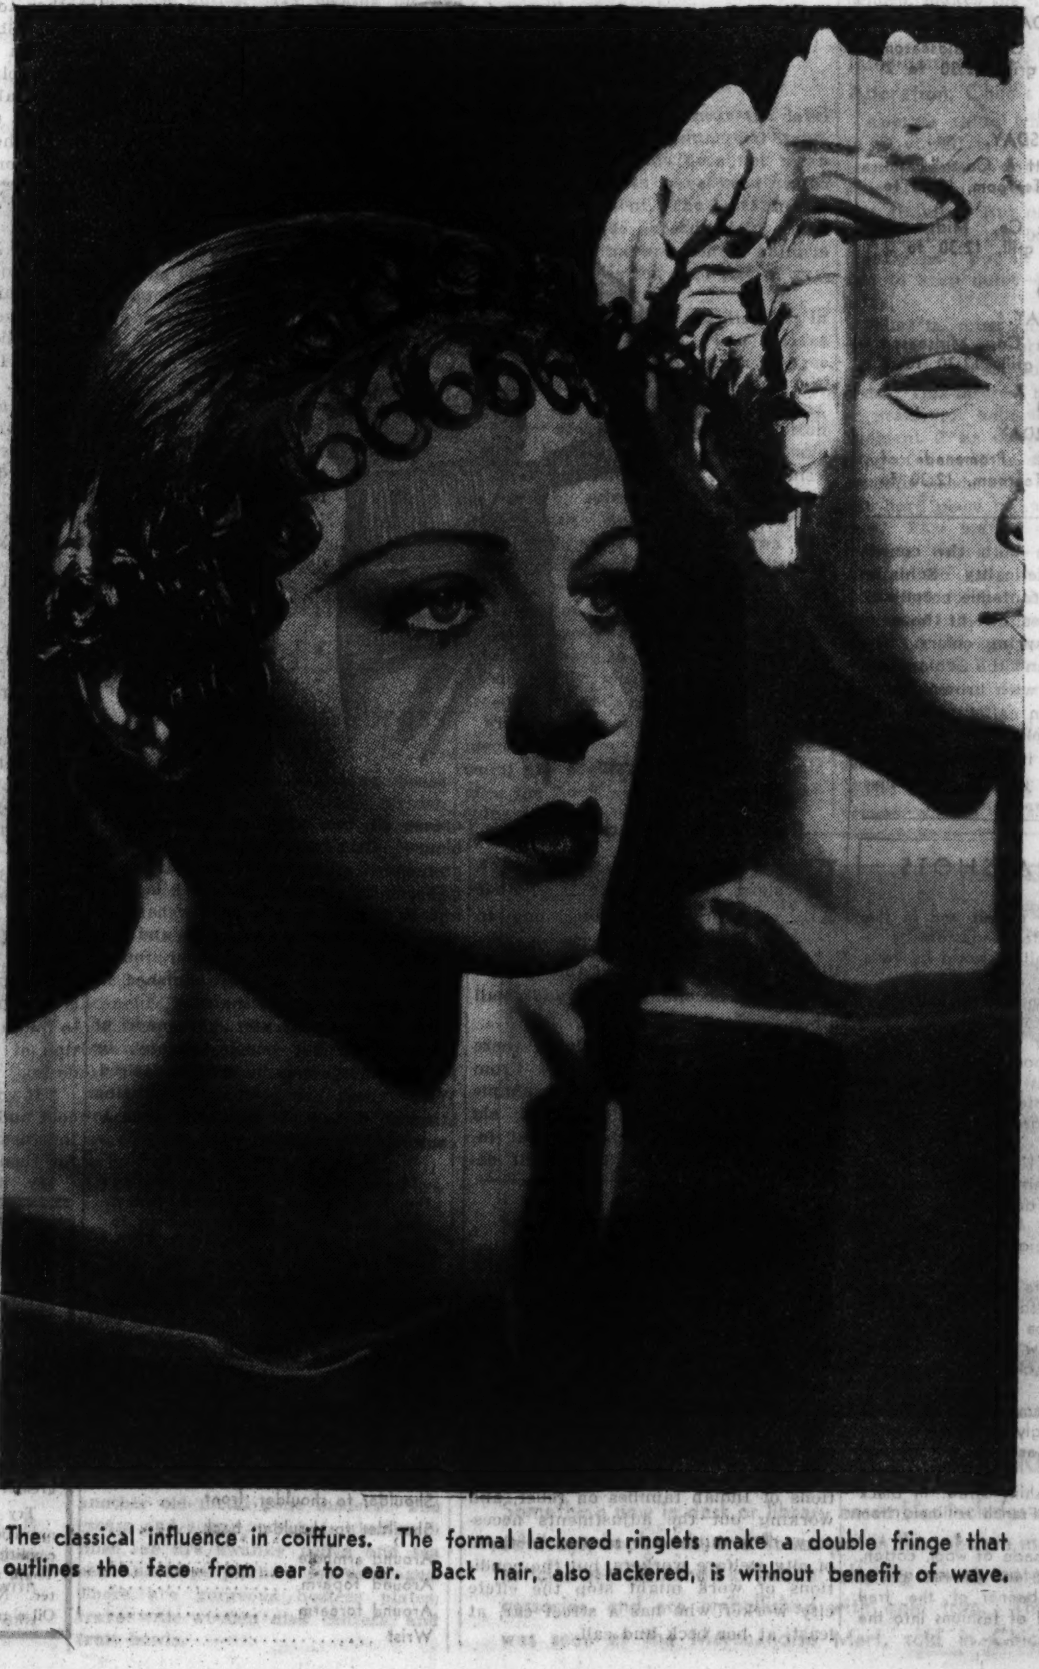
[TRIBUNE Studio Photos.]



No sign of a curl in this coiffure of Barbara Stanwyck's. Hair is parted in the center and brought sleekly back to reveal the forehead. The flat coronet braid breaks the flat line.



The classical influence in coiffures. The formal lackered ringlets make a double fringe that outlines the face from ear to ear. Back hair, also lackered, is without benefit of wave.

Through the Looking Glass

Coiffures Experiment Freely with Curls, Braids, Sleek Effects in Absence of Spring Ultimatums.

BY ELEANOR NANGLE

WHAT will make the headlines this spring? Referring, of course, to the hair, not horrors.

It's any one's guess. This, it appears, will be a season without ultimatums from the hairdressers. They can't come out flatly and hiss, "no curls." Because there are—and will be—curls. Neither can they dictate death to the sleek line. There are—and will be—sculptured, even lackered, crowning glories. And neither can they be bossy about the braid. They as wants a braid can have a braid.

It's the open season for individuality. Your hair can be sleek, if that suits you; by the same token it can be fluffed out like a golliwog's. But beware of this unless you're the vital type!

Bangs will adorn some, but not all, of our best brows. On the other hand, there will be ample evidence of the off-the-face hair trend too. Many a beautiful forehead will be accented by locks swept backwards.

In this sea of individuality only a few rules emerge to which the troubled woman may cling.

Necklines—flat or fluffy—must never be scraggly looking.

The face, the place, and the hour must be reckoned with. What's coiffure sauce for the giddy woman of leisure is apt to be most inappropriate sauce for the business girl who must be trim.

One must consider the hat; there must be perfect harmony of hairline with the hatline. Where there is no hat in back or on the sides there must be hair to round out the contour.

In other words, know thyself, thy hat, and thy hairdresser. Then—write your own headline!

Business Girl Must Cultivate Trim Simplicity

Dark Tailored Suit with Crisp White Blouse the Ace of Office Ensembles

By Bettina Bedwell.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—There are fashions, designed by canny designers, both in Paris and here, that are intended to suit the working girl and her highly special environment eight hours a day. I asked several of the creators of these clothes what they considered the principal virtues should be in styles to go to work. One of them put it neatly: "The business woman should dress to look trim and dainty, to be comfortable, and to please the masculine eye of the boss."

The boss may have vague ideas on the subject of style, but he usually has a pride in his office and a sense of the fitness of things scattered around the business-scape. He rarely appreciates a Jean Harlow or a Broadway beauty effect in the clothes line of his stenog. He has a mystic faith in the efficiency of good tailoring, freshly laundered white blouses, and well kept hair and nails.

Lots of girls who do their jobs in topnotch fashion seem to be afraid to look efficient in their dress. There hangs over the well cut suit of dark blue, with a simple blouse of white, a sinister atmosphere of the "strong minded woman" from whom all men flee, in the minds of these girls. This is a whimsical delusion and has no contact with reality.

Other ladies in business believe, poor souls, that it is up to them to be the dernier cri in fashion, and they choose, alas, clothes that have nothing but originality to recommend them, fitness for the place and the girl being omitted completely.

Others are sentimentally unable to resist the cravings of Eve for personal adornment and apply the fancy knick knacks of dress not wisely but too well.

Man Admires Clothes Not Too Remote from His Own.

None of these clothes habits can please the masculine eye of the boss or of any other man who takes a personal interest in the wearer of said duds. Man's limited knowledge of the science of women's dress makes him a poor judge of style in most instances, but there are always styles which man can and does appreciate. He likes the well made, tailored things that are not too remote from his own world of dress, as it were, and he has an eye for fresh, well pressed details.

Tailored suits, for instance, are leaders of fashions for the coming season, and the tailored suit is the meat and bread of the working girl's category of style. The suit that has a soft and complicated jacket is, however, out of the picture when clothes for big business are being chosen. There is a limitation, too, in the matter of blouses, and the giddy and transparent are omitted. Yards of silver fox should not be wound around the upper stories of the girl who goes to work at nine in the morning. She may choose a single fox fur, if she will, but something like the marten stole, shown upper right, would be far more charming and correct.

Hats Should Be Simple and Shoes Plain.

The suit that the business woman can wear is shown at the right, foreground and background. You might have it made double breasted or cut a bit different, but so long as it is as simple as this you will be okay in every sense. Choose gray flannel if you like, or dark blue smooth wool, or one color tweed, but don't go in for too fany or too bright stuff. Wear a smart sailor with it, or a beret, or one of the new cloches. Wear plain pumps or oxfords on your feet. You can have a dashing scarf, like the one shown, which is made of cloky.

For the girl who just can't feel right in a suit, the jacket ensemble at the left, foreground and background, is the type to select. Nothing could be smarter than this dark blue, semi-sheer ensemble from Lucile Paray. The dress is simple and well cut, with two box plaits low in the skirt, and a wide lether belt that fastens on two buttons sewed to the dress. The bertha is new and tricky, being bordered with white piqué and lined with it. The small hat is trimmed with an embroidered white piqué bow. The bertha goes over the collarless, fitted jacket that makes the wrap, and that has a flaring peplum.

Schiaparelli's Peasant Frock Is Splendid for the Office.

The Lucien Lelong ensemble shown, second from the left, foreground and background, would suit the youthful girl just getting into business. It is made of crêpe de chine, patterned with tiny beige and navy blue checks, and the peplumed bodice has a childish white linen collar. Its wrap is a demure cape of the material, which slips under the dress collar and fastens on cuff links. With such a dress a plain version of the Regency bonnet could be worn, and Regency flats, the new low heeled slippers, would be attractive.

Schiaparelli's peasant frock shown second from the right is another good type of frock to wear to business. Its lack of contrasting trimming is one of its good points on both the counts of taste and of practicality. Schiaparelli makes it of a fantaisie crêpe silk in a subdued old rose, one of the newest and smartest spring colors. The wide belt is beige, and the Schiaparelli hat is beige straw with brown ribbon trimming. A brown calfskin bag and brown oxfords complete this attractive set up for the girl in business.

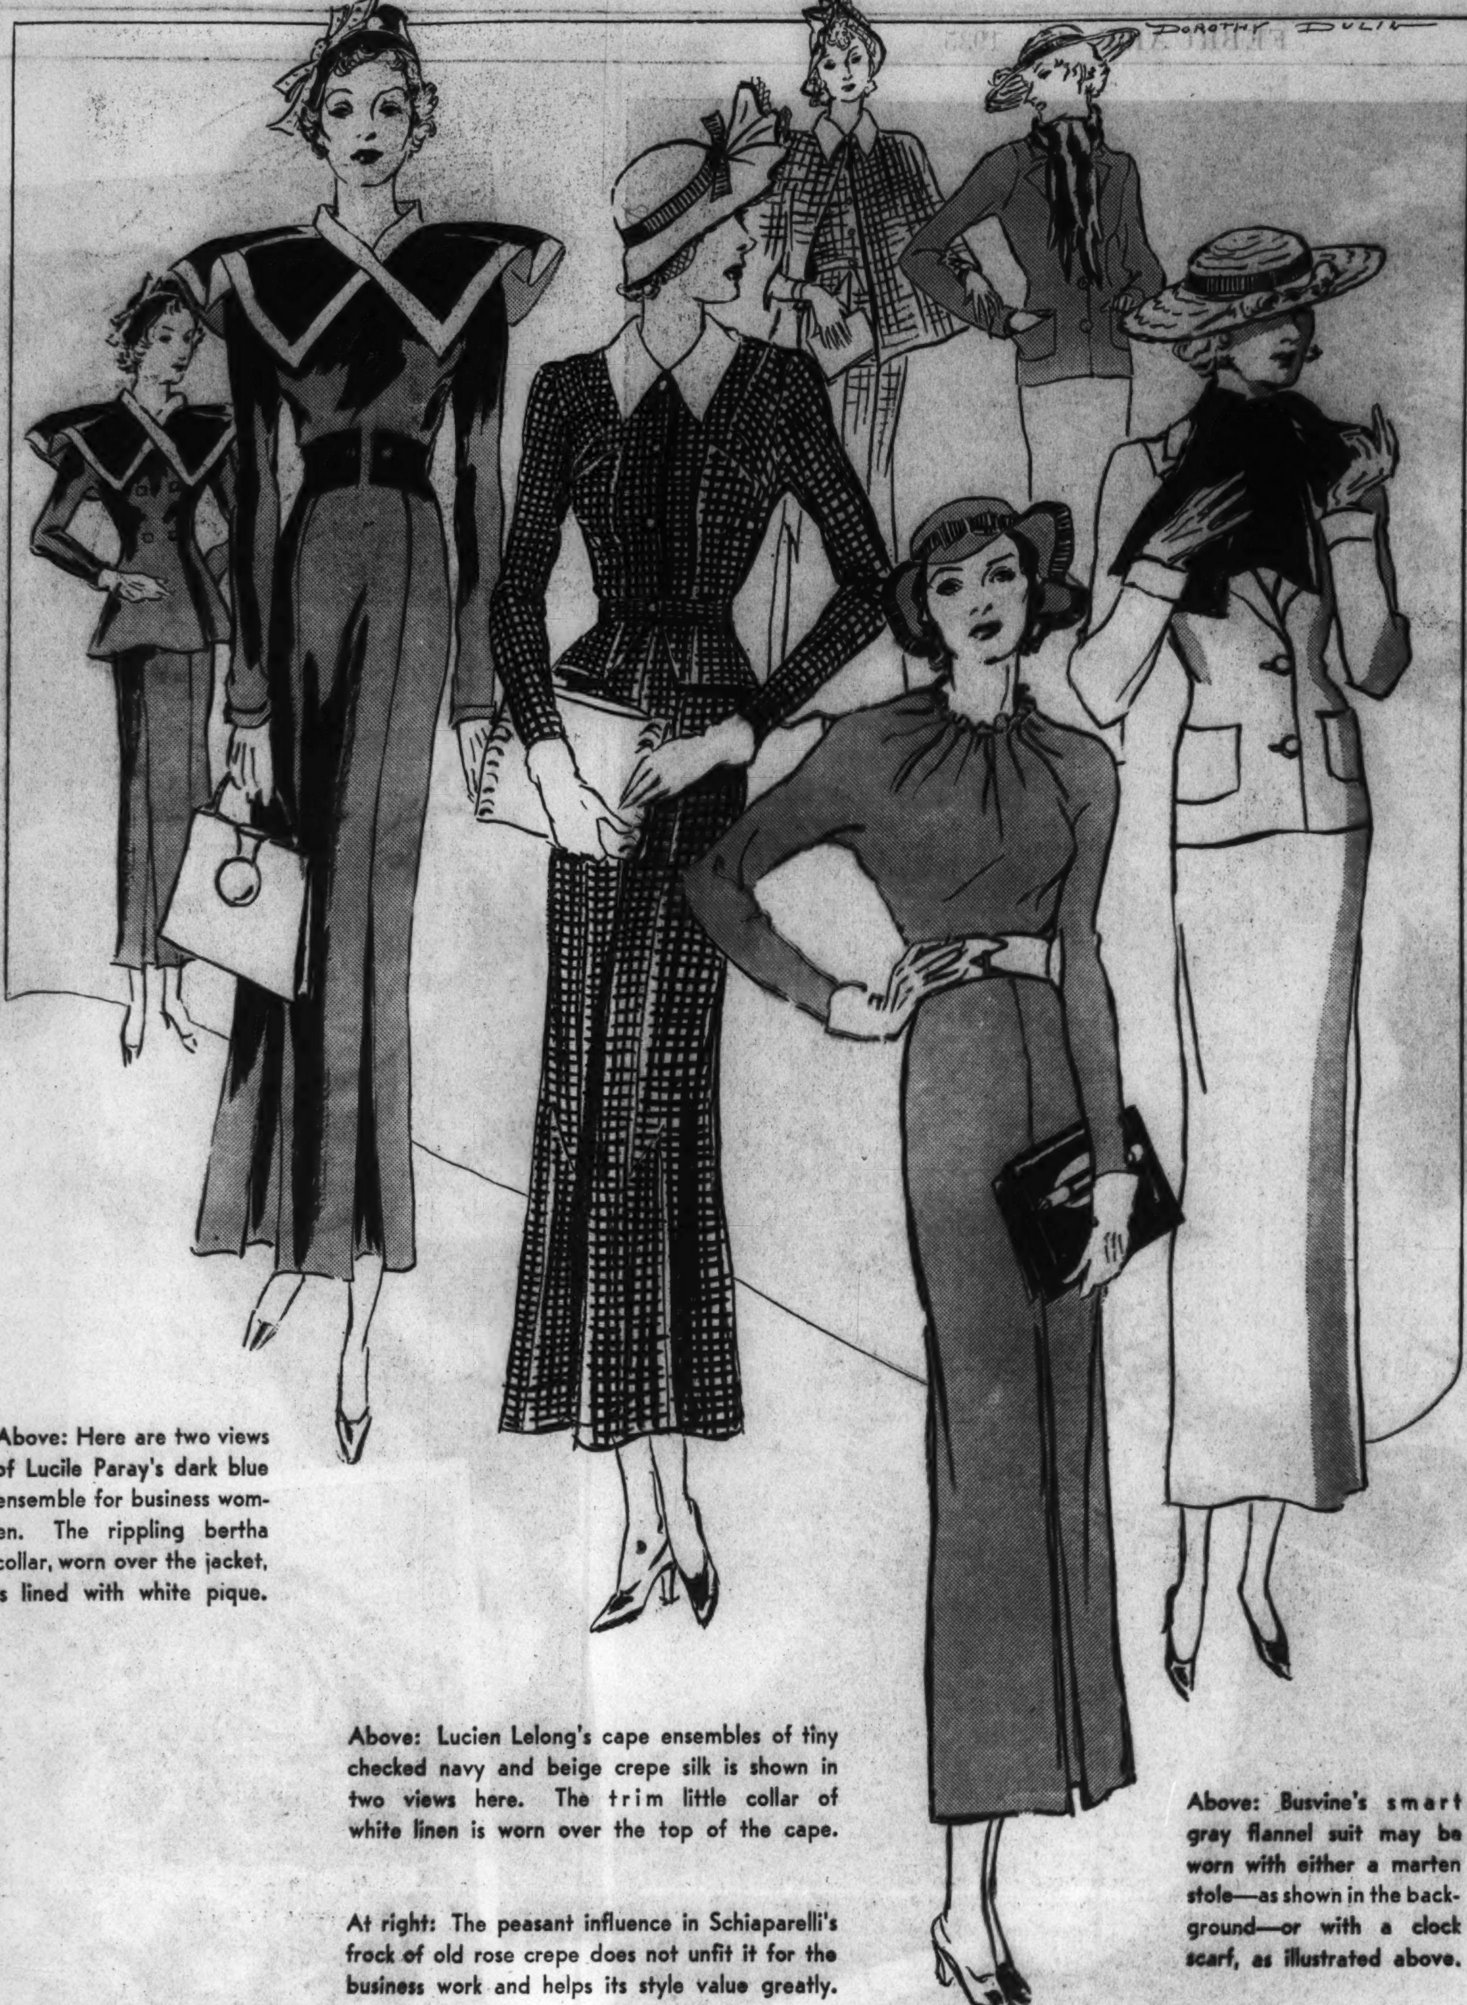
FROCKS THAT DELIGHT THE BOSS' EYE



Above: Here are two views of Lucile Paray's dark blue ensemble for business women. The rippling bertha collar, worn over the jacket, is lined with white pique.

Above: Lucien Lelong's cape ensembles of tiny checked navy and beige crepe silk is shown in two views here. The trim little collar of white linen is worn over the top of the cape.

At right: The peasant influence in Schiaparelli's frock of old rose crepe does not unfit it for the business work and helps its style value greatly.

Above: Busvine's smart gray flannel suit may be worn with either a marten stole—as shown in the background—or with a clock scarf, as illustrated above.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

- Hats in Regency pastels and in the lusty peasant pastel shades are being pushed out to a waiting world by Paris milliners.
- Much has been said about navy blue hose, sponsored, they say, by Princess Marina. Navy blue is not a true fashion shade for hose, and if you do not want your legs to look, as the Duchess de Sermoneta said, "before the war," stick to beige in soft, medium tones.
- If you are the kind of a girl who adores fresh, white details and accessories with your dark dresses, choose starched lace and linen to be new style, and leave pique to the more conservative.
- Pink is a color to watch when you dream of accessories to wear with your spring suit, be it black, navy, or gray flannel. Straw yellow is another significant spring color with these suit shades.
- Chamois and chamois colored gloves will be exceedingly chic with tailored suits this spring, and so will natural and white pigskin.
- Flat berets of shiny straw, in black and colors, are French millinery items that look promising.
- Lace sweaters, made of wool, cotton, and linen thread, and in sweet pastel shades, carry the banner of the frail and feminine mood of fashions into the realm of sports.

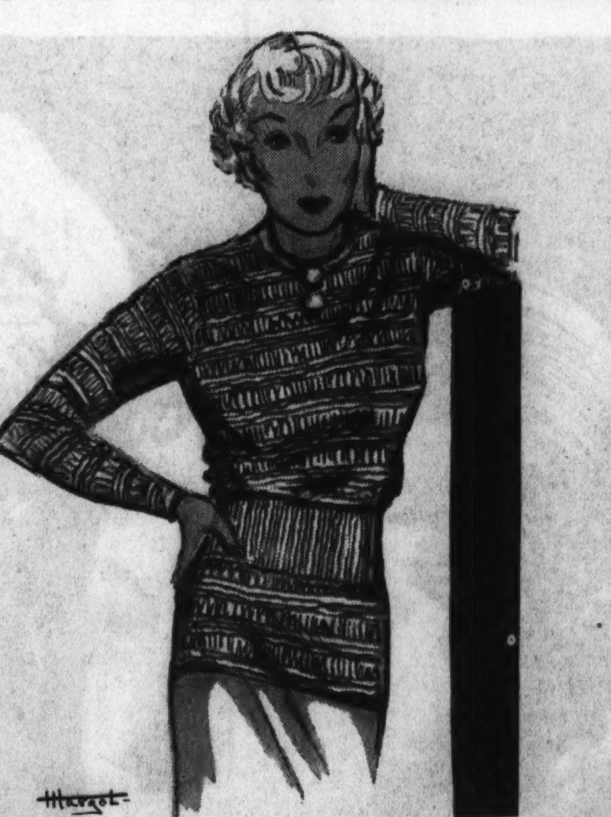
Long Sweater Is Flattering to the Tall and Small Alike



By Jean Macdonald.

FOR every woman who likes a short sweater there is another who prefers a long one—to reach the hip line. The sweater illustrated today is one of the "long" ones and is becoming to tall and small alike.

At the bottom of the blouse there is a band of plain knitting. From there upward there is the simple matter of reversing the good old fashioned stocking web stitch at intervals of one inch. The slight decrease at the waist creates a tiny bloused effect which some figures need and which other figures find extremely becoming. The square neck is high and is finished with a narrow band of crochet in a contrasting color; and two crochet buttons add a final touch. Straight tight sleeves are finished in the same contrasting manner.

The original sweater was made of cotton cord, but boucle, saxony, or French zephyr may be used, if desired. With these simplest of knitting stitches, it will not take any time to complete the sweater.

If you wish instructions for knitting the long blouse illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter. Be sure to include the following measurements:

Three Indian Women of Oklahoma in Social Work

THREE Indian women in Oklahoma have been placed by the government in social service work for their own people, and are the first to hold such positions. They are Mrs. Tephia Folsom, Mrs. Ioleta H. McElhaney, and Mrs. Gelela Walkingstick. The trio will be responsible for investigations of Indian families on relief, and working out the adjustments necessary. The duties are similar to those of city welfare workers, but the conditions of work might stop the effete city worker who has a street car, at least, at her beck and call.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Modern Conveniences of Housekeeping Badly Needed by Mothers of Poor Families; Any Articles That Readers Can Contribute Will Ease Burden Greatly.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

By Sally Joy Brown.

TO THE average woman of moderate circumstance housework is no longer drudgery. It may be tiresome, but washing in a well equipped laundry is not the wearing labor it was in the days when hot water was not instantly available and when irons were heated on the stove. A vacuum cleaner or a carpet sweeper eliminate the back break of sweeping; sewing machines save eyesight and nerves; high chairs and buggies keep the baby out of mischief.

But what of the housewife or mother who has none of these conveniences? What of the mother who has no laundry, who must heat water on a rickety stove, who has no carpet sweeper, often no carpets to sweep?

The homes of the poor in many sections of the city are extremely primitive, and hundreds of women are faced with such old fashioned drudgery. There are women whose husbands are able to provide only rent and the plainest of food, and that by the greatest stretching of pennies. There are other women on relief, trying to lead a normal life under abnormal conditions. They must keep the house with no convenient tools, must manage to watch the baby, cook the meals, guard and guide their children, and, above all, stand by and encourage unemployed husbands who feel useless and discouraged, whose pride and self-assurance have slowly melted away to a sullen, despairing silence.

Money is decidedly not elastic, and neither are relief budgets, so electric irons, baby buggies, rugs, and such comforts cannot be secured by ordinary measures. All of which are reasons why we receive hundreds of requests from the poor for articles which many women take for granted.

A typical case is that of the D. family, which consists of mother and father and two small children. The mother has done all her own washing and ironing and, during a long period of unemployment, their electric iron, for which they were paying on the instalment plan, was reclaimed. The father finally has secured employment at a salary much smaller than he formerly earned, and it will barely fill their needs. Have you an extra iron this mother can have?

◆

A worker for an infant welfare organization writes of a mother with four small children; the oldest is now 6 years old. One child is not a normal baby, is unable to sit alone, and requires the same care as a young infant. This makes it difficult for the mother to get the youngsters out of doors. She has no porch where they could be placed, and a baby buggy would solve her problem by enabling her to take the four month old baby and the sick child out in the fresh air at the same time. L. M. is the worker on the case.

◆

Mrs. F. M. extends an interesting offer:

"Dear Miss Brown: You have many queer requests, I am sure, and here is a peculiar offer.

"I have a young friend who is making a collection of postmarks. In helping her, I have accumulated a number of them, and wondered if some one, perhaps an invalid, would like to have them. If so, I will be glad to send them, also a book in which they may be pasted. It is an inexpensive hobby."

If this hobby appeals to you write to Mrs. M. in care of this department.

◆

A call for furniture comes from Mrs. F. B.:

"Dear Miss Brown: Can you help me secure some furniture, particularly a dresser and some kind of floor covering? During this weather our floors are cold and damp, and the baby now has a bad cold. There are seven in the family, and we have no drawer space. We have barely enough pillows and blankets. My husband has been unemployed for nearly four years."

Mrs. B. lives on the west side of the city.

◆

Here's a typical appeal: "Dear Miss Brown: I am the oldest of nine children. My father has been injured and is unable to work. I have tried hard to find a job, but because of the condition of my clothing I can no longer do so.

"If you can help me secure an overcoat and suit, size 38, I will be greatly indebted to you and will gladly call for them. T. M."

My files contain several hundred similar requests, and all must go unanswered unless you will come to the rescue with discarded clothing.

◆

"Dear Miss Brown: Three weeks ago my little girl was taken to a children's hospital, suffering from a complication of diseases. Her only request since that time has been for a doll buggy on her return home. My husband is without work, we are being assisted by a relief agency, hence it is impossible for me to provide a second hand one for her. Would some kind reader, whose daughter no longer plays with her buggy, be good enough to pass it on to me?"—Mrs. G. H.

◆

Mrs. L. has a similar need. Her husband earns less than $10 per week, which must suffice for rent, gas, and food. Their child must be taken to a welfare station every week. The mother cannot afford carfare and is unable to carry the baby. Her husband also is in need of a suit, size 42, but his salary simply won't stretch far enough to provide either of these articles. Can you help them?

Fine Glassware for the Table Is Seen in Stores

Glittering Vessels Flatter Any Menu with Their Colors and Designs

NEVER has there been a wider selection of fine glittering glassware from which to choose than at the present time. For every color, shape, and size of drinking glass is shown at smart shops and department stores. Smart lines of clear, brilliant crystal, etched or delicately cut, are in the lead for good taste.

The hostess who entertains lavishly usually has a large assortment of glassware for every blend of red or white wines, cocktails, liquers, brandies, beer, and aqua pura. For those in the less affluent class exquisite rock crystal adds charm to gorgeous chinaware and lustrous silver.

Open Stock Pattern Advisable for the Moderate Allowance.

For serving refreshments at less pretentious parties, the glass closet may be kept to a moderate figure. For the limited purse it is advisable to choose an open stock pattern of good style, either stemmed or footed, although the stemmed is more formal and elegant. Connoisseurs of good wines prefer glasses with stems, for this type adds elegance to the table and is pleasant to hold, as some wines should not be warmed by the hand when drinking.

The traditional punch bowl has come to life once more and is in high favor for buffet parties or late suppers, as this form of serving several persons is a most convenient, delightful, and inexpensive gesture of serving refreshments to guests when conviviality holds court. Punches in ye olde days were mostly hot mixtures, such as egg nog or Tom and Jerry. A cup which is merely cold punch may be served from a handsome crystal pitcher surrounded by punch or glass sherbet cups. Punch bowls usually are of handsome cut glass, although the stores carry gorgeous punch bowls of Royal Doulton, Crown Derby, and exquisite Queensware Wedgwood, which may do double duty as salad bowls when punch is not being served.

Novel Cocktail Shaker Prepares Four Drinks.

In quadruplet fashion is a novel and smart individual cocktail set. Four small cocktail bottles fit into a grooved tray. Each one has a marker on the stopper conveying at a glance that contents are Manhattan, Cloverleaf, Bronx, or Alexander. A clamp goes over the stoppers and all four are shaken at once.

Proud decanters with sets of cordial glasses are attractive and ornamental as well as useful articles. They are made in many shapes and colors. It is best to choose clear crystal, as colored glass kills attractive hues of rare wines and liqueurs. Decanters may be had in styles and designs from the simplest to massive cut glass affairs with huge glass and silver trimmed stoppers. Sometimes they are grouped in three, with a silver bar across the top and a tricky little lock and key which remove all temptation of sly little "nips" between times.

Charm Is Greatest Asset

Kitty Carlisle demonstrates the posture which insures correct breathing, free action for the diaphragm, and therefore which leads to clear, precise, resonant speech.

Little Matters of the Voice and Pronunciation Can Flatter or Betray.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

IT'S Charm now, women! Charm, and more of it you must be striving for. It's rapidly becoming the standard by which you are measured.

In an address given to a group of young business women recently the girls were told that charm is their greatest asset. It's every woman's. There's nothing like this "bloom on the woman" to make her appear lovelier than she is.

So she must come back to Charm again and again now; study its arts and graces.

Let's talk about voice again in connection with Charm. It's traditional to associate the cultured voice with women of Charm. There seems to be some argument as to whether one can greatly change the natural tone of the speaking voice or not. But let's leave that argument for another day.

All That's Needed Is Will to Improve.

There's no argument as to whether mispronunciations can be changed into proper pronunciations and grammatical errors corrected. These things can be done with the mere will to improve; with the purchase of a moderately priced book on how to correct common errors in English. Or, acting on the suggestion of a noted authority on speech, by listening carefully to the radio's good speakers, good announcers. Hear the clear way they enunciate a word. Note their pronunciations of ordinarily used words. Compare these with your own and practice the better pronunciation and the better grammatical construction.

Quality of tone may be forgiven a woman. But not so if she insists upon saying "per-tick-er-ler" when "particular" is meant. Or if she talks about the "fil-lum" she has seen when the one syllable word "film" is meant. Or, when she talks about what she saw in Soandso's col-yum. It's column, pronounced col-um. And avoid "ath-a-let-ic" for "ath-let-ic"; "bron-i-kal" for "bron-ki-al."

Some mistakes in speech are worse than others in their effect upon one's social standing. "Them things" and "was you," and "I seen" are unpardonable. "Git" for "get," and such carelessness as "didju" and "gimme" and "lemme" are cheap and vulgar, or have that effect upon the listener. I can't enumerate all of these common errors. I can only remind you of the importance of cultured speech to Charm in a woman. And suggest that women were smart enough about learning correct food information for their figure's sake. For Charm's sake, now, all that is needed is the same application to correct speech information.

Awkward gestures and graceless ones, while not to be recommended, still do not classify one as an illiterate as do the grammatical error and mispronunciation.

Good Carriage Is Next in Importance.

As next in importance to good speech I would put the Charming carriage. This includes the graceful handling of the body in standing, walking, and sitting posture—the way you use your feet, your hands; the way you get into a chair; the way you get out of it. There's a world of Charm in these oft-repeated daily motions.

Let's run over these points again, with a few queries:

Do you waddle when you walk [on two tracks, as it were] or do you follow the one-track rule? Following one line is the trick of grace. Feet ahead—not turned out.

Do you scurry along, chin out, eyes set dead ahead? Or do you shuffle along with a licked look? Neither is good. You needn't be handsome or one of the best dressed if you move along smoothly and easily, with your chest up and head stretched tall, your weight on the broad part of the foot, your shoulders easy. You'll do. Somebody will say as you pass: "Isn't she charming?"

Are you always looking for something to lean on when the occasion calls for standing? Everything drooped, from chin to arches? Shoulders down, abdomen bulging, knees saggy? It's easier on you, you know, to stand as the lovely one walks, stretched tall, chest up, weight on the broad part of the foot. It makes a nicer line of you for people to look at.

Right and Wrong Way of Sitting.

When you go to sit down in that chair does it take two "sittings down" to get you there? When you hit the chair first and when you collapse at the waist and your back thumps the chair back. Or do you sit on the chair's edge like a twitchy bird ready for flight at the first noise? Do you double up like a jackknife before you take the plunge?

The graceful one gets up close to her chair, one foot slightly advanced, the other barely touching the front of the chair, and she lets herself sink down into the seat as if she were making a graceful curtsy. When she gets up she pushes one foot forward and rises all in one piece. She doesn't need the chair arms to drag her out.

When you are seated, what do you do with your legs? Cross them below the knees? That's not good. Cross them above the knee, if you must cross them. You get a prettier hang of skirt. If you let the crossed leg drop down in the same direction as the supporting one you have a nice line.

About the hands. Are you a born clutcher, one whose hands must be tensed before she can open a handbag? Grip bridge cards so tightly you make them curl up in protest? You only need light fingered movements for these duties. Try picking up objects with light finger tips—not the whole hand or the tight fist.

Avoid Ugly Tricks of Posture.

You don't—I know you don't—stand or sit with knees spread apart. That's too ugly. You don't hug yourself with your arms. That's ugly, too. Gives you a cringing look. Makes your back bulge.

Maybe you do hurry, though. Hurry for no good reason. Just have the rush habit. That's why you kick up rug corners, knock over vases, get skirt or coat caught on furniture edges. Why you snatch and jerk. And manage a lot of graceless exhibitions a slower tempo would save you.

We'll come back to Charm another day. If it's in the cards we must be charming, we'll be it if it kills us, won't we, girls?

CHINESE EFFECT

Startling color contrast is achieved in this hostess gown of black and white silk cut with an oriental fish tail train.

[Posed by Maxine Jennings.]

China and British India Send Smart Articles in Brass

STUNNING, nontarnishing brass articles from China and British India are available for the modern housewife with a "yen" for things oriental. Gorgeous candelabra with seven branches may be disjointed and arranged in cluster fashion and, when fitted with varied shades of jade green, waxen candles, they are exquisite. Brass sconces with three branches are rather new and smart for ivory walls. In this collection of brasses are cleverly carved door knockers. Carved brass ash trays, many of which are trimmed with quartz and Soochow jade, lined cigaret boxes, large bowls, and incense burners are to be had in many designs.

Brass articles from British India are beautifully hand wrought by Indian artisans. Red and black colors are rubbed into the lacy, etched patterns, giving a charming effect. In this group are trays of several shapes and sizes for as many purposes. There are cordial sets, candlesticks, and conventional chalice service bells with a genuine oriental tone to the peal. These lovely articles from Moradabad, India, bear low price tags.

At another table, close by the brassware, is a large assortment of copper, another old metal gone modern. The cream and sugar service is aluminum lined, as are swanky coffee and tea sets and large pitchers for beverages. There are gorgeous hostess plates, trays with wooden disk centers, and fruit bowls.

Facts Assist Housewife in Buying Cottons

Thread Count, Weave and Sizing Important in Selecting Articles.

GOOD cotton, in sheets, shirts, or shorts, in dish towels or yard material, is a far more important item of their purchase than most women realize. During 1935 women will average a purchase of 60 pounds of cotton for each member of the family. Such buying needs to be carefully and wisely done. Properly selected, cotton gives service for the money expended.

The woman who watches the thread count of the cotton she buys, estimates the amount of sizing used, finds out if the "fast" cottons shrink, and avoids weak weaves, has done much toward insuring that the cotton she buys is good. Labels will help her somewhat in selection, but she must learn to evaluate both labels and fabrics if her purchase is to be really successful.

Longest Fibers Preferable in Selection of Cotton Cloth.

The first rule in cotton selection is a simple one. Choose cotton with the longest fibers. The fiber length, or staple, is considered as short, medium, or long. The lengths vary from one-half to two inches. Unraveling the edge of piece goods will give test fibers. The better grades of sheeting, for example, are made of medium or long staples. Short lengths produce a weak yarn and a fabric which does not wear or look well. Sheets made of the shorter staple are fuzzy in appearance after they have been laundered.

Just as important as staple length is the thread count in any piece of cotton. The number of threads to the inch length across the fabric and lengthwise is a determining factor in the durability and price of the cotton one buys. If one holds the fabric up to the light it is easy to see if the thread count is about the same both ways of the material. Low thread count may mean lower price, but it also means short wear.

Finishing Processes Affect Wearing Quality of Fabric.

The finishing processes of sizing and dyeing also affect wearing quality. Many fabrics, apparently smooth in finish, have poor weaving hidden by a large amount of starch or other sizing, which has been used to give the cloth smoothness. Sheets stamped "pure finish" contain a minimum amount of sizing. [Sizing is, of course, quite different from mercerizing. This process, which gives a glossier finish to cottons, adds to both attractiveness and durability.]

That material is labeled "color fast" does not mean that the color will be permanently fast under all conditions. Such successful dyes have not yet been invented. If the fabric is tagged as washable it is smart to find out whether that is a promise that the fabric will not shrink.

Purchaser Should Not Be Misled by Certain Label.

Some cotton fabrics bear the label "Conforms to U. S. Commercial Standard C S33-32." This does not mean that the garments have been tested by the government. The label merely refers to a trade agreement in which the merchants have agreed on uniform basic dimensions for each size of garment.

One pitfall in cotton selection lies in the matter of weave. Plain weaves produce fabrics with much longer wearing qualities. Novelties may appeal by the variety of their designs, but they always are dangerous cotton fabrics to buy, since they may have so many weaknesses. A novelty may be made by spinning a fine yarn over heavy ones. Such a cloth will not wear well, since the fine yarns will soon wear through. In some patterns long yarns or "floats" are passed over a number of threads, and the resulting cloth is easily caught and torn. A novelty weave in which the design is produced by weaving short lengths free at both ends soon appears shabby.

Fine cotton, woven from long or medium staples, with a good thread count and of wearable pattern, should give the housewife much joy in usefulness and beauty.

LOVELY TOLE TO GRACE MODERN DESK

Something new in desk or library ensembles include cigaret box, ash trays, book ends, and flower pot in the modern manner. The articles are fashioned of white tole, the smart material for accessories, and are embellished with gold trim. This ensemble was seen at the Merchandise Mart, sold in Chicago stores.

When demi-tasse is served in the drawing room, the coffee service—demi-tasse cups, saucers, and tiny spoons, together with the silver or china coffee pot, and cream and sugar, if served—is arranged on a decorative tray and placed on a convenient table.

Simple Things Can Assure Successful Play for Child

Good Health, Adult Co-operating, and a Few Sturdy Toys Essentials.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

A RATHER surprisingly large number of letters from mothers voice this difficulty:

"My little boy—or girl—doesn't play well at all. He tires of his playthings so easily and doesn't seem to have any interest in them. He seems sort of discontented. What can I do?"

In giving this kind of long distance advice without more than a couple of dozen words of description to go on, one can only make "blanket" suggestions. Yet, having had much close association with young children, I feel that the following advice, while somewhat general, is really highly practical.

Perhaps the best way to go about finding out why these children act as their mothers describe, would be to outline sketchily what makes an ideal or rather, a normal day for a young child, then see how his average day measures up against these requirements. . . .

First, he must feel well to be happy and to play well.

To feel well, he must have lots of rest [how important that is!], the right food, and good elimination. He must also have plenty of fresh air and pleasant activity while he is in the fresh air—running, riding a kiddie car or velocipede or scooter, playing with an express wagon—or, if it is possible, using the sort of outdoor equipment that one has on one's own grounds or in a play group or nursery school. This activity gives a child a sense of well being and works off nervous energy—a nervous energy which, if not expended, makes the quieter indoor play unsatisfactory.

Intelligent Interest, Not Adoration, Child's Need.

Another thing which helps a child to play well is not to have the constant attention and entertainment of several adoring grownups. This stifles self activity. But on the other hand, a child must not be ignored or constantly be "put in his place" or be told to keep quiet—this crushes initiative.

What he must have to play well is the real interest of a companionable mother, or other grownup, in what he does. This interest may take the form of praise for achievement, of encouragement if he seems to need it, and even of help if he strikes a snag and perhaps needs only to be helped over one hard place to swing along to success. This matter of interest is extremely important—and the mother who is too busy with housework to stop often for her child, or who is too immersed in her personal concerns will often be the one who wonders why she has a small child who doesn't play well or who is discontented.

Home Itself Provides Many Playthings.

And last we come to the thing concerned with a little child's play life which on casual thought you might have expected us to touch upon first—that is, what he shall have to play with. Let's consider that.

The child who has all the other things we have been listing which make him healthy and happy doesn't need a great many playthings to fulfill his needs. The ordinary home is in itself quite a toy store for the young child, provided he has adequate freedom in it. Blankets become tents and chairs a train of cars. A foot stool becomes a supper table for Peter Rabbit and Teddy. The kitchen alone is a wonderful place. Wooden boxes from the grocer hold limitless possibilities. The family tool box can yield something suitable for young hands. Wash day may mean a glory of suds and "helping." Mother's desk may supply drawing needs. Odd jobs by father provide another kind of "helping." Bed covers or clothes for the baby doll may come out of mother's scrap bag when she sits down to sew. Blocks are one vitally important plaything that don't just "happen" to be around, and dolls and little animals and trucks and trains are others. If money is scarce, these may be bought so that they represent almost no outlay. The same is true of books. The two things necessary to make a child play are the play spirit in him and the coöperating play spirit in his mother.

Blocks Are an Absolute Essential.

But, if possible, you want to buy more indoor playthings than this for your young son or daughter, or want to check over what he already has, to see if they fill his needs. So we'll itemize a little further.

First, he must have blocks—these for play alone and for play with other children. This group play possibility must be considered in buying some of his toys. The size and quantity of his blocks are determined by his age. But when he gets near kindergarten age he must have them in sufficient number or his imagination and execution are too limited.

The little girl—and sometimes the little boy—needs her dolls and what we might call accessories for doll play. These will be limited by your pocketbook and your good sense and her age. Clothes, beds, dishes, and miniature housekeeping supplies in general comprise the list.

Cloth and furry animals are another need of young children. Much love is lavished on them and much imaginative play.

Trains and trucks and wagons, suited to age, are another play need of yound children. These may be big or small—or both, each offering a different sort of play. The small animals, like the small trucks and trains and automobiles, may work in with block building for transportation play or for representations of farm life.

Books and Drawing Materials Also Important.

Small sized house furnishings provide endless delight for some children—little brooms, carpet sweepers, wash tubs, clothes pins, ironing boards, and so forth.

Good—not shoddy—simple tools and nails, and if possible soft wood give manual pleasure.

A low, broad, sturdy table and chair are a great satisfaction to a child for some of his play, for his drawing, and for the use of his books.

And the mention of these last two activities brings us to the end of our suggestions for materials for the young child's play and occupation. Let me stop to emphasize them. Every young child should have the right materials for drawing and painting—and he should have books. These need not be expensive—both the department stores and the ten cent stores can supply you. Large, soft lead pencils and large crayons, and perhaps poster colors and big paint brushes with large sheets of paper [drawing paper and some dull finished wrapping paper or plain unglazed pad paper] are easily obtained. And good books are found in the less expensive printings as well as in the choicer ones.

I'd like to add music to this list of occupations—the piano if you play, or phonograph records for listening, or for spontaneous dancing or simple rhythms, or for singing.

We have leaflets giving definite lists such as books for young children, toys, and playthings graded to ages. Also directions for making at home the child's chair and table. A stamped, self-addressed envelope is required for each booklet asked for.

Drawing Room Ideal Milieu of Demi-Tasse

Charming Hospitality Is Conveyed by Serving Coffee in This Way.

By Helen Bartlett.

DEMMI-TASSE is most effectively served in the drawing room. When the last course of the dinner has been served and family and guests have lifted the fork for the last time, the knowing hostess allows a few moments for every one to chat congenially with his neighbors before she rises and leads the way to the drawing room to partake of cigarets and after-dinner coffee.

Demi-tasse in the drawing room is the most charming course of the entire meal. Charming because it is a cozy, intimate affair, and because the clever hostess can display to best advantage her most attractive coffee service and her gracious hospitality.

At Large Dinner, Men and Women May Separate for Coffee.

At large dinner parties the host may invite his gentlemen guests to remain in the dining room or go to the library for their coffee and cigars. The ladies join the hostess.

In the case of a hostess entertaining an extremely large group, the butler or the maid would do the actual serving. He would bring in a large tray on which were arranged the demi-tasse cups, each cup on its saucer and a little spoon at the side. The coffee pot, and cream and sugar, if served, also would occupy a portion of the tray. After having placed the service on a convenient table, he would pour the coffee and proceed to serve it.

Hostess Herself May Serve at the Small Gathering.

If it is only a small group, say six or eight, the butler may be directed to place the fully arranged tray on a low coffee table before the hostess, so that she might enjoy the pleasure of serving her family and guests herself. This little gesture of hospitality on the part of the hostess makes it much more informal, but more charming. And for a small group, the hostess may handle the service alone with ease and convenience.

For the hostess who does not have all the accessories of maids, butlers, handsome coffee service and the like, let her have the coffee poured in the kitchen before being brought to the living room to be proffered graciously to the waiting guests.

WELCH GRAPE JUICE

This Springtime Fashion Revels in Navy Blues

Nautical Hues Rule Feminine Wardrobe from Boyish Suits to Formals.

By Rhea Seeger.

THE usual spring fashion excitement about navy blue is under way. Already the stores and shops are completely deluged with all sorts of snappy blue costumes, from slim, boyish suits for daytime and gadabout shoppers, clever afternoon ensembles and dresses, to some of the most picturesque of frilly dinner, dance, and evening dresses.

Thin wool ensembles, sometimes a redingote model with a navy or colored printed dress, sometimes a two-piece outfit of long sleeved dress tailored in the wool with one of the new two-third length coats, sometimes the classic combine of tailored coat with slim skirt . . . these are the popular arrivals for daytime wear. They are being worn now under winter coats. Then there are the navy blue checked coats worn over one color plain wool skirts, or that same trick reversed. And last we have the longer coats of navy wool worn over taffeta or dull crêpe dresses.

Beige, Coral, and Pink Used for Color Contrasts.

Navy blue with beige, navy blue contrasting a lighter shade of powder blue, navy blue with coral, and navy with the fashionable dusty pink are some of the combine tricks. And, of course, navy with white is almost as classic as black with white. Chartreuse green is used with stunning results on some of the best of the dinner and dance dresses this spring. Sash, slippers, and chiffon handkerchief, all of the pale green color, do grand things with a net or chiffon blue evening gown.

Navy blue accessories, the exact shades to match any costume you buy, are equally plentiful. There are good looking bags, gloves, scarfs, and hats with some brand new costume jewelry in this shade that will or ought to make fashion history. One also finds cleverly conceived pieces of composition stuff tagged with such moderate prices that it will be easy to own quite a few of these effective "extras."

The navy blue clothes we have sketched today are available in other colors as well as this universally becoming blue. And there are lots of other models in blue that are just as smart and good looking as these four new costumes.

Jacket and Hemline Outlined in Fringe.

The figure at the left, small, shows a casually smart wool street suit made in simple silhouette, with the hemline and the jacket outlined in fringe. It is an extremely simple suit, but one of the smartest of the 1935 spring models. Second from the left is sketched a swanky suit with one of the full and flared two-third length coats. The backline achieves an unusual fullness that accentuates the simplicity of the skirt silhouette. Pockets are tucked under the sides of the long tuxedo collar of pale gray fur that looks like chinchilla.

The sketch second from the right shows another suit trimmed with this flattering gray fur, but a suit with a fitted hip length jacket and blouse of dull silk made with tied loops down the chest. And the large figure at the right shows the newest duet of plaid silk dress and full, navy blue wool coat. The huge scarf at the high neckline is of the same breezy silk as the dress. Tucking and shaped sleeves, together with unusual shaped pockets, give dash to the coat.

All the ensembles shown here are available in a well known Chicago shop.

TAILORED FOR SLIM, CONSERVATIVE ELEGANCE

Signs of Spring Seen in Hat Collections

THE first signs of an early spring are the millinery concoctions hanging about the best shops.

They are as exciting as the first yellow daffodils in the florist windows. Flat, crownless models that will look like saucers will tip merrily over the left eyebrow. Saucy little creations with narrow brims, flat crowns, and a bit of bow trimming slant rakishly down in front, while wider brimmed hats, still with flattened crowns, have wreaths of garden posies for trimming. Bonnets are here, devastatingly demure trifles on the right head, but terrific tests of any woman's discretion. Don't buy them unless you are positive of what you can wear and wear well. Any way you see these new models they are the first examples of what smart shoppers will buy as the potent pickups for jaded winter wardrobes. Straw, silk, and trick fabrics are the three first and popular materials.

● Yellow, clear, bright, and marvelously effective, is a new color contrast for navy blue. Also all the flattering dusty shade of blue and pink and the slightly stronger shade of rosy coral.

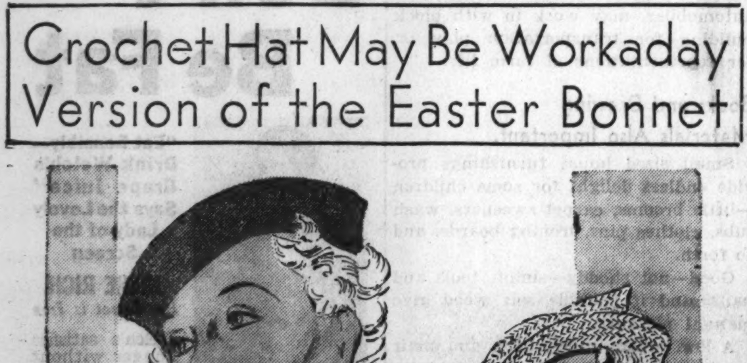
● Seersucker taffeta in all bright and street colors is the new material for simple one and two piece street costumes. It's just what it is named, a material of alternating puckered and plain rows of the taffeta.

● Three strand pearl necklaces that are almost as short in length as chokers are being worn most successfully with severely plain one piece thin wool dresses in blue and black. The most popular buys are the three strand of graduated pearls with the center beads just as large as your conscience will allow. No other costume jewelry is worn when these chokers are in evidence. They are especially good with high, round necklines.

● Lace in all pastel shade and white is a most popular and romantic material for new dinner and dance dresses. The younger generation is buying aquamarine blue in quantities, and there are yellow, French blue, and frosty white creations that will keep you hesitating before your final selection. All the lace creations are made with clinging silhouettes and deep, swirling flounces.

● If you wear a flower in the lapel of your new spring suit jacket it should be a carnation in either red or white . . . or cornflowers with a carnation . . . or a big, golden blob of a zinnia if you want something as different as it is effective.

Crochet Hat May Be Workaday Version of the Easter Bonnet



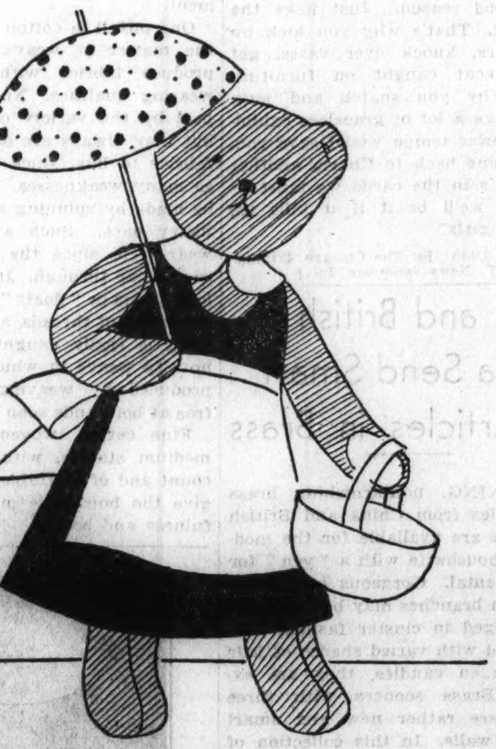
By Ellen Bruce.

IF one is waiting until Easter time to buy that long cherished dream bonnet, why not make a hat or two in the meantime, to wear for every day? The modified sailor illustrated at the left, combined with a crochet double scarf, is highly appropriate with the trim tailored suits for spring. Cotton is still one of the favorite materials with which to crochet these sets.

At the right, a dashing sports hat with a rolled brim, is a perfect foil for an attractively comfortable swagger sports coat. This hat may be made of any one of the fine tweed wool mixtures or in a solid color of linen, cotton, boucle, or materials of the same ply. The stitches are the usual simple ones used in all smart crochet hats.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the two hats and double scarf illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn and Tribune Tower lobby.

Second Presentation of Bear Quilt Family Is the "Mama"



MAMA BEAR.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

By Nancy Cabot.

THIS member of the interesting Bear family, presentation of which began in this column last Sunday, is Mama Bear. Her gay clothes are a part of her fascinating personality. Her coat may be a cinnamon brown with a turquoise blue, apron white, basket yellow, and parasol of dainty pink print. The amount of material mentioned in the quilt pattern is sufficient for a quilt containing six plain blocks and six appliquéd patterns. The coverlet is finished with a two inch border to match the plain blocks. A suggested background combination of pink and white is attractive for a baby's bed, using pink for the plain blocks and white for the appliquéd squares.

With her second book of quilts, Nancy Cabot now offers 10 patterns of her own choice at a combination price of 10 cents (12 cents by mail). The booklet alone is 5 cents; by mail, 7 cents. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices—1 South Dearborn street, or Tribune Tower.

British Columbia Gold Rush Is Financed by Women

GOLD is said to be attracting the women of British Columbia. While few are donning prospectors' clothes, it is their money which is financing new claims in the Cariboo Bridge river and other gold mining districts in the province. In one company alone 75 per cent of the claims were financed by women.

Costume Jewelry Adds Spicy Color to Winter Frocks

IF you're feeling a bit run down at the heel trying to make the good old outfit tide over until the air feels more springy, the purchase of a piece of costume jewelry will do wonders for the morale as well as for the frock.

One of the downtown counters is agleam with saucy new adornments of such a variety that any taste may be satisfied. Peasant bracelets and clips displaying all the sturdy hues of the color category will brighten and cheer the most jaded dress. A frippery that will please many who have become downright bad tempered when trying to clasp a necklace is a combination clip-necklace. Two flashing colored clips, fastened to the dress in the usual manner, boast a semi-circlet of beads suspended between them.

Raffia, tinted in a new off-red shade, in sea blues or in ochre, is effectively wrapped around a composition bracelet of matching color; the resultant effect is unusual and South Sea Islandish. Great button rings also of raffia match the bracelets.

Daintier embellishments, as pleasing on dark clothes as they are on lighter things, are fashioned of crystal and dogwood pink, or crystal and bluebird blue. Sounds like the essence of spring and looks it! Turquoise blue and dusty pink on old gold still bid for favor and are most perky when cast in the long barpin clip, which is a new note in costume jewelry.

New Broadloom Rugs Display Varied Colors

The following colors are available: rust, blue, briar, raisin, burgundy, jade green, taupe lake, apple green, and antique mahogany. It will sell at medium prices.

Cold Logic Is Best Remedy in Love Problems

Leaving Men to Themselves Once in While Is Good Insurance for Romance.

By Doris Blake.

HERE is something on which you women might interrogate your men. It is suggested by a recent masculine proposal that women have lost romantic caste because of their modern day overwhelming presence.

History records, according to our informant, the most romantic eras to be those in which man's activities took him far afield of feminine company. History is furthermore accused of recording periods of romantic decadence, so to speak, when man's life was confined to the drawing room.

Periods of Crusades and Pioneering More Romantic.

The Crusade period records a veritable epidemic of romantic love and idealization of women. American pioneer life is cited as an era in which romance had a better chance of survival than it has today because the pioneer man, by force of circumstances, was obliged to be away for long hours of the day; for days perhaps. Also, because women were fewer in number.

With woman's overwhelming presence everywhere today man is deprived of such ingredients of romantic love as the instinct of desire, the pleasure of dreams, the urge to pursue and conquer.

Modern Woman Omnipresent and Monotonous to Men.

"They're everywhere," our authority argues. "They get in the hair. They crawl out from under the doormat if one is a bachelor maintaining his own apartment. Their feet are on the same bar rail. They're in the next barber chair. They sit beside men on jury benches. They're eating at the noonday executive table with men. In the home their chair is drawn up beside the man's. They keep tally and tab on every move and gesture. Open a wardrobe closet, their clothes hang there, occupying perhaps the larger share of space. One has them for breakfast, for lunch, and for dinner."

And this, says our Absence-for-Women-Promoter, is the crux of our modern day casual and, he says, unhealthful relationship between the sexes. He points to divorce records as the resulting consequences of too much woman presence. He points to "affairs" as an expression of the masculine urge to be given time out to dream dreams of a woman, to the increasing number of bachelor domiciles as a hoped for escape from woman's omnipresence.

Too Much of Woman's Company Robs Her of Romantic Appeal.

We suggested in our opening paragraph that women interview the men folk on the subject of whether they'd be loved better did they make themselves a little more scarce. On second thought we withdraw the suggestion. Few women could bear the blow to their pride that a straightforward masculine admission might entail.

We have interviewed a few men ourselves on the subject. From their answers we judge that too much of her company costs a woman something in the way of romantic appeal. Or to put it tactfully, as did one of the men questioned: "We couldn't get along without the dears for long, that is. Yes, we appreciate their company, but there are times when a man would love to be left alone or be permitted the enjoyment of company of his own sex exclusively."

Modern Woman Must Contrive to Be Absent Once in a While.

Since our men don't go on long crusades, and since we do get under their feet and into their hair during the course of a business day or week, perhaps we women had better figure out some sort of compromise with the masculine urge to escape us now and then. There are clever women, well versed in masculine psychology, who time their absences from sweetheart or husband so that he is given the desired respite from feminine company. Not Mrs. X., however, who won't release her mate for an evening out with the boys. Not Mrs. J., who holds a watch on every activity of her man. Nor Mrs. B., who tags along, the sole woman at the hoped for stag dinner. Nor those scores of wives who, when the husband has an old pal up for dinner, will not absent themselves for a minute's free recollection of the good old days.

A Frenchman is quoted as saying: "Woman's greatest asset lies in being late and being absent!"

Normal Man Requires Certain Amount of Masculine Company.

There may be more to that than woman ever dreamed. Especially those women who loudly proclaim: "He can't get along without me!" Unless he's a weak sister, our own bit of research proves he can, and, in fact, would like to be put to the test occasionally.

A clever woman, known to us, is past master in this art of withdrawing her company at the right moment. In addition to prodding her mate into his evening out with the boys she will withdraw herself from the living room when the two are alone and she suspects he might like to be by himself. "He follows me," she tells, "if I have made a mistake. If I haven't, he has his hour alone. A man can be just as sated with a woman's constant presence as he can be on a diet of sweets. One can't keep herself fresh and stimulating if she never gives a man a chance to miss her."

Absence Creates New Desire for Company of a Woman.

Thousands of testimonials could be written by wives whose homecoming greetings indorse this time-worn theory about absence creating a fresh desire for woman's companionship.

In our own late war none would deny an epidemic of romantic love and idealization of both sexes, due to the force of circumstances that necessitated separation from the beloved.

While we're not advocating prolonged absences, nor frequent absences from the home hearth, still this theory of too much woman presence today is worth investigating.

Party Devices for Children Are Intriguing

Young Guests Delighted by Candy Place Cards and Glorified Ice Cream.

By Mary Meade.

WHEN the young hopefuls around your house begin to cast broad hints about having a party, or when there's a birthday in the offing, there's nothing for it but to don your most willing grin and start talking about invitations. Don't be dismayed at the thought of pretentious decorations and elaborate entertainment—just forget about those unnecessarily harrowing details and let Junior do the work!

The invitations, naturally, will fall into his enthusiastic hands. Let them be written, even if he does it a bit grubbily, and sent out through the mails, no matter how sweet you think he looks all dressed up to deliver them in person. It's much more exciting to the young guests to get important looking mailed envelopes than to receive them directly from him.

Edible Place Cards Will Fascinate Host and Guests.

Place cards are a decidedly important item on the party schedule. Those very qualities which distress the more sophisticated hostess—the planning, the making, and the arranging at the table—are the very thing which youngsters dote on. Even the merry scramble for right places has an unmatched thrill.

If you're casting wildly about for some place card idea which will be simple to execute and still calculated to win chortles of delight from the young guests, the taffy idea is the winner you need. Stir up a batch of taffy the evening before, enlist the swaggering host or hostess to help with the pulling, and then arrange the place markers this way: Cut the warm, pulled ropes of taffy into inch long strips. Then with these delectable bits, arrange the letters of the guests' names above their plate at the table. Each letter containing a straight upward stroke should be two taffies high and scaling the others to size is a simple task. Six taffies make a most convincing "O" and five a lovely "A."

In case your taffy repertoire is low this season, we've collected a couple of foolproof recipes made with sweetened condensed milk. Even the most unversed in taffy making arts should be able to turn out elegant ropes of the chewy sweet stuff with these. Then, too, you can send the guests trooping in to the dining table with the assurance that the place cards will taste as good as they look, and may be downed without any too disastrous effects upon young digestions.

MOLASSES TAFFY.

1⅓ cups sweetened condensed milk.
½ cup molasses.
Salt, few grains.

Cook the ingredients together in a heavy pan over a low heat, stirring until a hard ball forms when you drizzle a bit into a cup of cold water. Pour the mixture into a shallow buttered pan to cool and then attack the hilarious business of pulling. When the taffy reaches the firm, creamy stage, stretch it into long ropes and cut into inch long pieces.

The same procedure holds good for this next two-purpose confection, but the addition of a little peanut butter plays a delightful prank with the flavor.

PEANUT BUTTER TAFFY.

1⅓ cups sweetened condensed milk.
2 tablespoons peanut butter.
½ cup corn syrup.

While edible place cards hold the floor, it might be well to drop a hint about the gracious adaptability of marshmallows to the same purpose. In that case, you'd want to allow one marshmallow for each letter of the guest's name. With a small pastry tube and a little practice, you can squirt very readable letters of a soft butter icing, cheerfully colored with a little vegetable coloring, on the top of each puffy candy.

The same general idea is even applicable to animal crackers. First decorate each saucy creature with a letter, and then prop them up with a small gumdrop stuck on with icing in the back.

The theme seems to lend itself to endless enlargements. Candy Easter eggs, for instance, whittled off a little on the bottom to keep them from rolling and lettered on top, would prove a most exciting way of locating one's place at an Easter bunny party.

Refreshments Should Be Simple but Attractive

The party refreshments themselves must needs be simple, and yet served in a manner destined to delight the guests. If this highlight of the festivities is to be a luncheon or supper, plan to serve it at an hour as close as possible to the children's regular meal time. This type of meal is best built around one hot dish—creamed chicken or meat or eggs, with perhaps the beloved mashed potatoes, another attractively arranged hot vegetable and little sandwiches to complete the main course.

Then arrives that perennial favorite among youngsters—the ice cream. Or, if it's merely to be an afternoon refreshment sort of spree, let one of these intriguing desserts provide the whole show.

A word about beverages, though, before we start on the dessert question. Chocolate, or chocolate malted milk, flavored milk may strike the right note, or you may want to go in for mugs of cocoa with floating islands of marshmallow or whipped cream. Peppermint milk, all chilly and pink, finds its charm in the stick of red and white peppermint candy which has been dissolved in each glass before serving.

Ice Cream May Clown In Colorful Disguises.

Partyfied desserts, now, with as much in the way of simplicity to recommend them to you as in charm for the young partygoers:

ICE CREAM CLOWNS.

Drop a round ball of ice cream on a round, fluted-edged butter cooky. Clap an ice cream cone on at a rakish angle for a cocky clown cap, and give the fat comic fellow ears, nose and mouth of strips of gumdrops. A most convincing ruff may be tucked under his chin with whipped cream and a pastry tube.

ICE CREAM FLOWERPOTS.

Cut brick ice cream into cubes about 3 inches high. Press thin chocolate filled wafers around the sides of the ice cream, sprinkle the top with chocolate shot for soil, and stick a tiny spray of artificial flowers into the center top. Instead of the posies, you can achieve very tricky little gumdrop plants by sticking a tiny gumdrop on the end of each branch of a little twisty twig plucked from one of your pet garden shrubs.

MERRY-GO-ROUND ICE CREAM.

Construct a miniature circus tent out of each child's serving in this manner: Obtain circular packed vanilla ice cream and cut it into ¾-inch slices. A gay tent roof made of a circle of bright crêpe paper, slit and pasted to make a slightly conical shape, is supported above each slice by means of colored toothpicks, firmly stuck to the tent with sugar syrup and imbedded in the ice cream. Then just inside the edge of the ice cream and under the gala roof, press animal crackers, either just as they come from the package or coated with chocolate or a colored icing.

GINGERBREAD MEN A LA MODE.

Give each brown crunchy gingerbread man a rotund tummy devised from a dipperful of ice cream sprinkled with toasted coconut.

Dishes Patterned After the Potato, Cucumber, Radish

TRICKY little dishes that will add an amusing touch to the buffet table are patterned after the humble spud, a long streamlined cucumber, and an overgrown radish.

Ingenuity was stretched considerably by the potter who designed these novel dishes. The huge potato is a highly glazed, good looking tuber with many eyes. The cucumber is a handsome dish of delicate green fading into white. The radish is finished at the top with a bunch of green foliage, which serves as a handle. These articles are novelties, to be sure, but each one will find its proper niche when one is serving a buffet or midnight snack.

Spring Touches Fabric and Line of New Frocks

Daintiness Rules Fashion in Silk Prints, Circular Skirts, Raglan Sleeves.

By Clotilde.

EVERY woman gets tired of her winter dresses this time of year, and this is just the time to make something new. You couldn't find a prettier design for a new dress than that shown in pattern No. 2583. It's youthful and springlike, and very smart. Besides, it isn't hard to make.

New Printed Silk Crepes Are Beautiful in Design.

You will probably want to choose one of the new printed silk crêpes, and there are many beautiful flowered designs that make up well. In fact, the original model was made of a flowered silk crêpe and the bow and cuffs were of a plain color.

See that the waist, hip, and length measures are right for you before laying the pattern pieces on the material and mark clearly any needed changes. The skirt is a two piece, circular one and is cut up above the normal waistline in front, in a pointed line that is becoming. The neck of the bodice is cut in a rounding outline and drapes slightly, cowl fashion. The raglan sleeves may be made full length or to a little below the elbow. The armhole edges of both front and back are turned under on the seam lines and pinned in place over the sleeve edges. Always see that notches or other marks match perfectly. Baste the sleeves in, overcast the edges on the wrong side, and stitch. The sleeve and underarm seams of the bodice are stitched in one continuous line.

When you are ready to put waist and skirt together, clip the seam edge of the front before turning under. Then pin, baste, and stitch. Always remove bastings and fasten all threads before pressing. Cover one of the smallest sized weights with the dress material and attach to a two inch long ribbon—or strap made of the dress material and tack to the center front of the dress at the neck inside, just below the binding. This will make the front set properly.

Wooden Buttons Accent Darkest Tone of Plaids

Pattern No. 3430 is for a smart little shirtwaist dress and you can't find anything prettier for it than one of the wide open plaids in a silk crêpe and the wooden buttons should tone in with the darkest color in the plaid. The overblouse with its patch pockets, buttons, and patent lether belt is as chic as can be. The skirt is a two piece circular one, flaring at the bottom just enough to be pretty.

Plain silk crêpe, striped cottons, wooly type cottons, linen and mercerized cotton broadcloth are other suitable materials.

Covers for Jelly Glasses Created in Bright Raffia

SOME ingenious person had a thought, the results of which are dainty and beautifully woven jelly glass covers of raffia, shellacked to give them a hard, glossy finish and made to encase flat or regular size glasses.

These glass covers vary in shades of orange and ivory, apple green and raspberry red on an ivory background. Many have decorative fruit designs woven into them. A smart raffia lid, finished with a perky little knob for a handle, protects jelly or jam.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Feb. 18.

Bring a few more potted bulbs to the light for forcing into bloom. Paperwhite and the yellow paperwhite narcissus cannot be forced a second time with any success and should be discarded after blooming. The large trumpet forms, such as King Alfred, should be cured by gradually withholding water until the leaves die down. Plant in the garden in the fall. They are excellent for outdoor use and improve in strength and beauty each year. The hyacinth may also be saved and planted outdoors. However, these will not endure like the narcissus unless given sandy soil for good drainage. Crocus requires a sandy soil. Tulips are quite likely to deteriorate after the first year. The Darwins and breeders do much better than the early varieties. Give ferns plenty of light, but not direct light. An east or north room is much better than a southern exposure. They may be near a south window, but not in sun. Temperatures from 50 to 60 degrees are best suited to them, although the Boston fern and holly fern will grow in a higher temperature during the day and at 60 degrees at night. The pots must be well drained; watering should be done almost every day, but be careful to avoid an excess of moisture, which is often injurious. Syringe with tepid water once a week. Gas is highly injurious.

Tuesday, Feb. 19.

Start cannas from seed by filing the hard seedcoat. File slightly through the end farthest away from the scar. To hasten germination soak the seed after filing. When the young plants are large enough to handle they may be transplanted into low boxes to give more space. Keep warm. Sweet peas may be started indoors by sowing three seeds in a three inch pot or sowing in a flat box and later transplanting three to a pot. Transplant to the garden when not more than four inches high.

Trees and shrubs may be pruned at any time during good weather. Young or newly planted trees, if properly pruned, will not require the cutting of large branches while they attain old age. Wounds may be treated on fair days. A good rule to follow, unless one is familiar with the work, is to prune shrubs after flowering; an expert can prune at any time. Old shrubs may be rejuvenated by cutting back severely. Keep down dead wood at any time. Pruning early spring flowering shrubs is likely to eliminate many flower buds on the forsythia [goldenbell] and bridal wreath [Spiraea van Houteii].

Wednesday, Feb. 20.

Many kinds of perennial flowering plants may be sown now and most of them will give some flowers the first year. Water the amaryllis bulbs only a little until the flower stems are quite active. Lilac bushes that are infested with scales should be sprayed with lime sulphur while dormant. The hotbed should be started in March. Repair and paint all hotbed sash in delapidated condition.

Thursday, Feb. 21.

Prepare the seed and plant orders and order all materials needed. It is wise to order fertilizers, so as to have them ready at hand. The germinating power of seeds may be ascertained by placing a counted number of seeds between moist blotters. Much waste and time may be conserved when the percentage of germination is known. Sowing seeds too thickly is likely to result in a loss of many seedlings through "damping off." It is not too late to transplant trees with a frozen ball of earth. The hawthorn is easily and safely moved in this manner. Plan to plant the trees the first year, the shrubs the second year, and the perennials the third year if the work cannot be completed the first year. One test of the good garden is the harmonious arrangement of the materials. Use refined, elegant, twiggy, and flowering varieties in foundation planting; use the coarser things in the back borders or along the back fence. Use the small trees or tall shrubs for backgrounds on the small lot.

Friday, Feb. 22.

Cuttings of shrubs may still be made by taking the last year's growth. Simply cut into lengths of 10 to 12 inches, tie each kind, properly labeled, and bury in sand in the basement or in a protected spot in the garden. In springtime the cuttings will be calloused and may be planted in rows in the garden. As soon as house plants, such as the palm, pandanus, and dracaena show activity they may be shifted or transplanted, but it is wise not to transplant into huge pots or the plants will prove difficult to handle.

Saturday, Feb. 23.

Cuttings of geraniums may be taken to provide additional stock for outdoor bedding. Old plants that have been resting in the cellar may be taken up, potted, and the cuttings used. However, if the best flowering stock is to be enjoyed it should be purchased later. Cannas may be cleaned, soil removed, and the roots cut into sizable pieces and started in boxes. All kinds of bedding stock may be propagated from cuttings for early planting. If these are started in the house give them plenty of light or the plants will be weak and spindly.

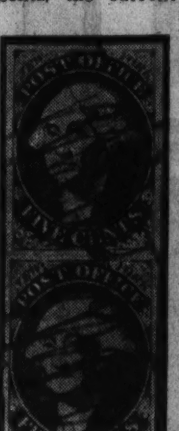
THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions about stamps, except questions concerning value. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

IN 1845 Robert H. Morris, postmaster at New York, brought out an issue of private stamps for the accommodation of his patrons. These labels showed a face value of 5 cents, the current rate for a letter consisting of a single sheet of paper, and were solely an evidence that the user had paid Mr. Morris 5 cents. Their use was a convenience, since a business house or individual could buy them in advance and deliver letters to the postoffice fully prepaid, and without the necessity of sending money along with the letters. Other offices to which such letters were delivered accepted them as indicating prepayment, just as they would have accepted a written or printed endorsement reading, "Paid—5c."



The engraving and printing of these labels was intrusted to a private company, and it may be that Mr. Morris feared that some may have been kept by the printers or employés. Perhaps there were more stamps in the mail than half-dimes in the cash box. At any rate, the order was given to sign each stamp before it was sold.

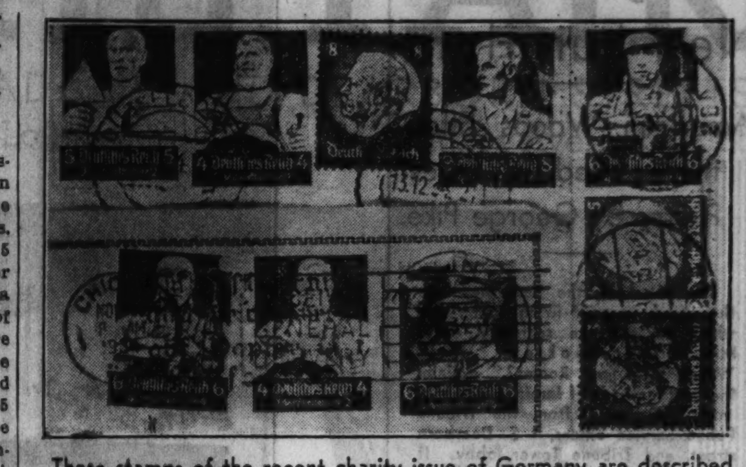
Signed Only Two Sheets.

It is thought that Mr. Morris did not sign more than the first two sheets, for the few known copies with the initials "R. H. M." may be divided into two groups: One with signatures sloping diagonally downward to the right, as in the example shown, or upward slightly toward the right. The tiresome job of signing stamps was then delegated to the postmaster's brother-in-law, Alonzo Castle Monson, who used the initials "A. C. M." commonly met with on the stamps. When he, too, tired of his task, the various clerks signed his initials, for several varieties of the "A. C. M." signature are known, but his brother, Marciana Monson Jr., seems to have used his own initials, for a pair has recently been shown with the initials "M. M. Jr."

The illustration shows the only known pair of these stamps with the initials "R. H. M." It is the property of S. Newbury of Chicago and is illustrated with his permission.

Up Before Congress.

In addition to the regular deluge of resolutions authorizing special stamps for various purposes, this congress has been requested to investigate the distribution of unfinished sheets of stamps by high officials. Regardless of the outcome of such an investigation, if the matter is carried that far, there will be a general tightening up at the postoffice department, and collectors, no doubt, will have seen the end of the miniature sheets which were so numerous during the last two years. Another bill deals with the modification of the laws governing illustrations of United States stamps. Expectations are that this bill will be passed and that collectors, especially beginners, will have a chance to see what some of the rarer United States stamps are like.



These stamps of the recent charity issue of Germany are described in an adjoining column.

German Charity Issue.

The winter set of charity stamps of Germany pictures men from various walks of life. The values, colors, and subjects are as follows: 3pf, brown, business man; 4pf, gray black, blacksmith; 5pf, green, mason; 6pf, dark green, miner; 8pf, orange brown, architect; 12pf, brick red, farmer; 20pf, myrtle green, scientist; 25pf, ultramarine, artist, and 40pf, red violet, judge. The postal value is given in the larger numerals just below the pictures, while the smaller numerals state the amount charged in excess of the face value. This surtax is devoted to winter relief. Examples are shown of the 4, 5, 6, and 8pf values. The odd 6pf stamp in the lower row is the stamp impressed on a postal card.

Memorial Day Stamp.

A movement for a Memorial day stamp has been started by Mrs. Andrew S. Caldwell of Carbondale, Ill., and it is her suggestion that this stamp bear the portrait of Gen. John A. Logan.

Memorial day owes its existence in a great measure to the efforts of Gen. Logan. On May 5, 1868, while commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, he issued a general order setting aside May 30, of that year, as a memorial day for the soldiers who fell during the civil war, and at the same time expressed the hope that this day would be observed from year to year. Since that time Memorial day has become second only to Independence day and its scope has been broadened to include the memory of those who fought in any of the wars of the United States. The first memorial day observance was at Carbondale, Ill., the wartime home of Gen. Logan, and the address of the day was made by that brilliant soldier.

The movement for this special stamp has the endorsement of the Logan chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the local post of the American Legion, and the district headquarters of the Illinois Woman's club. Communications addressed to the postmaster general have been responded to in an encouraging manner.

Lincoln Club Winners.

Among the winners at the junior stamp exhibit of the Lincoln Stamp club at the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A., which ended with the awarding of prizes on Lincoln's birthday, are Dale Myers of Wichita, Kas., who won the grand prize, as well as first and second prizes; Roy Panknin and Frances Massman of Chicago, with first and third prizes; William Swanson, Alfred Drake, and Frank Billmaier of Chicago, with second prizes, and many others. All of the prize winning frames will be on daily exhibit at the Stamp show, seventh floor, Boston store, from Feb. 18 to 28.

Harding Memorial.

Harold Johnson of Bradford, Pa., has submitted a block of six of the imperforate 2 cent Harding memorial issue, showing plate No. 15054 at the bottom of the block. So far as can be determined, this plate number has never been listed among those from which the imperforate stamps were printed. The stamps have been listed as coming from plates 15019, 15025, 15027, and 15028, with a single pane known with plate No. 14870. Collectors who save stamps with plate numbers attached are asked to check them with the lists of numbers such as are included in the booklets on United States commemorative stamps, and report any new numbers. In no other way can completeness be obtained, for in many cases there are no government records covering details interesting to the collector, but without particular value to the postoffice department.

Club Notes.

The Bulletin Board now carries two announcements under the name Du Page. These are the Du Page Philatelic club, meeting on the first Thursday of each month at 217 South Main street, Lombard, Ill., and the Du Page Stamp club, meeting on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month at the Ella Mary inn, Downers Grove, Ill. Should either listing be in error a postal card will be appreciated.

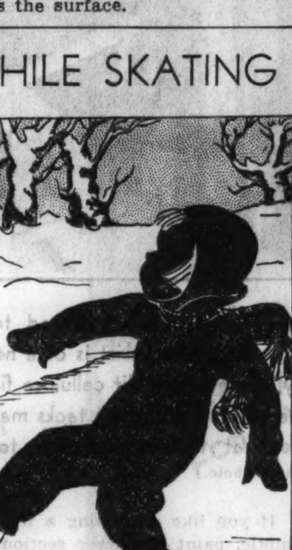
Treatment With Creosote Protects Step Stringers

IN modernizing the steps of a home, when the stringers have rotted, it is possible to take precautions so that the stringers won't rot a second time.

Build the new steps so that the air circulates under them. Then use stringers which have been given a treatment with creosote; that is, pressure treated with creosote. Or, at least, take some hot creosote oil and give the stringers a good brushing with it. Let them dry and then give them a second coat. And don't forget the sides and ends of the stringers, as well as the surface.

WHILE SKATING



By Eleanor Jewett.

Jack was skating and Jack fell down—
As any skater might do—
Jack fell on the ice and fell on his nose
And his nose was black and blue.

Jack rose to his feet and scorned the ice;
He vowed he would skate no more—
"The horrid old ice to trip me up!"
Jack was but two and four.

Jack's mother took care of the blue and black nose,
She took the greatest of care.
But do what she might, the nose did not look
Like the nose Jack was used to wear.

She gave a long sigh as at something lost
And Jack, with a sudden fear,
Put his hand to his nose and cried, relieved:
"Don't worry—my nose IS here!"

18th Century Design Motif of New Furniture

American Woods Effectively Used in Latest Pieces by George Pike.

Puzzled about the best place for the couch in your living room, and where to put the secretary desk? Miss Weigle's booklet, "What's Wrong with Your Rooms?" explains the best methods of furniture arrangement. Order it from the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower lobby. It is 5 cents by mail, 3 cents if you call for it.

By Edith Weigle.

At each of the huge furniture shows held during the year there are a few outstanding new designs. The manufacturer shows them proudly and confidently to his dealer-customers and they, in turn, display them to the public on the floors of their stores all over the country.

A well known southern firm is bringing out a new line that you will soon be seeing in your own home town and in the large cities, as well, for it is bound to meet with popularity. Not startlingly different from good 18th century forms with which we are all familiar, it has new touches and a new simplification that makes it distinctly a contribution to home furnishings.

It was designed by George Pike, an American craftsman, after two years of experimenting. He has used native woods—American mahogany and walnut. Butt veneer is used on the tops and fronts of various pieces, giving a beautiful natural decoration. All have been finished in wax, rubbed down to a soft, rich luster.

The furniture is built in three different outline dimensions. Some of the groups are as heavy as those of Chippendale, others of the in-between weight of Duncan Phyfe, and the third section of the line shows tables, sofas, and chairs as light and delicate as those of Sheraton.

Rounded Corners Make Furniture Fit Compactly.

Mr. Pike has introduced a new type of leg, rounded at the top and tapering to a square base, claiming this is scientifically a stronger and sturdier method of construction than many others. The rounded corners are also in harmony with the tenets of the National Safety council. More, aside from their beauty they have a practical feature, for the floor space occupied by this furniture seems less than it actually is. Pieces will fit into areas where a protruding corner would make it impractical to use this space.

Nicely carved ornaments, sparsely used, further enhance the charm of this new furniture. Mr. Pike has used the silaque leaf, a long, slender, curling bit of foliage, and the wheat ear on all the numerous pieces. Thus, several rooms done in this style cannot fail to have a feeling of unity.

Moldings, when used, are concave. Specially designed hardware suiting the form upon which it is placed includes drawer pulls that are either oval or circular. A concave center follows the line of the concave moldings. Antique brass is the finish, harmonizing with the rich browns of the mahogany and walnut woods.

Dining Chairs Available with Square or Rounded Backs.

The photograph today shows one of the beautiful dining room pieces in this line, a sideboard of classically simple lines and slight ornamentation. The wheat ear, seen in the top decoration of the mirror frame, is repeated in carving on the rounded legs of this buffet. Notice, too, the perfectly styled drawer pulls.

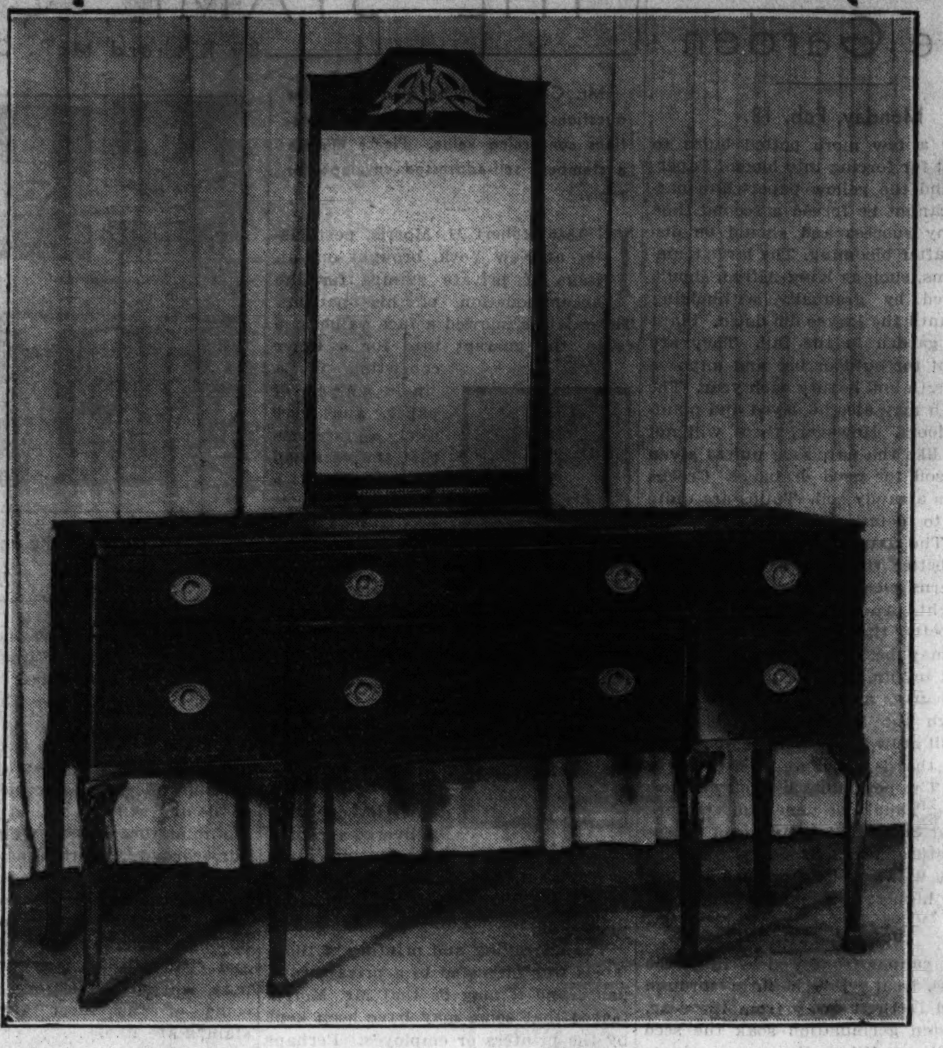
The spacious drawers offer plenty of room for linens and silver.

The dining chairs in this group are available with square or with rounded backs. We thought the latter the more attractive of the two. They were a little in the tradition of Robert Adam.

Also you may choose from several types of table, as well.

All this furniture was seen at the Merchandise mart and will soon be available in stores everywhere. Prices are medium and even a little lower than that.

MODERN VERSION OF THE SIDEBOARD



From an outstanding new line of furniture, this interesting sideboard, designed by George Pike, may be had in mahogany or walnut. It is a part of many ensembles for dining room, living room, and bedroom he has worked out for a well known North Carolina furniture company. The various pieces will be sold here and in stores all over the country. It was shown at the recent show at the Merchandise mart.

Brick Boasts Three Virtues in Home Building

Architects and Owners Praise its Sturdiness and Decorative Effects.

The year moves on! And—about that kitchen or basement you're intending to modernize. Send for booklets by Louise Bargelt, "A New Deal for the Old Basement" and "Modernizing the Kitchen." They are 3 cents each at the Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 South Dearborn and Tribune Tower, and 5 cents each by mail.

By Louise Bargelt.

In remodeling, as in building, there are three basic requirements, handed down to us from the days of the old Latin authority, Vitruvius—utility, strength, beauty. They apply as much to the home builder and modernizer of today as they did to the Roman builders of yore.

In considering materials for use in building and remodeling which will meet these basic requirements one must investigate the many decorative as well as structural possibilties of brick.

Brick we have had with us almost since time began. It is hard to go far enough back into the dim shadows of antiquity to find a time when brick was not in use. It received the royal favor of kings and conquerors in ancient civilizations, when our ancestors were not long removed from jungle savagry.

Babylonian rulers used brick widely—and they even painted it with waterproof enamels in soft colors of ochre and dull red, green and white, and turquoise blue.

Nebuchadnezzar Built Hanging Gardens of Bricks.

Nebuchadnezzar built marvelous hanging gardens of brick to please the fancy of his Median queen.

There are pyramids of brick outside the city of Cairo.

The Persians developed delightful effects, tapestried and carpet effects in brick, with melting tones of deep purple, manganese purple, cobalt blue, and sometimes red.

During the middle ages, throughout Europe — which learned the art of brickwork from the Romans — brick found its place and brick building was widespread.

Even in America we have brick antiquities in Mexico and Peru, and our colonies, first bringing this material from England or Holland, finally established their own domestic kilns.

Charming Effects Achieved with Bricks of Varying Sizes.

Nothing new about brick, certainly, but what is interesting is the growing tendency of the last two decades to achieve artistic, colorful, and beautiful effects in brickwork.

These effects are secured not only by a deft blending of color, but by expert design and pattern in the laying of the brick.

So—getting down to our 1935 houses—if we are considering the use of brick in their building or their remodeling, we want to keep in mind that:

Design and pattern are quite as important as color.

Charming effects may be had by using bricks of various sizes.

Alternate courses of squared stone and brick are as pleasing today as in the days of antiquity when they were widely used.

The basket weave pattern is attractive and particularly suited to an English or Norman type of home.

Floor May Be Painted, Varnished, or Waxed.

An informal effect can be obtained by laying bricks at random, some on ends and some flat.

Mortar joint colors, texture, and form influence the artistic aspects of brick.

In order to be certain we are getting the proper color, we should experiment with different samples of brick, laid up with mortar in varying colors.

Brick walls can enhance the beauty of an entrance hall and give a lively color and texture to sunroom walls and floors.

A basement recreation room floor, or the floor in an early American kitchen may be of brick, painted and varnished or waxed to a gleaming sheen.

A fireplace of textured brick gives much atmosphere to a room.

If an informal, old world effect is wished, the brick walls of a living room can be whitewashed, the ceiling left with exposed beams, and the floor given rough plank flooring.

New Burglar Proof Window Locks Are Invisible.

And—

SPEAKING OF WHAT'S NEW!

An interesting new type of window hardware is available which automatically locks windows. This burglar-proof window sash lock can be installed on virtually any type of existing window in five minutes' time. In addition to affording protection against the unwelcome invader, this lock is invisible. It eliminates the need of the visible type sash lock we have seen for so many years atop the parting sash rails.

Besides its strength and invisibility, the lock affords additional tightness to windows and can be called a "silencer" of unwelcome window rattles. No screws are needed to anchor the lock in the sash rails and no mortising is necessary.

A stairway with worn treads is a menace to bones! Also to life itself, since stairway falls cause nearly 5,000 deaths a year. A new type of tread is available, for all kinds of modernization—apartments, factories, schools, and homes. It is made of an abrasive composed of aluminum oxide, securely molded into a base of vulcanized rubber. Because this tread is strongly resistant to weather, it can be used for out of door steps. It comes in red, green, buff, and black.

White Paint Now Available in Many Different Shades.

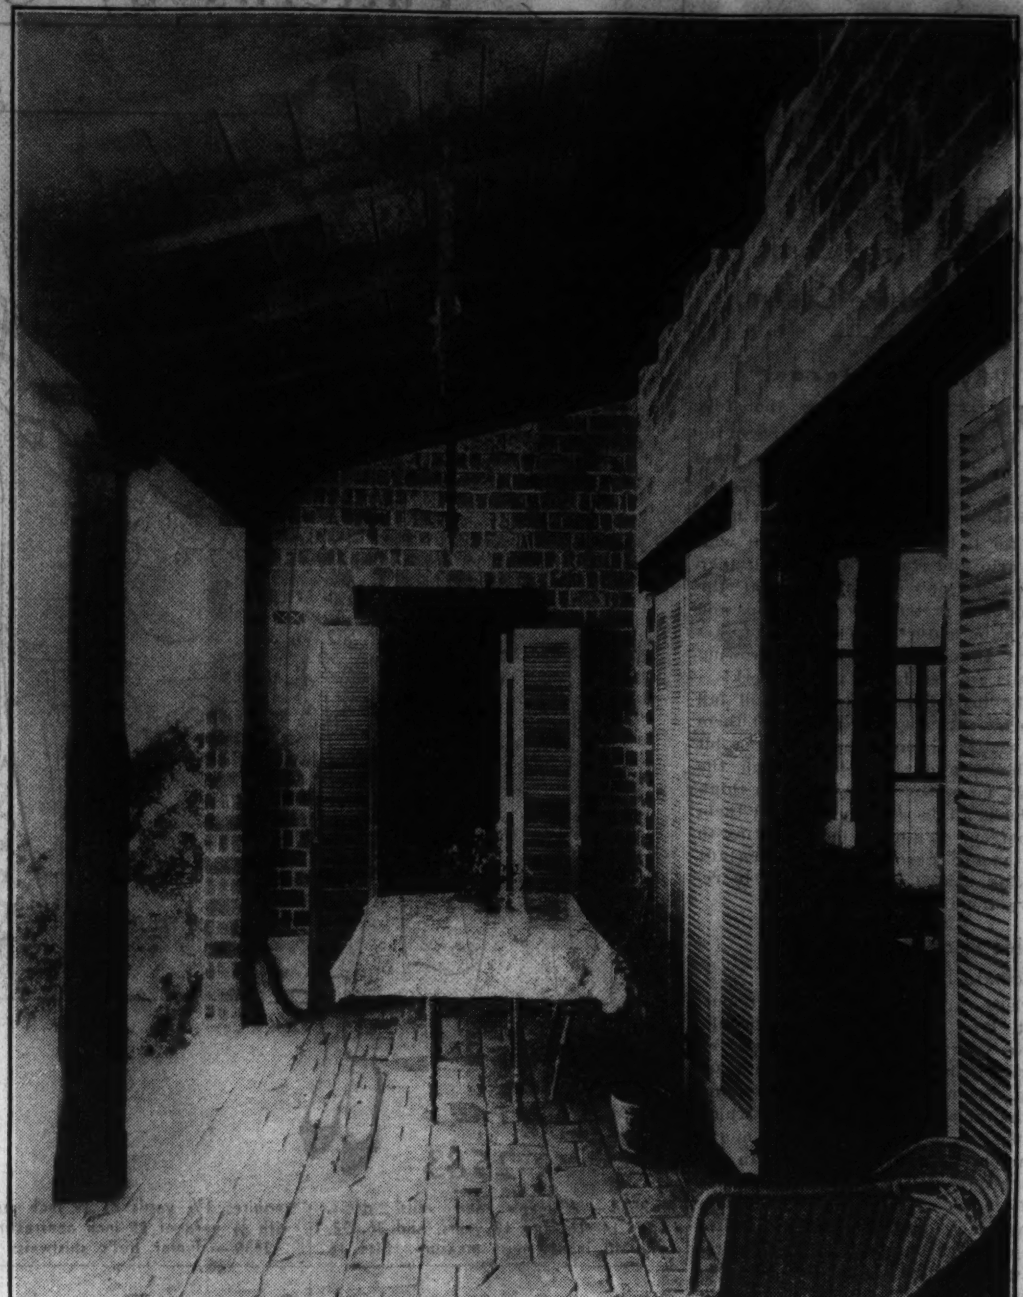
One of the newest treatments for wood, and even for metal, around the home is the "al. white" finish. This finish is now available in some dozen different shades of white, such soft variations as milk white, oyster white, cream white, alabaster white, chalk white, blue white, grayed white, lacker white, old ivory antique white, and several others.

Ready mixed paints provide such standard "whites" as pure white, ivory, and cream white. But the variations of these whites are obtained by deft blending with other colors.

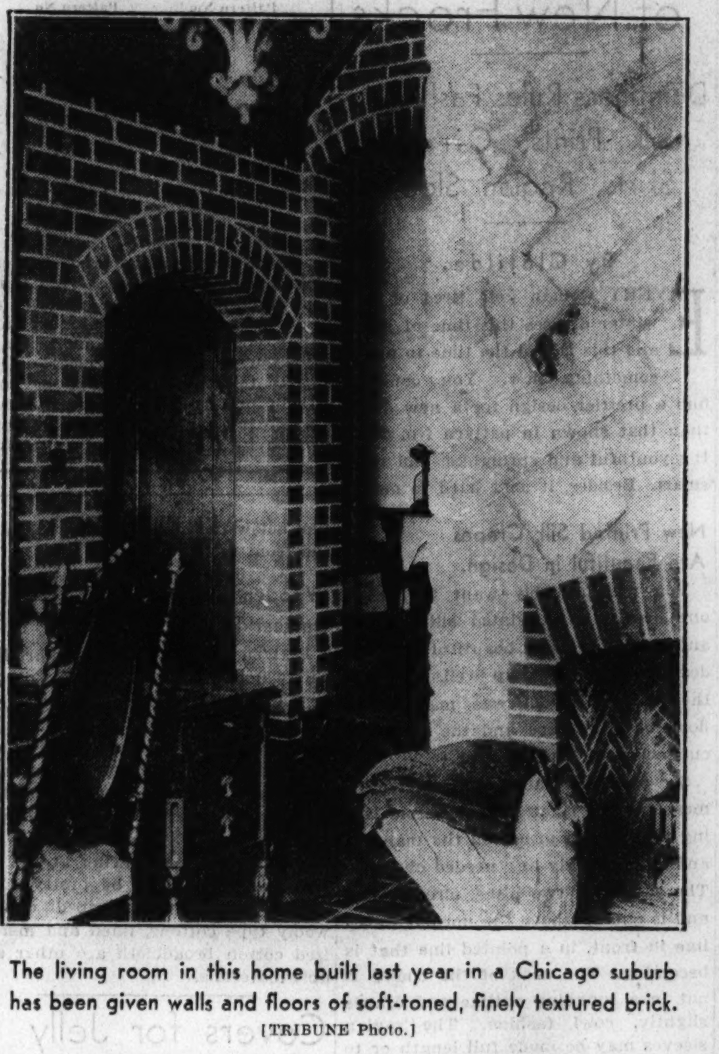
Metal features around a house such as iron flower stands, wall flower brackets, wall sconces, and wall lamps may all be given this new white finish. And, since paint can be so easily washed off, the finish can be removed with little effort, should the vogue shift in a few years, and another color become the mode of the moment.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over WGN next Saturday afternoon at 2:35.

BEAUTY INTRINSIC IN STRUCTURE

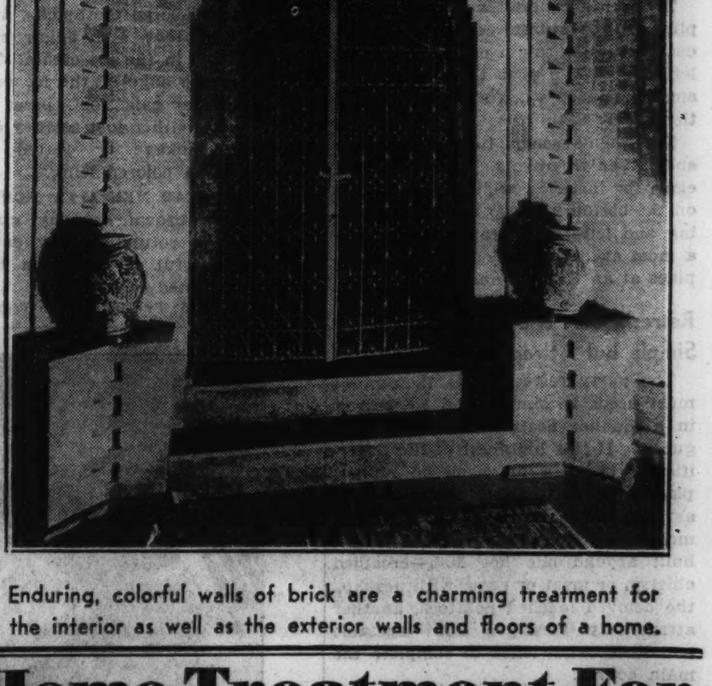


There is a beauty of texture and color in brick which makes it an alluring material rich in possibilities for terraces and sun porches, walks, and terraces and garden retaining walls.



The living room in this home built last year in a Chicago suburb has been given walls and floors of soft-toned, finely textured brick.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]



Enduring, colorful walls of brick are a charming treatment for the interior as well as the exterior walls and floors of a home.

Even Shower Curtains Now Register Charm

Synthetic Silks Figure Prominently in New Water Repellent Hangings.

In her booklet, "New Curtains and Draperies," Miss Winslow tells about fabrics and colors and answers the ever-puzzling queries about the proper length of each, as well as appropriate materials to use with various types of rooms. Order it from the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn St., or Tribune Tower lobby, for 5 cents, or call for it and pay 3 cents.

By Claire Winslow.

Time was when the bathroom was left out of the carefully planned color schemes given the rest of the house. But not so today. Just as much thought and attention go into making it colorful and pretty as in keeping the kitchen cheery and up to the minute. The new shower curtains, for example, are lovely enough to be hung anywhere in the home. In the thin, water repellent synthetic silks, they are a far cry from the old rubberized hangings that became mildewed in no time. You can get transparent curtains, too, if you fancy them, and you can doll up the effect with valances which are sold with some of the 1935 types.

We saw a stunning pure white satin effect shower curtain on which green geese with outstretched wings were depicted. Another was in moiré in a gorgeous salmon pink; a third in a huge checkerboard design. And for the slimmer pocketbook there are the simpler, cotton-like, solid color curtains bound in contrasting tones—green with peach, or pink with green, etc.

Yellow Walls Contrast with Chocolate Brown Linoleum.

Browns and yellows, popular in the living room, are being used, too, in bathroom decorations. Chocolate brown linoleum with inlaid white stripes covers the floor; walls are painted a clear, light yellow [flat, not enamel paint], and the new, good looking solid color brown rough towels, and pure white hand towels with brown borders complete the décor.

A more feminine color scheme is made up of white and varied shades of blue. A little dressing table, the center of interest, is pictured for you today. Its top is mirror glass cut in a form slightly deeper than a semicircle. The lustrous plaited skirt of light blue is of a new fabric designed by Donald Deskey, woven of slit cellulose film and cotton in a nub effect. Blue ribbon and glass tacks make a tailored finish.

In this bathroom the walls are pure white. Little glass shelves holding colored bottles for lotions, etc., make an interesting pattern against them. The towels are of blue and white polka dot linen.

Another more vivid color scheme for a bathroom uses red, white, and black. The wallpaper is of washable plaid, the shower curtain is of red transparent fabric, accessories are in black and chromium, and a black linoleum covers the floor.

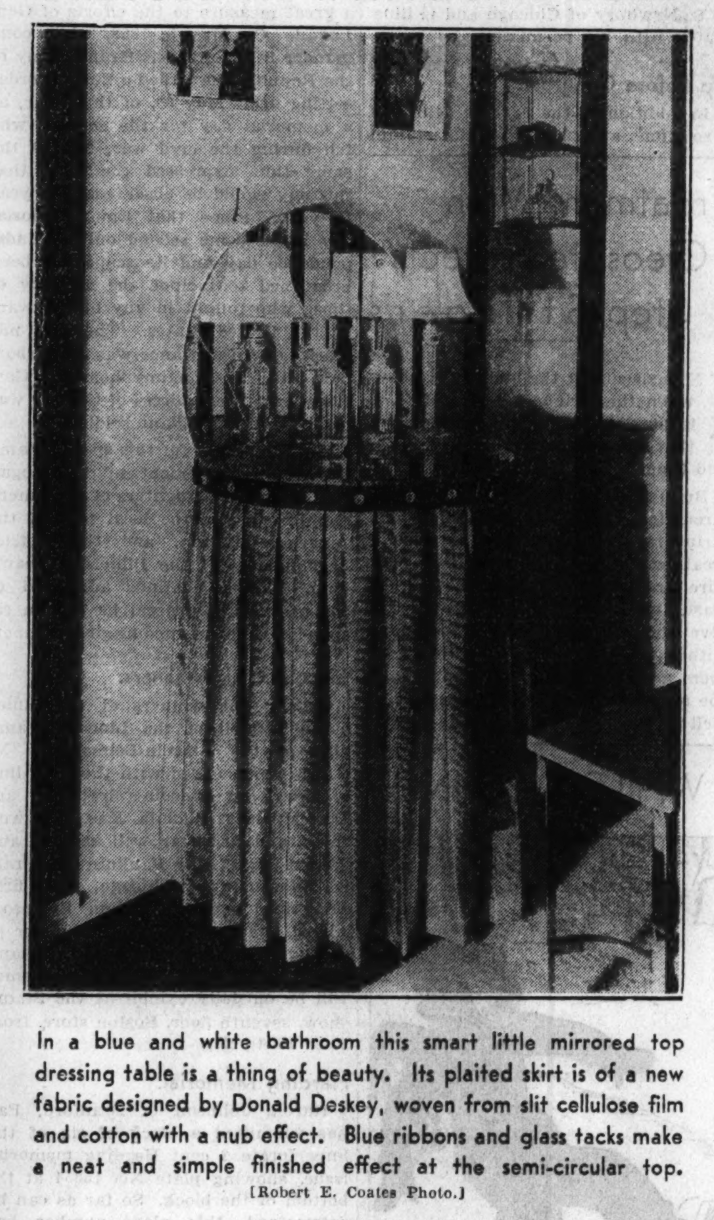
Silver and Rose Have a Subtle Charm.

Here's still another recipe with red in it: Shower curtain of scarlet moiré, dressing table skirt of red and white peppermint striped material, a white chenille rug on a red linoleum floor.

If you like something a little more subtle, paint the lower section of the walls a light silvery gray and the upper part two shades of rose—first a wide, horizontal band of rose and above it an equally wide band of lighter rose. Paint the ceiling white, in which a bit of the light rose has been mixed.

At the windows hang curtains of rose pink seersucker with white cotton ball edging, and use pink and white towels, and a pink and white plaid washable rug on the floor.

DRESSED IN WHITE AND BLUE



In a blue and white bathroom this smart little mirrored top dressing table is a thing of beauty. Its plaited skirt is of a new fabric designed by Donald Deskey, woven from slit cellulose film and cotton with a nub effect. Blue ribbons and glass tacks make a neat and simple finished effect at the semi-circular top.

DECORATION QUERIES

Query: "What color can I use instead of rust in a color scheme I am gradually trying to change from rust and green to some other combination?—V. L."

Answer: If you continue with the green introduce brown and beige, with a few vivid accents in coral or bright yellow. You'll like this newer color scheme.

Query: "My living room walls are light tan, woodwork dark, and rug eggplant. I am going to have some of the furniture re-covered or else have slip covers made. Also new draperies. Will you please suggest colors?—R. G."

Answer: First, select your drapery fabric. One of the beautiful new printed linens or chintzes would be good. Choose one with a neutral background, like the walls, and a design in soft colors. Then when selecting the slip covers or upholstery for your furniture match two or more of the colors of the design in your drapery fabric. This will give you your color scheme and will "tie up" your room nicely.

Query: "Can draperies and bedspreads be of the same material? Or should the spread be of another fabric and color?—N. T."

Answer: Many women like to tie up their decorative scheme in the bedroom by having matching bedspreads and draperies. There is no rule about the matter, however, and if you do not wish to do this you needn't.

Kilns of Italy Yield Artistry in New Pottery

Leaning Tower and Figures from Mythology Grace Ware Created in Pisa.

By Mabel Bryant.

The artistry of Italian potters is vividly reflected in the many colorful wares shipped to our shores from the kilns of Naples, Florence, Turin, Pisa, and other potteries of Italy. The newest line of Italian productions, recently introduced at a Chicago store, is from Pisa. This pottery is most provincial, with rather heavy designs and dark colorings.

Almost all the pieces in this interesting group have a sketch of the leaning tower upon them. There are no complete sets to be had in this ware, although one is able to select enough pieces to make a unique tea set. There are a few unusual designs bordering on the grotesque. Large pitchers for water or for more potent beverages have a lifesize, full front view of Venus, besides some other mythological figures.

The Venus pitcher has a perfect nose, ears, and dreamy eyes. The handles have the effect of braided hair, and all this has natural coloring and is highly glazed. Other places in this group are little ash trays, candle sticks, large urns, sandwich plates, and is highly glazed. Other pieces in Those seeking something different will find it here.

Marvelous values in reproductions of the famous Capo di Monti porcelain, manufactured first by Charles the third, king of Naples, in 1736, are also to be found at this same store. Most of the reproductions of the lovely Capo di Monti, we have been informed, are now made in Saxony.

Classically draped figures and little cupids are used for design, too. Gorgeous lamp bases, compotes, demitasse sets, massive soup tureens, with soup plates to match, and service plates all have fat little cupids circling them, and little figures, perfect in detail, are perched on the sides of cups or the top of covers, doing service as handles.

Capo di Monti, being so ornate, adapts itself to formal table decorations only. It is most inappropriate for informal use. This china shows best when associated with handsome rock crystal and chinaware that has suitable gold trim, such as Royal Doulton, Coalport, and exquisite Minton.

Majolica, the most commonly known Italian ware, has a type of opaque glazing and most ornate decorations. This particular ware, we have learned, reached its greatest perfection in Italy in the 16th century. Majolica, being flowery in design, a few pieces well selected are sufficient, for one may tire of it soon when too much is used. When chosen with thought, such pieces as a gayly trimmed fruit bowl on a pedestal, a large flat plate for hors d'œuvres, candy jars, or a large handsome vase cleverly placed in the right spot, will add charm to surroundings.

HOUSEHOLD QUERIES

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We have a one pipe heating system and suffer a good deal from noisy water hammerings. Can we change this system to a vacuum system?—Harold T.

Answer: You can derive many of the benefits of a vapor and vacuum system by the installation of special vacuum air valves. This will take only a few hours and you won't have to shut down the heating plant while it is being done. Consult a reliable heating contractor.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Is there any way of eliminating the danger of gas explosions from coal gases in a boiler? I have been hearing lately about the possibility of such explosions and am worried. We burn soft coal.—Mrs. D.

Answer: Be sure that you are firing correctly. Never completely cover a bed of live coals with fresh coal, as this allows unburned gases to generate. Push the live coal to one side and place fresh coal in the front or to one side. The exposed live coals will light the gases as they are freed by the freshly fired fuel. Also, never fail to leave the slide damper on the fire door open until the fire is a glowing red. If you are uncertain as to the proper way to fire your boiler ask your heating contractor for a set of rules, or write to the manufacturer of your boiler, or to the source from which you bought it.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Can we paint directly over a varnished surface, or do we have to remove all the old varnish?—K. C.

Answer: If the old varnish and paint is in good condition, firm, and not peeling, you can paint directly over it. But you will have to dull the gloss first by washing it with warm water and sal soda, or by sandpapering it well.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: What is the difference between a paste wax and a liquid polishing wax? Mrs. J.

Answer: They are practically the same in composition, but the paste type is preferable in building up a good waxed surface, while the liquid type cleans and polishes after the finish is once established.

Home Treatment For Keeping Skin Young

MERCOLIZED WAX is the one beauty aid you can afford because this single preparation embodies all the essentials of beauty that your skin needs. It cleanses, softens, bleaches, lubricates and protects. It is so simple to use, too. Just pat it on your skin each night as if it were an ordinary cold cream. That's all. Mercolized Wax seeps into your pores and dissolves grime and dust and all impurities. It absorbs the discolored surface skin in tiny, invisible particles, revealing the beautiful, soft, young skin that lies beneath. It clears away freckles, tan, oiliness, sunburn or any other blemishes. You use such a tiny bit of Mercolized Wax for each application that it proves an inexpensive beauty investment. Beauty cannot be taken for granted. It must be cared for regularly if you want to hold it through the years. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin.

POWDERED SAXOLITE dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel quickly reduces wrinkles and other age signs. It is a refreshing, stimulating astringent lotion. Use it daily. At all drug and department stores.

Electrical Toys For Housekeeping Thrill Juveniles

SEVERAL juvenile toys, electrically equipped, yet perfectly safe for youngsters, are available at a State street store. There is a tiny washing machine that really washes doll clothes. A small electric mangle with a roller about twelve inches long smoothes the laundry and may be used to help mother finish the smaller items of the family wash.

A little stove to gladden the heart of a child, and, to make playing house more real, it actually cooks. A cool, warm, and baking indicator upon its oven door takes care of baking food to a turn, and the tiny light over the burners makes it resemble modern kitchen stoves.

A small electric drink mixer assures vitamins for the juvenile housewife. The fact that children may be permitted to blend their own chocolate malted in the tiny mixer is an incentive for drinking the nourishing beverage without protest. In this group also are miniature toasters and waffle irons. Two cracker sized slices of bread may be toasted an even golden brown, while the waffle iron is a perfect little model, about the size of a saucer.

Jumbo Cups Lighten Task of Serving Coffee Hounds

YOU can't go wrong in serving the coffee hound his breakfast coffee from a double rations cup and saucer. For as a rule about the time an ordinary size cup of coffee is at a comfortable temperature one is ready for one's second serving. These jumbo cups are available both with designs depicting scenic views or in more conventional styles—ivory bodies toned with cobalt blue or maroon bands between gold edge and gold tracery patterns.

Washington—and How He Beat the British

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

GEORGE WASHINGTON, the 203d anniversary of whose birth will be observed throughout the nation next Friday, was a many-sided man. His interests during most of his lifetime, a span covering a critical period in the history of America, were far more varied than those of the average citizen.

As a statesman he was level-headed and profound, and never lacking in courage. As the courteous host in the mansion house on his broad estates, or, in fact, anywhere that his travels carried him, he was the perfect gentleman. As a scientific farmer he was years ahead of his times. As a soldier he was a first class fighting man. It is with his record as a soldier, specifically as the commander in chief of the American forces in the Revolutionary war, that we shall deal here.

Much has been written of Washington as a warrior. There are those who would make him out to have been a great military genius, in the class with Alexander, Hannibal, Napoleon, Grant, and Lee. There are others who would discount his achievements on the field of battle and in the planning of martial operations and classify him among the minor figures of military history. The truth, perhaps, lies somewhere in between these two extreme appraisals.

Washington was not one of the supergreat as military leaders are measured in history, for never in his life did he command an army imposing in numbers nor plan conflict on a grand scale. Yet, with the facilities that he had at hand in the dark days of the revolution and against the almost overwhelming problems confronting him, he performed in an amazing manner. In his ability to cover wide territory in a brief space of time and to be on the right spot when needed most, as revealed in the accompanying map showing his major movements from the time he was chosen commander in chief by the Continental congress at Philadelphia on June 15, 1775, to that fateful hour on Oct. 19, 1781, when Lord Cornwallis surrendered to him at Yorktown, he has had few equals in the military annals of the world. His almost uncanny talent for moving relatively small armies about the countryside with remarkable speed and strange precision and his quality for planning and executing surprise attacks have been matched only to a degree by another Virginian, Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson, of Civil war fame.

Washington, it should be remembered, was a member of the so-called aristocracy of colonial America. Men in the colonies in his station in life as a rule—though there were exceptions—belonged to the conservative class, were not entirely in sympathy with any move that would bring about a drastic change in government, and for the most part adhered at first, openly or secretly, to England, the mother country. It took a high type of courage to cut loose the old ties, as Washington did, and agree to lead a cause which at the onset appeared next to hopeless—a cause which if it failed was certain to bring him disaster

Misses Claire, Kalish and Skinner Lead Playbills

ChicagoStage Gets Trio of First Nights

'Ode to Liberty' Opens at Grand Opera House; 'Sixteen' at Blackstone.

By Charles Collins.

EVIDENCE of the reawakening of the legitimate theater in Chicago is abundant this week. Here am I, on the verge of three successive nights at the play, feeling like a veteran matador at the opening of a great corrida de toros; and here are three actresses worthy of my steel, ready to submit new works and wiles for my appraisal. To prepare for the tournament I have assembled the following notes:

Shaindel Kalish: The girl who came out of the west side a year ago with nothing but little theater work on her record to give a captivating performance of the rôle of Manuela in "Girls in Uniform." Hats were tossed into the air over her, and the proclamations of her talent reverberated as far as Hollywood, which issued the customary invitations to join the hierarchy of bright angels in the cinema paradise.

She answered that she preferred to wait until she had increased her artistic stature. She entered the University of Chicago, married her manager, and nursed an ambition to do something for the enfeebled stage of her home town.

Wonder Girl vs. Famous Stars.

Miss Kalish, whose age is 19, will make her debut in professional company tonight in the Blackstone theater. The play in which she has the leading rôle is "Sixteen," a drama from London and New York dealing with one phase of the spiritual anguish of adolescence. The work was written by Aimée and Philip Stuart, and is produced here by Charles K. Freeman, former director of the theatrical group at the Jewish People's institute and energetic worker for the development of a creative dramatic life in Chicago. The other members of the cast, captured along Broadway and certified as expert, are Regina Wallace, Judith Lowry, Noel Tearle, Wallace Widdecombe, Constance Pelissier, and Harriet Noble Cain.

Ina Claire: The most distinguished high comedienne of the American stage; a Helen of Troy in the latest styles of coiffure, dress, and sophistication, with a jaunty Irish wit under the veneer. She is a fine artist of the stage with a legend for buoyancy and charm. Her play, "Ode to Liberty," comes here fresh from a New York run; it is an adaptation by Sidney Howard of a French comedy known in Paris as "Liberté Provisoire." Others in the cast are Walter Slezak, easily remembered from "Music in the Air"; Roy Gordon, Paul McGrath, Colin Hunter, and Ethel Strickland. This engagement will be the American Theater society's third offering of its subscription season. Opening tomorrow night at the Grand Opera house.

Solo Actress in New Characters.

Cornelia Otis Skinner: The gracious and gifted daughter of Otis Skinner and a unique figure of the contemporary stage. She gives one woman shows that have the effect of well populated dramas; moreover, she writes them herself. Her new "sequence" of the season is "Mansion on the Hudson," in which she appears as six characters in the history of an American family during the last fifty-five years. The periods which she illustrates in their characteristic costumes and dialog are represented by the dates 1880, 1898, 1920, 1927, and 1934. Opening tonight in the Selwyn theater.

Miss Skinner's program for her engagement of one week is as follows: "Mansion on the Hudson," tonight, Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights, and Friday and Saturday matinées; "The Loves of Charles II.," Tuesday night; "The Empress Eugénie," Thursday night.

INA CLAIRE IN NEW ROLE

Ina Claire, most distinguished comedienne of the American stage, returns to Chicago tomorrow night in a new play called "Ode to Liberty." She will have a three weeks' engagement.

Basquette in Floor Show at Stevens

McNallie Girls Return to Walnut Room; Winter Programs in Cabarets.

LINA BASQUETTE'S dancing of the "Continental," the latest fad of fancy steppers, is the feature of the current cabaret entertainment in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. Miss Basquette is an alumna of the "Ziegfeld Follies" and other Broadway revues, and has also been active in the movies. The other performers on the program are Eddie Noll and Lorraine, ballroom dancers; Russell Swan, sleight-of-hand expert, and Keith Beecher's orchestra.

● The four McNallie Sisters have returned to the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel, scene of their cabaret debut. They are handsome singers and dancers ranging in age from 18 to 24. Marjorie Enters and Philippe Borgia, exotic dance team, appear in numbers called "Dream Tango" and "Jazz Moderne." Mara Senta and Carl Muller sing duets, and Ted Travers, a discovery of Irene Dunne, interprets popular ballads. Art Kassel's orchestra continues. A new program will be launched on March 1.

● Lorraine Santschi and Josephine Buckley, leaders of the Abbott ballet girls in the Empire room of the Palmer House, are contributing a special dance number to the 10 o'clock program. The principal entertainers on the regular bills are Jay Seiler, who dances on skis; the Condos Brothers, tap dancers; Stanley Morner, romantic tenor, and Stuart and Lea, modernistic ballroom dancers. Ted Weems' orchestra continues.

● The entertainers in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel are Dorothy Page, contralto; Hal Rebus, baritone, who sings popular songs and operatic arias; Danny White, dancer and comedian, and Santoro and Polita, specialty dancers, who are now making their first appearances in Chicago. They scored a hit in a Radio City production.

● Al Trahan, the pianist-comedian star of the cabaret show at Chez Paree, says that his antics are based upon the concert stage behavior of the late Vladimir de Pachmann, Chopin virtuoso of eccentric mannerisms. Other personalities of the show are Lady Yukona Cameron, Trahan's partner; Miles and Kover, dancers; the Frazee Sisters, harmonizers, and Betty Kane, dancer. Gus Arnheim's band continues.

● Herbie Kay's orchestra will continue at the Edgewater Beach hotel until May. . . . The "Paris-Vienna" revue at the French Casino will end its engagement two weeks hence. . . . George Olsen and Ethel Shutta continue to preside over the cabaret festivities in the College Inn.

A GIRL FROM THE "VANITIES"

Joyce Johnson is among the young women in the latest edition of Earl Carroll's "Vanities" revue, now in performance as the stage production of the Chicago theater's program. She does her best to live up to Mr. Carroll's chronic boast about "the most beautiful girls."
[Bloom Photo.]

'Vanities' at the Chicago; Variety Bills

THE Chicago theater stage program contains the Earl Carroll "Vanities" revue, presented substantially as it was given recently at the Grand Opera house. Featured in the cast of 50 are Ken Murray, the Samuels brothers, Helen Charleston, Milton Charleston, Claire Curry, the Collette sisters, Donald Burr, and Rosie Moran, with a chorus of 26 girls. The revue is presented in 20 scenes.

The current vaudeville program at the Palace theater includes James Melton, singer of romantic songs; Stepin Fetchit, colored comedian; Tim and Irene, vaudeville and radio comedians, and Irene Vermillion, a dancer, with six assistants, in the "Revue Continental."

The stage program at the State-Lake theater this week is headed by Tom Emerson's Mountaineers, a hillbilly act. Other items are: Goss and Barrows, comedians; Billy Ebs, ventriloquist; Talent and Merit, in "The Weigh of a Girl"; Hatt and Herman, comedy acrobats; Danny White, comedian; Verne Buck, and the State-Lake ballet.

Al Kvale appears at the Uptown theater with his bandsmen in a new revue.

Amateur Critics Say Yes and No Regarding New Comedy

N. Y. Reporter Plies Audience for Reactions

La Guardia Cryptic in Comment on Langner's Play Razzing Bankers.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The night a new comedy by Lawrence and Armina Marshall Langner was produced the mayor of New York, Fiorella La Guardia, was a first nighter.

The presence of the mayor was not unusual save in the fact that he seldom goes to the theater. Not a third as often as his predecessor, Mayor Walker, used to go. The play was one called "On to Fortune," and what interested me was the mayor's reaction when he was asked for an opinion.

"On to Fortune" is a comedy about banking, a lightly satirical fling at those bankers who will almost gleefully send a clerk to prison for stealing a thousand dollars, but calmly divert many thousands that do not belong to them to save the bank and themselves.

Only Bankers Can Understand La Guardia's Criticism.

"At 6 per cent it is too much," the mayor told a reporter after the play. And when the reporter asked for an explanation of what he meant he added: "Yes, at 4 per cent it is still too much."

Pressed for further clarification the mayor smiled and said: "O, the bankers will get it!"

Perhaps the bankers did. I didn't. . . .

The reporter, whose assignment it was to check the opinion of the real playgoers as opposed to those of the destructive dramatic critics, continued his search and came upon Bernard Deutsch, president of the local board of aldermen.

"The lines certainly have a familiar ring," said Mr. Deutsch. "I don't like it as a play. It all seems pretty close to us, it is like an echo." Both Mrs. La Guardia and Mrs. Deutsch, however, insisted they liked the play.

Producers Want Audience's, Not Critics', Comments.

The reporter buttonholed several other lobby loungers and collected several other yes-and-no opinions, winding up with Commissioner Moses.

"I have no opinion," said the commissioner. "Lawrence Langner is a friend of mine."

There is fixed belief among most producers of plays that it would be of vast help to their business and to the theater in general if they could do away with the published opinions of hired critics and publish the frank and honest opinions of those rate-paying playgoers who know what they like.

This reporter at the play has been angling for the lobby expressions to be printed in an evening paper the last several weeks. His experience with the mayor is average and typical. . . .

Small Town Bankers Heroes of "On to Fortune."

Last season the Langners wrote and produced the amusing "Pursuit of Happiness." It ran through the better part of the season and did well both on tour and in stock. You may recall it as the bundling comedy in which the heroine of revolutionary days kept her suitor warm in a New England farmhouse by letting him take off his shoes and share the bed with her so long as he observed the prescribed conventions and did not try to raise the saw toothed bundling board lowered between them.

"On to Fortune" has no such aid in the way of original comedy situations. It is a story of the Banker Sloans of a midwest town. For five generations they have been the financial bulwark of the community. Sons have followed fathers in the preservation of the family honor and the family profits.

Comes a day when a small salaried clerk, carried away by his enthusiasm for stock gambling, borrows a few hundreds to invest, runs his losses up to $45,000, gets them down to $25,000, and then confesses. He is ready, even eager, to go to jail. Banker Sloan is ready to let the law take its course and collect his bond. But Donald Sloan, his second son, being slightly radical, sees a grave injustice being done.

Son Gives Banker an Object Lesson.

Why send the clerk to jail for misdirecting funds placed in his care when it is something the officers of the bank frequently do? To convince them Donald takes a million dollars' worth of bonds out of the bank and hides them in the Sloan piano. When the bank examiners come and exposure is threatened Banker Sloan does not hesitate to borrow his niece's heritage to cover the loss. . . .

In the end the clerk is bought off from going to jail, which would start a run on the bank, and given a chance to pay back his losses with an increase in salary.

There are bright Langner lines and a touch of sex. The wife of the banker must accept the invitation of the firm's lawyer for a rendezvous to cement his loyalty. She is a confused soul to start with. "O, dear, I wish you wouldn't keep such large sums in the bank," she protests when the million dollars is reported missing.

Roy Atwell, the world twister of radio, is back in drama to play the banker. Ilka Chase is the wife and Myron McCormick the radical son.

Incidentally Mary Rogers, daughter of Will of Beverly Hills, the philosopher who, in Brooks Atkinson's phrase, "sprinkles salt on his gum," makes her first Broadway appearance as the ingénue of the play. She is pretty, eager, and evidently blessed with better than average talent. . . .

Most of the Week's Plays Should Have Been Missed.

Most of the plays missed being what they should be this week. Another was "It's You I want," which goes back to the slamming door and the ohmigoshmiwife type. This one, written by a Maurice Braddell and played in London a dozen years ago with Seymour Hicks as a middle aged roué in the chief rôle, has been done over by a George Bradshaw, American.

Mr. Bradshaw has made the hero a young man and he is now played by Earle Larimore, but that does not make him the least bit more plausible. He is one of those English farce heroes forced to report frequently that the ladies simply will not let him alone, and he must get away and rest. So he goes to Scotland for the fishing.

Before going he rents his apartment to the husband of one of the married women he is trying to escape. The husband installs his mistress in the apartment. The mistress' husband comes home from India unexpectedly.

In one scene six or seven persons are hidden or trying to hide in the same apartment and that makes it more silly than funny. They just won't learn that farce must be at least fairly believable.

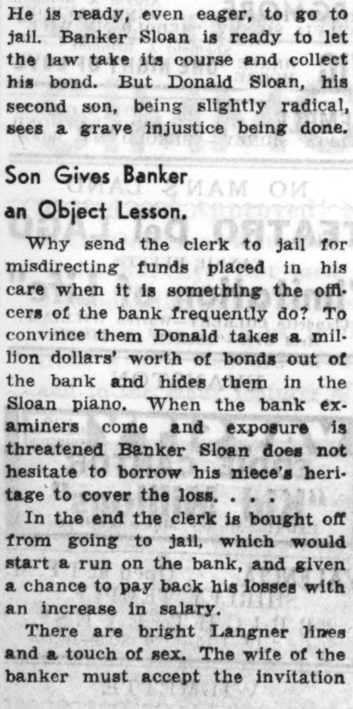
Nice cast. In addition to Larimore there are Taylor Holmes, Cora Witherspoon, Leona Maricle, and Helen Chandler. They do what they can and their spirited playing may save the piece for a time. . . .

A fourth miscue—this certainly is a depressing day—is a revival of Jacinto Benavente's 19 year old "The Field of Ermine," which Nance O'Neill tried in Chicago ten years ago. This is, in the Benavente manner, formal and stodgy, theatrical and rhetorical, never in touch with life nor interesting.

Benavente, or the Benavente drama in its translated state at least, has been more successful in closing theaters in America than opening them.

'DAVID COPPERFIELD'

Here are little Dora and David Copperfield grown up. These two loved Dickens characters are delightfully portrayed by Maureen O'Sullivan and Frank Lawton in "David Copperfield." At the United Artists theater.



"WINGS IN THE DARK"

Cary Grant plays a blind-flying aviator in "Wings in the Dark." Glamorous Myrna Loy is his leading woman. At the Chicago.

Kreisler Gives His Name to Classic Music

Works He Long Claimed He "Found" at Last Published as His Own.

By Edward Moore.

FRITZ KREISLER would seem to have reversed the order of doing things as one sometimes reads about them. Instead of putting out music of other people under his own name he put out his own compositions and gave them other people's names.

A brief news item in THE TRIBUNE called attention to the fact the other day. Since then more details have been received. It appears that in the catalog of the publishers who issued Mr. Kreisler's music he was credited with two divisions: "Classical manuscripts" and "original compositions." The first, numbering about fourteen works, was put out about thirty years ago, and frequently played by Mr. Kreisler and other violinists ever since. They were supposed to be from the pens of composers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Modesty Prompted Kreisler's Hoax.

But a certain unnamed lecturer and writer on musical topics engaged in a search for the original manuscripts and was unable to find them. He applied to Kreisler's publishers and got unsatisfactory replies. Finally the direct question was put to Kreisler, at present in Vienna, and this was his cabled reply:

"Every piece named, in fact the entire series labeled 'classical manuscripts,' are in every detail my original compositions, with the sole exception of the first eight bars of the Couperin 'Chanson Louis XIII.' taken from a traditional melody."

He explained his crediting of old masters with his own music thus:

"Necessity forced this course on me thirty years ago, when I was desirous of enlarging my programs. I found it inexpedient and tactless to repeat my name endlessly on the programs."

Few Artists Loath to Repeat Their Own Names.

And this would seem to be another variant from the normal. For what other composer has there ever been since the first note was written down on paper who was unwilling to take all the credit he could get?

The thirty years' hoax was a brilliant, successful, and harmless one. No one got hurt, a lot of good music was introduced on violin programs, and both the violinists and the public benefited thereby. Thirty years ago Kreisler was even then a magnificent artist but not a particularly popular one. His popularity grew until today he is second to hardly any one in the concert world. For that reason he is now willing to acknowledge the authorship of his own works.

So the new catalog will have a new makeup under the Kreisler name. Instead of "classical manuscripts" and "original compositions," it will read "original compositions" and "transcriptions."

Original Story Said Music Was Found in Monastery.

Here is the list of the works in question: Three bore the name of Couperin, "Aubade Provençale," "Chanson Louis XIII. and Pavane," and "La Precieuse." Porpora was given credit for "Allegretto in G Minor" and "Menuet"; Padre Martini for "Andantino" and "Preghiera"; Pugnani for "Praeludium and Allegro" and "Tempo di Minuetto," and there was a Vivaldi Concerto, Cartier's "La Chasse," Dittersdorf's "Scherzo," Francouer's "Sicilienne and Rigaudon," and Stamitzs' "Study on a Choral."

If my memory is correct the original story was that he found these manuscripts in the closely guarded archives of some remote monastery in Europe and was permitted to make copies of them. By no means the least astonishing feature of it all was that they were all so well done that no one doubted their authenticity even from the internal evidence of style and manner. At any rate, they will bear Kreisler's name in the future.

College Critics Are Blind, Says Dean Hubbard

DEAN ADDISON HIBBARD of Northwestern university, speaking recently before the Northwestern associates, gave what might be considered as an adequate answer to the question raised in the Carnegie corporation report concerning the doubtful future of the liberal arts college in America, although Dean Hibbard's talk was not specifically directed at any controversial issue. He aimed, rather, at critics of the liberal college generally.

He divided these critics into three groups, comparing them to the three blind men of India, who, curious to find out something about an elephant, examined one of the beasts with their hands. One man felt one of the elephant's legs and decided the animal was like a large tree. The second felt the elephant's side and believed the pachyderm was like a wall. The third grasped the trunk and announced the elephant was like a huge rope.

Dean Hibbard said some critics believe a liberal education should teach a particular skill, another group argues that such an education is a preparation for life in the complex modern world, while a third group wants to subordinate the liberal college to the demands of preprofessional training. The members of all three groups, in the opinion of Dean Hibbard, are educationally blind.

"We must not confuse," he said, "the function of a college with the function of a university. The university is, properly, a collection of colleges. It is, rightly, all things to all men. But the college should be, primarily, one thing to all men—it should stand clearly, before all things else, for the development of human intelligence and for the formation of the intellectual attitude toward life."

GOOD Morning!

A new solution to the "in-law" problem is gayly offered in this movie adapted from Edith Wharton's story, "Bread Upon the Waters."

The tale unfolded is of a happy, rich young New York bachelor who falls for the wiles (and, Bebby, ARE they wiles!) of a Russian refugee.

He weds her. AND—her family! Awaiting the Kings on their return from a blissful honeymoon is Nadja's artist-violinist brother, who has moved in bag and baggage. And not long is it till Nadja's sisters, nieces, nephews, and other assorted relatives are samovaring, vodka-ing, and buzzing about the one time sedate apartment that had till so recently been presided over so competently by a Swedish Hilda. Hilda, needless to say, departs in wrath upon the arrival of the Cossack clan.

Ah! How Nadja DOES love her family . . .! When Nadja's papa materializes as doorman at a Russian café—WELL . . .!

Nadja's Charm Complicates Jimmy's Decision.

The situation is peculiarly difficult for the reason that Nadja is, really, such a perfectly alluring person. The dark, gentle, warm sort. As played by June Clayworth she could put hobbles on any man, I'd think.

Well, though temporarily disorganized, Jimmy is not a smart American business man for NOTHING. . . . How he solves his problem is something for the picture to show you.

"Strange Wives" is expertly acted and the deep sorrow you experience for the predicament of Mr. King is alloyed with amusement and a sneaking admiration for Nadja's technique.

BitsaBOUTem.

FRED MacMURRAY, that tall, handsome lad who made such a hit in his portrayal of the newspaper reporter in "The Gilded Lily," has been set to make three successive pictures for Paramount. The titles are "Target," "Terror by Night," and "Guns." . . . HENRY WILCOXON, English actor, has closed up his flat in London and is ordering all of his furniture shipped to Hollywood, where he is establishing a permanent home. Mr. Wilcoxon has been chosen to play King Richard the Lion-Hearted in Cecil B. De Mille's latest production, "The Crusades."

Three famous dancers are working on pictures in the RKO Radio studio. The trio are FRED ASTAIRE, BILL "BOJANGLES" ROBINSON, and JAMES BARTON. . . . ANNE SHIRLEY, lovely 16 year old girl who achieved remarkable success in "Anne of Green Gables," will have the lead in "Spring in Paris," adapted from Anatole France's famous story, "The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard." . . . CARL BRISSON, star of "All the King's Horses," is leaving soon for an extended motor trip through England's countryside. He really is going to travel in style, for he is having a luxurious trailer built containing three rooms and every kind of convenience, including hot and cold water, and even a miniature cocktail bar and ice chest.

See you tomorrow.

Hollywood Happenings

One of the jobs confronting the guy who escorts Patricia Ellis home is rounding up the family pooch before Patricia retires. The dog always runs away after supper and has to be whistled at and cajoled to return to his post as watchdog for the night.

Style notes have Lola Lane wearing heelless sandals in an evening costume in "Murder on a Honeymoon."

Wide revers are featured on tailored coats and suits—Ginger Rogers has a spring suit of pale blue with wide revers of a marine blue.

Laughton Is Homesick for Native Blooms

Memories of English Gardens Stir Nostalgic Emotions in "Henry VIII."

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — [Special.] —Charles Laughton, English actor who first burst upon the American scene in De Mille's "Sign of the Cross," following with the English "Henry VIII.," and who has just completed a typically American rôle in "Ruggles of Red Gap" for Paramount, is an engaging person.

Interviewed in his dressing room at the studio on a rainy afternoon, Laughton's talk turned to—of all things!—wild flowers.

Like all true Englishmen, Laughton is a garden and outdoor enthusiast, and in no time flat your interviewer was answering questions about the wild flowers of California. Laughton is almost a complete catalog of what's in bloom at the moment in this land of sunshine and movies.

"Now if it weren't for that [adjective] wife of mine [Elsa Lancaster], who insists we stay in an apartment, I'd have a house and be having a garden of my own. California is simply ideal for a gardener, I think. When I recall those murky weeks I spent in London on my last stay there and remember how anxious I was to get back to this really heavenly climate——" and Laughton sighed happily, speculating how soon the rain would bring forth California's annual outdoor flower show of desert bloom.

Laughton Says He Can't Take Henry VIII. Seriously.

Leaving the flowers reluctantly, both interviewer and interviewed got down to the business in hand of talking pictures.

"Whatever gave you the inspiration of playing Henry VIII. humorously?" we inquired, recalling the Henry of our history days as a serious person with a bluebeard complex.

"It would be impossible for any one with a sense of humor to view such a much married man as anything but humorous," he cracked back. "The amazing and amusing things we found out in going over the material on Henry available in the museums and libraries before we started the picture gave us a new slant on Henry VIII. For instance, one thing I so wanted to include in the film—but we couldn't, lack of footage, you know—was Henry's early vanity over his legs. You remember the Field of the Cloth of Gold, in history—where the three mighty monarchs got together and the respective governments poured out millions of pounds setting up tents of real cloth of gold and all the other lavish displays? Well, all this interested Henry not at all—he was chiefly concerned as to who had the stronger legs—he or Francis I. of France. Both men fancied themselves as wrestlers and were bad at it, but Henry was earnestly interested and later became a fine wrestler. But at the meeting of the Field of Cloth of Gold everybody who entered Henry's pavilion had to feel his legs and pinch them and admire and give an opinion as to how they compared with Francis'."

Imitates Sea Birds with Earnest Realism.

The rain continued, and talk again turned to the woods and fields. Laughton revealed an amusing side of his personality and gave imitations of English sea birds that he remembers from a childhood spent near Flamborough Head in the north of England.

"There are chalk cliffs, quite sheer, going down to the sea for 900 feet. I used to lie with my head hanging over the top, dizzy from the height but enthralled with the domestic goings on of the sea birds that made a huge colony there, roosting on the ledges.

"There were the puffins, for one—quite swell out in front, who fussed about like old ladies knitting [he jumped out of his chair and did a lovely bit of mimicking for this part]; then another sort of bird with swallow tail coat outfits like small penguins, most human looking. They had the air of perpetually awaiting a taxi.

"Then the pelicans—haven't they a most amusing hunch to their shoulders and an odd way of flying? [Here he hunched up his shoulders and gave you a pelican to the life.] But won't this look silly in print, my talking about birds and flowers?" he inquired anxiously, tucking his feet under him in his plump, overstuffed chair.

But the subject was too much for him, for he remembered another sea bird and at imminent risk of appearing in a dubious light to the reading public he performed still another imitation that resembled an "Off to Buffalo" step of a vaudevillian, combined with the swooping wings of a sea fowl. Our only regret was that these imitations couldn't be preserved on celluloid.

Young Interviewer Brings on a Display of Temperament.

Again the subject of films descended on us both, and Laughton related an experience that he had with a cub interviewer that he fears has made him bear a reputation for temperament which he doesn't like.

"About the temperament, I don't mind that," he says. "Of course actors always have temperament—they have to. If they didn't they'd lack the very essence of what's needed to be an actor. But this affair—most unfortunate I assure you.

"I had a speech of four and a half pages in 'Ruggles of Red Gap' and had done it six times. Each time I 'went up' on it somewhere. As I was gathering my forces for another attack, out of the limbo on the edges of the set comes the voice of this cub behind me asking 'Mr. Laughton, which do you prefer, English or American pictures?' Well, I blew up all over the place—I defy you to do any differently under the circumstances."

Sensational New La Rumba, Step by Step

(Dance of the film "Rumba" as posed by Carole Lombard and Frank Veloz)

3 Man extends right foot backward, followed by left. Then right and left in double time. Step repeated as many times as desired.

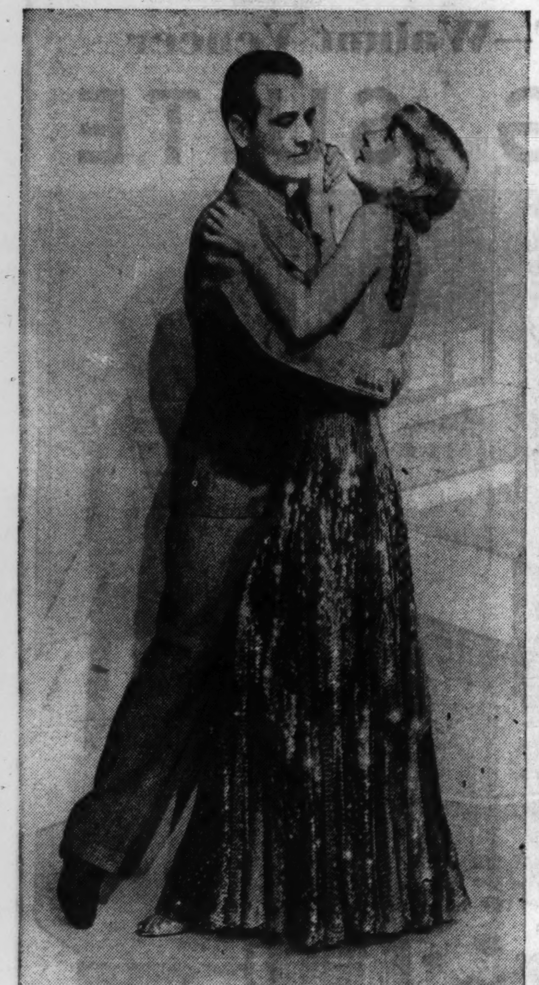
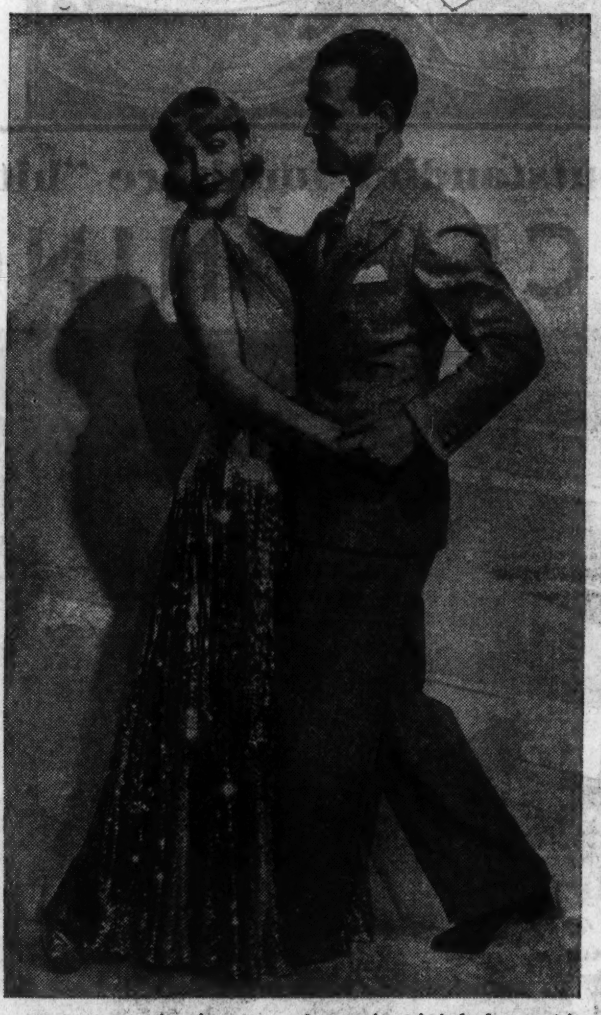
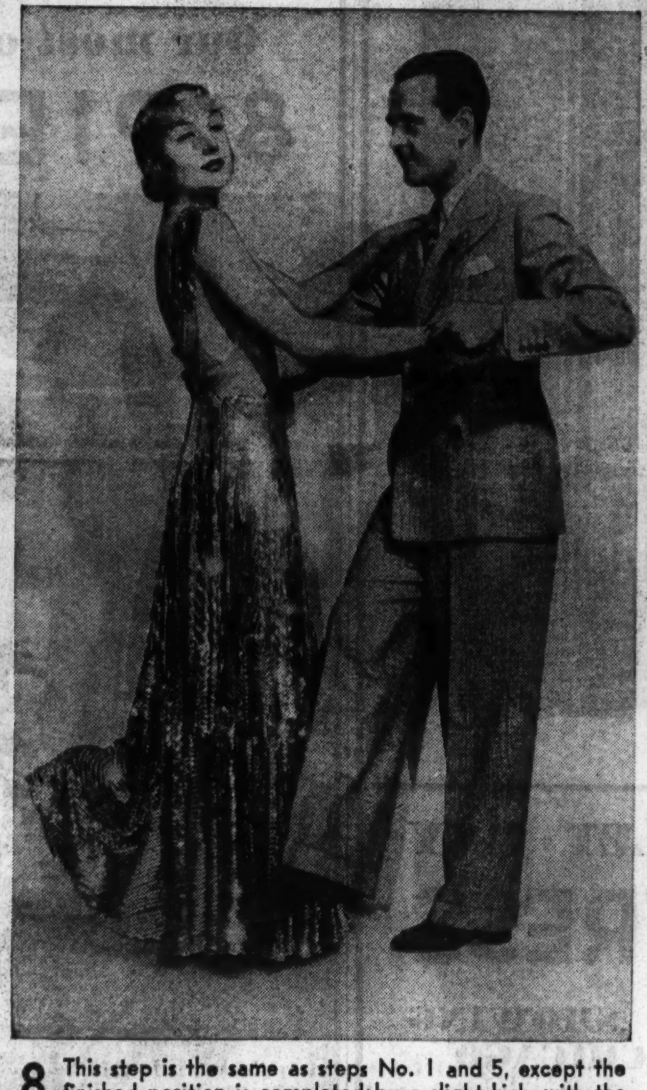
5 This begins the same as position No. 1 except that the man's right foot is extended and he continues the step in a circular motion.



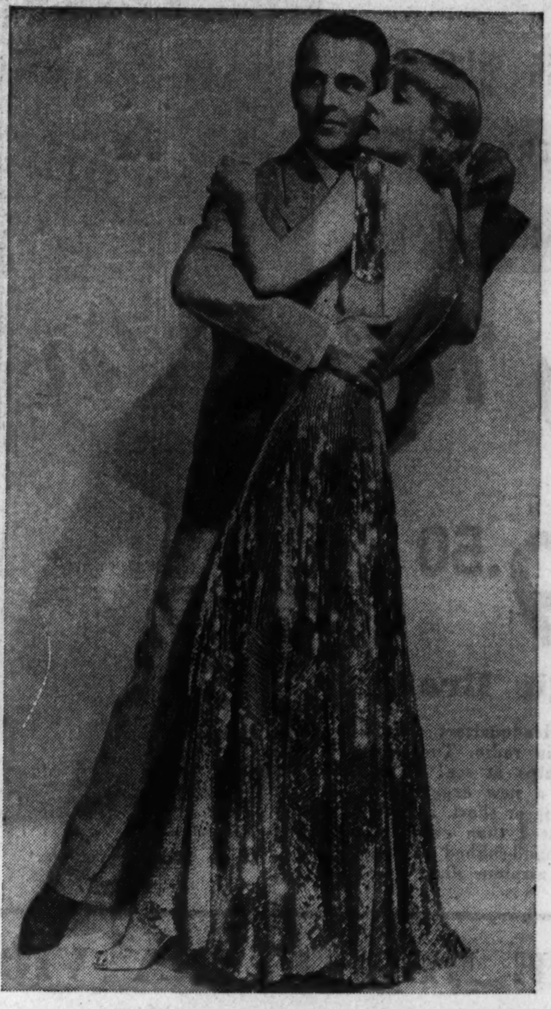
6 Girl is drawn forward by man, who bends her slightly to side, extending his right foot backward and making a complete circle, ending with both feet together.



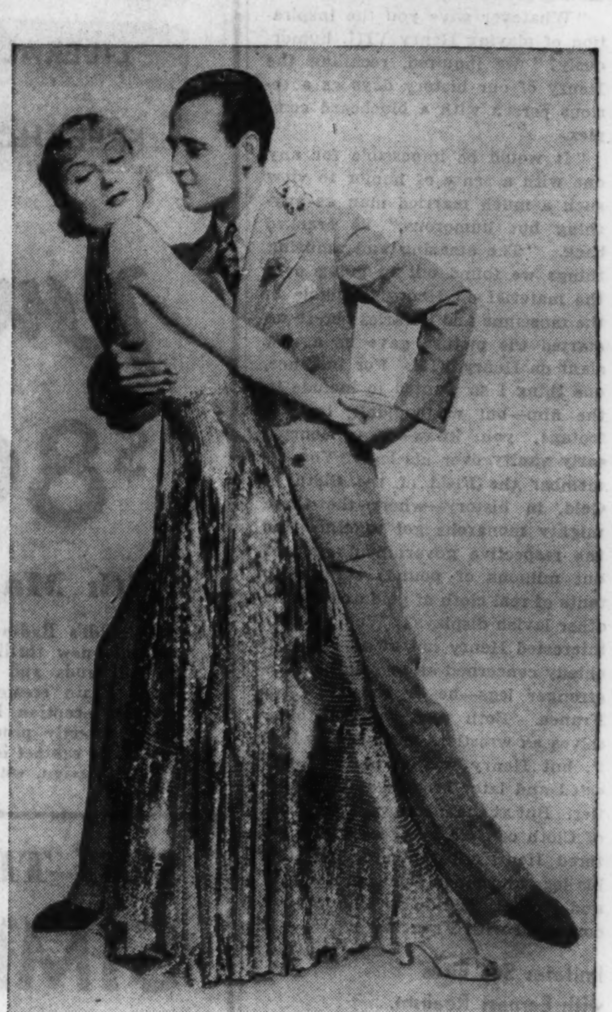
7 As man takes long step forward with left foot, girl steps backward with right foot. She follows with three quick staccato steps. Repeated going forward.



8 This step is the same as steps No. 1 and 5, except the finished position is completed by a slight kick, with the man's right foot forward to side and girl's left foot backward, as shown. Kick comes on fourth beat.

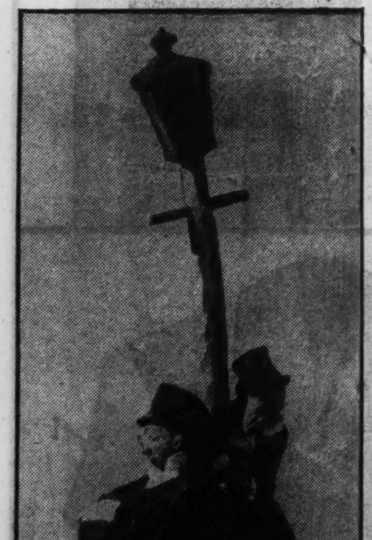


9 Man again draws girl closely to him, both stepping sideways, the man's right foot pivoting into a half turn. This is continued into a circular motion to the next position.

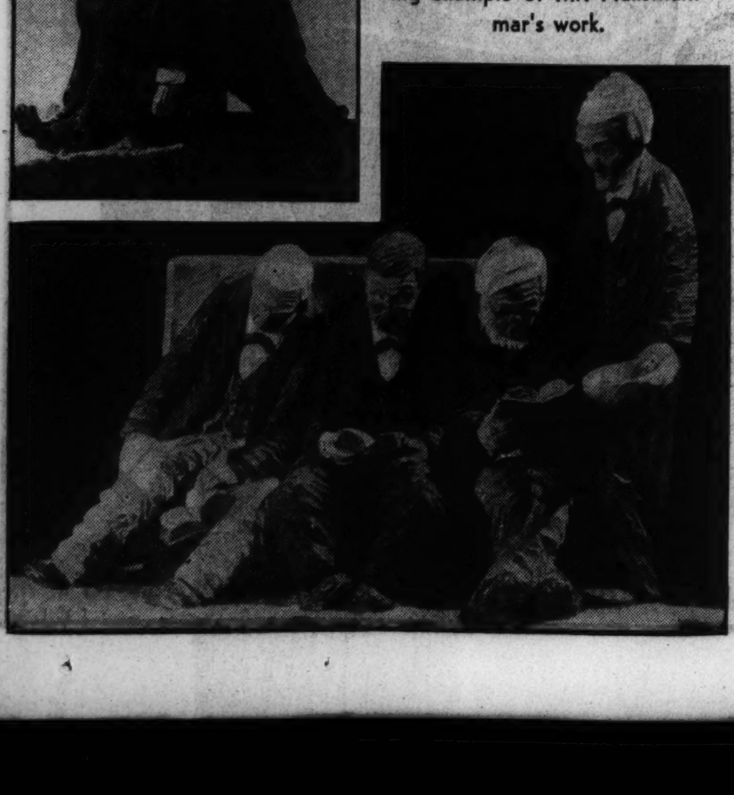


10 This step, in which the man bends the girl backward into a semi-cortez, finishes La Rumba routine, which may be resumed at the start or at any position desired to make sequence of graceful steps.

Curious Caricatures Carved in Wood



At left: Note how the effect of this humorous piece is heightened by the angle of the lamppost.



Below: "The Contribution." This piece is in the Cincinnati Art institute and is an outstanding example of Mr. Hallsthammar's work.

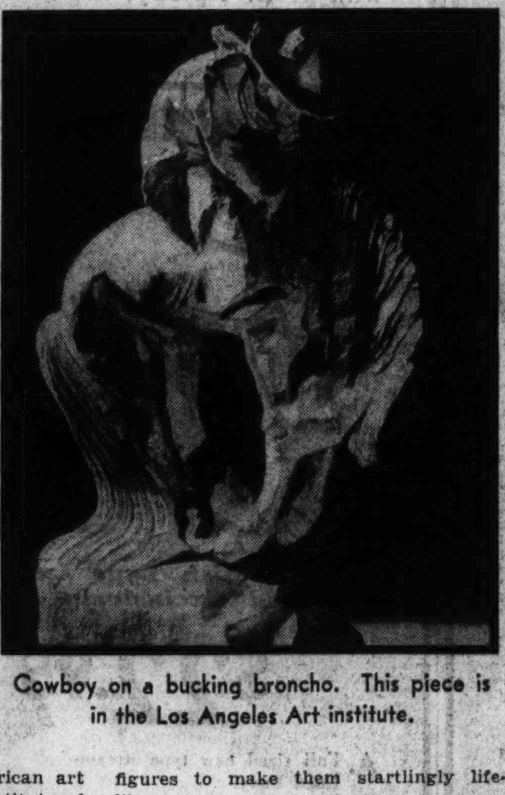
By
JOSEPH U. DUGAN

TEN years ago the wood-carving genius of Carl Hallsthammar was unknown. He had just arrived in the United States, an immigrant from Sweden. He had very little money, no friends, and was, of course, a stranger to the language and customs of a new land. But he had a talent and an ambition. For several years his talent remained unrecognized and he lived the uncomfortable life of a struggling artist. He sent photographs and samples of his work to art galleries and museums. The rejections outnumbered the acceptances by a large proportion.

⁂

Then overnight, it seemed to him, invitations to exhibit his work started coming in from all parts of the country. Today he has representative carvings in ten American art museums, including the Art Institute of Chicago. Also he has received commissions from many private individuals. As the accompanying photographs of some of Mr. Hallsthammar's carvings reveal, this artist is not so much a sculptor in wood as he is an accomplished caricaturist. His genius lies in his ability to catch lines of action and expression and to preserve these lines in his carved figures to make them startlingly lifelike.

His preference in choice of subjects leans apparently toward those in which humor is inherent. His point of view is illustrated by a remark he made recently about a popular fan dancer. "She would," he said, "make a charming studio model for an artist, but I would much rather carve figures of the boobs who watch her dance."



Cowboy on a bucking broncho. This piece is in the Los Angeles Art institute.

Above: Carl Hallsthammar at work in his studio. The subject is a peddler with his pack.

At right: Facial expressions and posture lines are emphasized in this striking carving, which is in the Los Angeles Art institute.

We Live in a Picture Minded Age

By WHITLEY NOBLE

THE world today as never before in its history is thoroughly picture conscious. People everywhere are looking at pictures. And everywhere those in the business and in the art of producing pictures are making better and better pictures for people to look at.

It is not the great art galleries, the famous public and private collections of paintings, and the like, that annually attract thousands, that in the main are responsible for this universal picture mindedness, but rather the daily presentation in newspapers, in magazines, and upon the screen of pictures beyond comparison superior in a number of ways to any produced in any previous period.

Modern miracles of photography and mechanized magic of printing have put pictures in a premier place. The present-day professional camera operator has become just as truly an artist as the wielder of palette and brush. Pictures that seem to leap at you from the page of print or draw you closer in rapt study contain all elements of composition that the critic or the connoisseur finds on the painted canvas.

This relatively new profession (subtly engraving its creations on the public mind within most recent years) of art photography has become a big business wherever newspapers and magazines are composed and printed. The annual turnover in this business in this country alone amounts to many millions of dollars.

≈

A rich field for the business man-artist of the camera is advertising. Pictures of the type reproduced upon this page are what have helped largely to make the public picture minded. Each, as can be seen, presents its own appeal. It may be startling action, beauty, style, humor—but whatever it is, the artist puts his whole art into it. Clients with something to sell or with a message to convey to the public foot the bills. In many cases these are no small bills, for art photography, like everything else today that is valuable, costs in proportion to its value.

The old masters were compelled to barter their canvases for charcoal and bread because the public of their day had no appreciation of art. It was only after people began to see real beauty in them that paintings took the status of masterpieces and commanded fair prices. According to the Art Institute of Chicago, the great Rembrandt died bankrupt; a painting by Vermeer which now hangs in the Louvre originally sold for 28 florins; Gainsborough painted heads at five guineas each; and Murillo hawked his canvases at the weekly fair at Feria. Works by these and many others now are almost priceless.

The world, as previously pointed out, is picture conscious. Art of any kind, whether it be paintings in oils or water colors or realistic photography, commands a price in keeping with its value.

The men at the top in art photography prefer to be called photographic illustrators rather than commercial artists. Their problems are many, comparing in a way with the problems of the motion picture studio. They often are compelled to produce surprising results in a very limited space of time. There always are the matters of location, models, props, lighting effects, and other accessories essential to first class work. Producing the right picture, therefore, means a great deal more than merely clicking the shutter of a camera. It is an assignment frequently involving the efforts of a number of experts in various subjects and the expenditure of time and money. No wonder the photographic illustration may cost the advertising client a sum in the hundreds of dollars.

As the result of skilful photography, backed by preparation in minute detail, we see here the parachute jumper at the critical moment in his plunge to earth. We behold here a closeup of cycle policemen bearing down on a motorist. We look at beautiful women in artistic poses, at humorous and appealing subjects, and so on, all modern compositions of the highest order.

Seven Hard Years, from Boston to Yorktown

Story of Washington's Career as General

and leave him only a harassed rebel with a price on his head. But Washington possessed that courage. He put himself body and soul into the service of liberty—liberty of action for the colonies, for it is not believed that he foresaw national independence for America when he rode out of Philadelphia on June 21, 1775, to command the colonial farmers who were besieging the British redcoats in Boston town.

It was a sacrifice—or so it appeared at the time—for Washington to abandon the comfortable if not luxurious life he enjoyed at Mount Vernon, where nature smiled on his wide and fertile fields and where everyone from his overseer to his most humble pickaninny jumped to obey his slightest wish, to take up the career of an unappreciated leader of revolutionaries—a career that was to last through more than seven long years of hardship. What Washington gave up for the sake of liberty is strikingly illustrated in the contrasting pictures on page one—beautiful Mount Vernon, on one hand, the stately and dignified symbol of the gentleman planter's prestige, and, on the other hand, the miserable existence of hungry soldiers in winter quarters at Valley Forge. It is said of General Washington that he invariably refused, when the situation was darkest, to accept anything better than the fare provided for his common soldiers.

* * *

Washington, it is the opinion of those who have studied his career, was not looking for glory or reward. He was a modest man. Even when he was selected to command the American forces he made it plain to those about him that he considered himself unequal to a task so great. The part he actually expected to play in the conflict with the British was as a leader of Virginian troops only. He thought there were others better fitted for the supreme command. That he was entirely unselfish in his service of freedom was shown in his employment of his own private funds at times to feed and equip his soldiers and in his refusal to accept pay for his difficult and dangerous labor as a general. That unselfishness was demonstrated later when he refused a crown which could have been his, and still later when he refused to accept a salary as President of the new United States.

The farmer from Mount Vernon, the highly respected Colonel Washington of the French and Indian troubles, entered the Revolutionary war with something more than a local reputation for military ability. His exploits had been mentioned even in England. His masterful extrication of the survivors of Braddock's bloody defeat and his occupation of Fort Duquesne were remembered by many when the British chose to turn their guns on the men who had marched shoulder to shoulder with them against the French. Yet Washington, in his own estimation, was still a colonial colonel. How quickly he was to prove his skill as a military strategist! In the same manner that Napoleon forced the evacuation of Toulon in 1793—but seventeen years before the Corsican's notable exploit—he compelled the British to leave Boston. With artillery in the main seized by an expedition sent to Fort Ticonderoga and Crown Point he armed Dorchester Heights, a lofty bit of ground overlooking Boston. The American guns dominated the harbor and the British shipping within, and the redcoats moved out, retiring to Halifax, to leave the city to be occupied by Washington's army on St. Patrick's day, 1776.

* * *

No sooner were the Americans in possession of Boston than Washington anticipated the next move of the British. He figured that the English generals, with eyes for pretty girls and a craving for society, wine, and idleness, would seek to establish themselves in New York. Leaving five regiments in Boston, he hurried away to New York, arriving there with his troops on April 15, 1776, shortly before Gen. Sir William Howe with a large force debarked on Staten Island. The subsequent operations of the American forces about New York and the British success at the battle of Long Island on Aug. 27 are overshadowed by the skill displayed by Washington in removing his army from a dangerous position on Long Island on Aug. 29. This withdrawal, which was by water, is said by military experts never to have been surpassed in execution, not even by the retirement of the British from Gallipoli in the World war.

* * *

It was only after General Washington came to realize that his best chances for ultimate victory lay in retreating and enticing the enemy away from their bases, scattering them by misinformation placed in their hands or by other ruses, and defeating them by groups, that he began to pile up notable victories. His famous retreat across New Jersey after the British had taken Fort Washington on Nov. 16, 1776, his escape across the Delaware, and his return across the same historic river on Christmas night, 1776, to strike the Hessians at Trenton with such appalling ferocity on Dec. 26, were feats never to be forgotten. Washington as a military leader was as cunning as a fox, and, when the time was ripe, as bold as a wounded leopard. How he left his campfires burning to deceive the enemy, slipped around them, and struck a demoralizing blow at a British force at the battle of Princeton on Jan. 3, 1777, was only one of many examples of outwitting the foe. It might be instructive to point out here that one of General Washington's strongest allies was the bland stupidity of the British generals. From the distance of more than 150 years it seems as though almost anyone could have outgeneraled most of the foolish fellows that fat King George sent over here to direct the war against the Americans. But that is only a surmise on the part of one who makes no pretenses at understanding military tactics. Washington undoubtedly time and time again faced grave hazards in executing moves to outwit the enemy.

History tells us that he was not only a brave leader in the field and resourceful at planning military moves, but that he excelled all others in the country at the time in directing espionage. He was informed through his operators as to every move contemplated by the British, and on more than one occasion prepared messages with the design that they should fall into the hands of the enemy. Thus it was that when the British thought they were obtaining important information as to the whereabouts and plans of the Americans they were only being outwitted by their superior foe. Tricks of a nature such as that might be considered somewhat moth-eaten in modern warfare, but in Washington's day they surely must have borne some suggestion of originality.

* * *

It was little that the British were able to keep from Washington. Their programs almost always were known in advance by the American general. When Sir William Howe was swinging his army in a sweeping movement southwest of Philadelphia, Washington divined his plan and met the British attack on the banks of the Brandywine, Sept. 11, 1777, from entrenched positions. Only the fact that John Sullivan, American right wing commander, got confused by conflicting intelligence turned what might have been a drawn battle or a possible victory for the Americans into a retirement by Washington. The British occupied Philadelphia on Sept. 25 as a result of that encounter. Rarely did one of Washington's carefully worked out surprises fail, as it did at the battle of Germantown on Oct. 7, 1777, when, because of circumstances beyond the control of the American commander, the redcoats were able to hurl back the attacking colonials. After the repulse at Germantown the Americans went into winter quarters at Valley Forge, weary, hungry, and with nothing left with which to carry on except the will to win.

One of his most admirable traits, and one that was of great assistance to him in critical moments, was Washington's calmness. When all others about him were highly excited he remained cool and thoughtful. At the battle of Monmouth Courthouse, June 28, 1778, it was Washington that saved the day. Despite the disorderly retreat of Maj. Gen. Charles Lee's forces before the army of Sir Henry Clinton, Washington reorganized his battle line and withstood the British attempts to dislodge his army.

going when weaker men would have failed. He was almost continuously in the saddle when his troops were afield. More than one of his horses dropped under him or was led away exhausted, but still the American commander rode on. He was a sizable burden for any charger, no matter how big and strong, and so full of strength and life was he that even at the age of 64 he delighted in dancing the courtly dances of his day until the small hours of the morning.

From lessons learned early in his military career Washington knew that it would be disastrous to permit his army to be bottled up within a city or town or in any location from which he could not extricate it. Therefore wherever he camped he always maintained open an avenue of retreat. The British frequently fell into traps of the nature described above.

* * *

Washington moved with his army, and with few exceptions was in the van when there was fighting. That was before the time when generals dwelt in remote headquarters and directed operations from afar, though Washington as commander in chief actually did have charge of the movements of the armies other than the one with which he fought.

He had to contend with political plots to retire him and with generals who were insubordinate, although, on the other hand, he had the assistance of a number of very efficient leaders, among them the foreigners, Steuben, the disciplinarian and organizer; Lafayette, the brilliant young nobleman, and others. Perhaps the most capable, next to Washington, of all the American leaders was Gen. Nathanael Greene, who, like his chief, excelled in dividing, eluding, and tiring his opponents by long marches and in actual conflict forcing them to pay for a temporary advantage a price that they could not afford.

Of all the British generals who opposed Washington, history informs us that Charles Cornwallis Cornwallis was the best, though it was Lord Cornwallis who finally permitted himself to be trapped by the combined armies of Washington and the French allies under Rochambeau. It was on Oct. 19, 1781, that Cornwallis capitulated after a siege of 21 days. His surrender at Yorktown virtually ended the war and opened the way to American independence, though the final treaty of peace was not signed until Sept. 3, 1783, and the British did not evacuate New York until Nov. 25 of the same year. Washington was active as commander in chief until the last of the redcoats had departed. He resigned his commission at Annapolis two days before Christmas, 1783.

Research Gives Rubber a World Career

By Thomas M. Beck

WHEN the Spanish conquistadores first descended upon South America in their search for gold they found the benighted natives engaging in a strange practice. These care-free aborigines would gash the bark of a certain tree and collect a milky sap, which, after drying over a fire, formed a dark, gummy mass. The Indians molded this into balls, which they joyously tossed at one another or bounced on the ground.

It probably never occurred to the Spaniards that the gummy material would some day be worth more than all the gold on the continent.

This substance was given its English name, as well as its first practical use, by an English minister named Joseph Priestley in the latter part of the eighteenth century. Priestley, who is best remembered as the discoverer of oxygen, also discovered that this black gum could be used to rub out pencil marks, and therefore suggested that it be called India rubber. A much more extensive use was found some years later when one Charles MacIntosh made his name a part of our language by inventing rubber-coated fabrics for use on rainy days.

Unfortunately, rubber had a number of serious failings in those early days. It decayed quickly. It froze solid on cold days and melted on hot, and smelled dreadfully throughout the year. These difficulties were solved to a considerable extent by an accidental discovery made by an American, Charles Goodyear, in the year 1838.

Goodyear had bought the rights to a process for improving rubber by mixing it with sulphur. Apparently it had not been a very shrewd purchase on his part, as the finished product was little better than the crude rubber. But one day, when mixing up a batch of rubber and sulphur, he unintentionally spilled some of the mixture on a hot stove lid. After scraping the stuff off he found that the heat had converted it into a substance that was more elastic, more resistant to ageing, less sticky, and less affected by temperature than crude rubber. The discovery of this process, known as vulcanization, marks the real beginning of the rubber industry.

Thirty years ago most of the world's rubber came from trees growing wild in African and Brazilian jungles. But this wild rubber was too limited in amount and uncertain in quality to satisfy the requirements of a world that was just beginning to ride on tires. So some shrewd Englishmen started the artificial cultivation of the South American rubber tree in the far east. Today almost all rubber is plantation grown, most of it coming from the British or Dutch East Indies.

The sap of the rubber tree, known as latex, looks like milk. It contains about 30 per cent of rubber, suspended in the form of microscopic particles, much as is the butter fat in cream. Like milk, the latex will spoil on standing and so must be worked into rubber as soon as possible. This process is no longer carried out by the tedious method of evaporating the latex over a smoky fire. Instead, acetic acid is added to the latex, throwing out the rubber as a white, sticky clot. The rubber is then pressed into slabs and dried and is ready for shipment to the manufacturer.

* * *

Small amounts of latex, preserved with chemicals, are shipped directly to manufacturers for an interesting use. The rubber particles in the latex carry a very small negative electrical charge. By applying a direct current to the liquid a coating of rubber may be electroplated upon any desired surface.

The crude rubber, when in the hands of the manufacturer, undergoes varying chemical treatments, depending upon the use for which it is intended. These different treatments are fundamentally the same, however; they all consist of mixing the rubber thoroughly with vulcanizers, accelerators, anti-oxidants, and fillers, and then subjecting the mixture to carefully controled heat and pressure treatment.

Goodyear's original vulcanizer, sulphur, is still the best known substance for this purpose, although at the present time it usually is mixed with certain assistant vulcanizers, notably zinc oxide. Vulcanization is still as mysterious a reaction as it was in Goodyear's day. The chemists know that sulphur and heat change rubber from a soft, sticky, plastic gum into a firm, flexible, and elastic solid; but if asked to explain the nature of the reaction between the rubber and sulphur molecules they would have to admit a pretty thorough ignorance.

Just as vulcanization made rubber usable, accelerators have made it cheap. Accelerators are certain chemicals, usually organic nitrogen-containing compounds, which are added to the rubber in small amounts and reduce the time of vulcanization from a matter of days to a matter of hours. The saving to the manufacturer in plant equipment is obvious. Unfortunately, the scientists also know nothing of their mode of action. A well known chemist once defined accelerators as substances that in some unknown manner speed up a reaction about which nothing is known. Which is about as accurate a definition as the subject ever received.

Anti-oxidants are added to increase the life of the finished rubber. They are compounds, usually good reducing agents, which when present in very small amounts inhibit the slow oxidation of the rubber by the air. The fillers are inert substances that are used in widely varying amounts to increase such properties as strength and resistance to abrasion.

* * *

Chemically speaking, rubber consists of hydrocarbon molecules arranged in a faintly crystaline manner. The formula of the material is $(C_5H_8)n$, where n is some number too large to be measured by any of the present methods of chemistry. The ratio of five carbons to eight hydrogens is a surprisingly common one in naturally occurring products, indicating the existence of some fundamental natural building stone for such products. In addition to rubber, such varied compounds as turpentine, camphor, and vitamin A show this same ratio.

The first attack on the chemical nature of rubber was made by an Englishman named Williams in 1860. He distilled the material and obtained a colorless volatile oil which he called isoprene and which had the formula C_5H_8. In 1878 Bouchardet, a French investigator, found that isoprene could be changed into a rubberlike material by treatment with hydrochloric acid. A few years later an English chemist named Tilden prepared isoprene by passing the vapor of turpentine $(C_{10}H_{16})$ through a hot tube. He then treated this isoprene with nitrosyl chloride and got rubber. Although the method was not commercially practical, it was the first actual synthesis of rubber.

* * *

In 1908, when the shortage of wild rubber was threatening the world with a rubber famine, both Great Britain and Germany established separate research organizations to find methods of making synthetic rubber. The principal result of this joint effort was one of the most disgraceful quarrels that ever shocked the scientific world. Both parties discovered that isoprene could be changed into rubber by contact with metallic sodium, and the two patent applications were filed almost simultaneously.

Although the British had got theirs filed a little the earlier, the Germans claimed priority, saying they had been delayed in getting to the patent office. The British replied that science, like horse racing, pays off on the one that is ahead at the finish, and that, anyway, the German discovery did not count because it was accidental. The subtle distinction implied in this last argument, while meaningless to laymen, is important to scientists. The Germans then stated that the British work showed lack of scientific thoroughness. Thereupon the British hinted that the Germans were faking their laboratory records; and the Germans came right back with a hint that the British were planting spies in German laboratories.

But it turned out that the whole affair had not been worth fighting over. Although Harries, a German chemist, had proudly exhibited a tire made of synthetic rubber at a scientific meeting in 1912, when the World war came the Germans were not able to produce this rubber, although they were in desperate need of it. It seems that while they could convert isoprene to rubber all right, they could not make the isoprene cheaply enough. Toward the end of the war they were making a markedly inferior substitute rubber called methyl rubber from an isoprenelike substance known as dimethyl butadiene, which they made in a very roundabout method from starch. Unfortunately, they could not make much of the stuff, because they needed the starch almost as badly as the rubber.

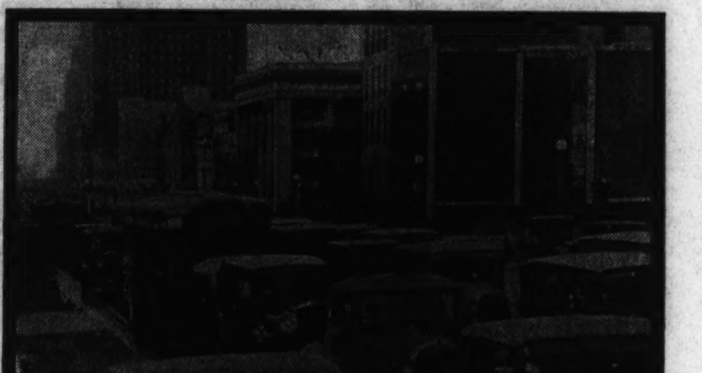
Since the development of rubber plantations there has not been much reason to develop a synthetic rubber. It is hardly likely that a chemical factory will be able to compete with a tropical plantation as a source of this material for some time to come. Nevertheless there has been developed in this country during the last few years an interesting substitute rubber. It is not the same as rubber, for it is not made from isoprene, but from a synthetic chlorine-containing compound known as chloroprene (C_4H_5Cl). In many respects it is equal or superior to rubber, but its price, being about four times as high, prevents extensive use of it.

But if war should come, and a blockade, the United States would not have to worry about a disastrous rubber shortage, as did Germany. And since its raw materials, lime, coke, and salt, are so inexpensive, perhaps some day this artificial rubber can be made cheaply enough to compete with the natural product. And then the rubber tree, like the fire horse or the bustle, will have to be retired on a pension.



Automobile trafic flows in a steady, smooth stream through city streets. Rubber in tires and even in paving expedites the movement of the cars.

Are there any simple tests that could be made to determine a genuine diamond from an imitation?—G. H. R., Milwaukee, Wis.

The traditional test of seeing whether or not it will scratch glass is not to be recommended. Valuable diamonds have been damaged by this method. Perhaps the simplest method is that of measuring the specific gravity by weighing the stone in air and also suspended in water. The specific gravity is the weight in air divided by the difference between the weights in air and in water. For a diamond it should be about 3.51. Since the average man does not have access to apparatus for such delicate measurements, perhaps the simplest method of all would be to take the stone to a competent jeweler.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Castledyne at Jerricks Is Followed by a Sensational Murder Charge

THE STORY TO DATE

Zella Blunt is warned by her older second cousin, John Pomiret, against Capt. Broke Castledyne, who has been escorting Zella about London. John and Zella are due to inherit jointly the palatial mansion called Jerricks, just outside London. It is owned by their maiden aunt, Lady Jane Blunt. Her vast wealth, however, will be left to whom she likes. She disapproves of Zella, whom John secretly adores. John has heard something shady about Capt. Castledyne's war record. Also, he is married to a wealthy woman years older than himself. Unaware that Castledyne is a married man, Lady Jane invites him to a house party at Jerricks. When she discovers the truth she sends, on the advice of her old friend, Lord Alfred, an invitation to Mrs. Castledyne, who accepts, much to the chagrin of her husband and Zella Blunt. At the house party Mrs. Castledyne is taken ill. Her husband has a prescription filled. Zella takes the medicine up to Mrs. Castledyne's maid, Fulmer. Next morning Mrs. Castledyne is found dead in bed.

INSTALMENT VI.

LORD ALFRED was very much liked by the servants at Jerricks. Though known to be, for his rank, extremely poor, he was a generous gentleman who gave lavish tips and was always ready with his joke. As he had no valet, Trimley had always valeted him, and the last year or two with a touch of tenderness added, for Lord Alfred, though he wouldn't admit it, was getting to be a very old gentleman indeed.

Lady Jane had her tray breakfast, and then again the door opened and Capt. Castledyne, looking haggard, as well he might do, and with shadows around his eyes, came into the room. He appeared years older than he had done last Tuesday at the Kent house ball, said Lady Jane to herself.

"Will you allow me to telephone to several of Agnes' relations?" he asked in a low voice.

And then he made a mistake: "I'm afraid I shall have to get through two or three very long distance calls. Of course, I will ascertain the cost and settle with Trimley."

She put up her hand with a haughty gesture. "I beg you will do nothing of the kind, Capt. Castledyne."

"Thank you. Thank you very much. I hardly know what I am saying," he murmured.

So she forgave him that peculiar suggestion.

He was turning toward the door when she exclaimed: "One moment, Capt. Castledyne—has Dr. Holland gone?"

"No, he is still talking to my wife's maid. And there's so little to be said that I can't think why he is still upstairs. But, though he's a most excellent doctor and was a good and faithful friend to my poor wife, Dr. Holland has one fault. He is somewhat garrulous."

She heard the captain go into the telephone box, which had been the final concession she had made to modern days and which had been erected close to her own sitting room.

* * *

WITH a brisk "May I come in?" Dr. Holland appeared. "I'm good at house geography, and I felt sure this was the delightful room in which I first had the pleasure of seeing you, Lady Jane!"

But, though the tone was almost jaunty, she saw that the old physician looked worried.

To her astonishment he observed: "I am sorry to say that Mrs. Castledyne's maid, a woman named Mary Fulmer, may be going to cause us a little trouble."

"Trouble? What sort of trouble, Dr. Holland?"

The old man got up from the comfortable armchair into which he had sunk and looked around the room as if to make sure they were alone. Then he glanced toward a glass door leading into a conservatory now filled with flowering shrubs. It was empty.

"The woman is convinced, and nothing will move her—I've done my best—that her mistress did not die a natural death."

Lady Jane felt bewildered. "Does she think Mrs. Castledyne took something in order to destroy herself?"

"O, no; nothing of that sort at all."

"Did she take a sleeping draft?"

The old man shook his head. "Fulmer believes—as I said just now, she is suffering under a complete delusion—that—I hardly like to tell you what it is she believes, Lady Jane."

He waited a moment. "What she believes is that somebody poisoned Mrs. Castledyne."

"D'you mean she thinks——?" Then she, too, stopped.

As he said nothing, she went on in a low voice. "Can she—is it conceivable that she suspects Capt. Castledyne?"

He put up his hand quickly. "O, dear, no! She's very fond of the captain and she knows how very well they got on together."

"Then whom does she suspect?"

"Someone in this house. She won't say who."

Lady Jane looked at the speaker as if she thought he had suddenly taken leave of his senses.

"But, Dr. Holland! What a preposterous, ridiculous idea! In fact, but for the sadness of it, one would say a ludicrous idea."

Lady Jane had an angry glint in her still bright eyes, for she felt that this hysterical lady's maid was casting an aspersion on her respectable household.

In fact, she exclaimed: "All my servants—with the exception of two young undermaids, and they have been here over a year—have been with me years and years! The idea that any one of them——"

"I don't think Fulmer suspects anyone connected with your household, Lady Jane."

"D'you mean she thinks that one of my guests could have poisoned her mistress? Really, Dr. Holland!"

Then all at once, for she saw that he looked anxious and exceedingly worried: "I suppose what Mrs. Castledyne's maid desires should take place is a post-mortem?"

"Of course she is set on a post-mortem. But what she wants should take place now is to have the police sent for."

"The police!"

Lady Jane, not for the first time, regretted she was not a man. A few round oaths would have relieved her.

A sad, troubled, busy morning followed. Lady Jane herself saw off each of her guests, and for once she heartily blessed the motor car. Thanks to there being so many motors, she was able to empty the house in little more than an hour. There was no tiresome sending to the station, as in the old days. The very few who had no cars bundled themselves in with those who had.

Zella looked pale and subdued, and alone of all those who left Jerricks this morning she made no allusion to what had happened. This was a relief to Lady Jane. "I should like you to come back for a few days a little later on if you can spare the time, Zella," she said kindly. And Zella answered, "Of course I'll come back, Aunt Jane, any time you like."

* * *

THE parting with Capt. Castledyne was brief—brief and kindly—and in her hard way she was touched by the great change she saw in him. When he had first seen her this morning he had looked grave and awed rather than grief-stricken, but now he looked very unhappy.

Then came a curious interlude which Lady Jane remembered vividly for the rest of her life. Her maid, Bolton, intercepted her with: "Fulmer would like to see your ladyship. I mean Mrs. Castledyne's maid, my lady."

Remembering Dr. Holland's firm words, she replied at once: "I feel for the poor soul very much, Bolton. I know that she was with Mrs. Castledyne for nearer thirty than twenty years. But I don't feel up to seeing a stranger. Will you tell her that I hope she will come and see me a little later on, but that I cannot see her this morning?"

There came a time when Lady Jane Blunt asked herself with much agony of spirit whether she had been unwise in not seeing this foolish, hysterical, and, yes, dangerous woman. But Lord Alfred, when she had spoken to him of the matter, comforted her with his strong good sense. "You could have done nothing!" he had exclaimed. "It would have been odious for you, my dear Jane, perfectly odious! Besides," he had added inconsequently, "I don't suppose she'd have said anything to you. She was saving it up, wicked, stupid——" and then under his breath he added a very unpleasant word.

But the future was mercifully hidden from the mistress of splendid, stately Jerricks during that long morning, and she felt comparatively serene when she went back to the pile of tiresome letters which, after all, had to be answered. It was characteristic of the writer that she made no allusion to what had just happened excepting in one letter to a very old friend and contemporary named Mrs. Arbuthnot who was coming to stay with her in two or three days. To that lady she did briefly write what had happened, ending with:

> I think, dear Elsie, it will be quite all right for you to come Thursday if that will suit you.

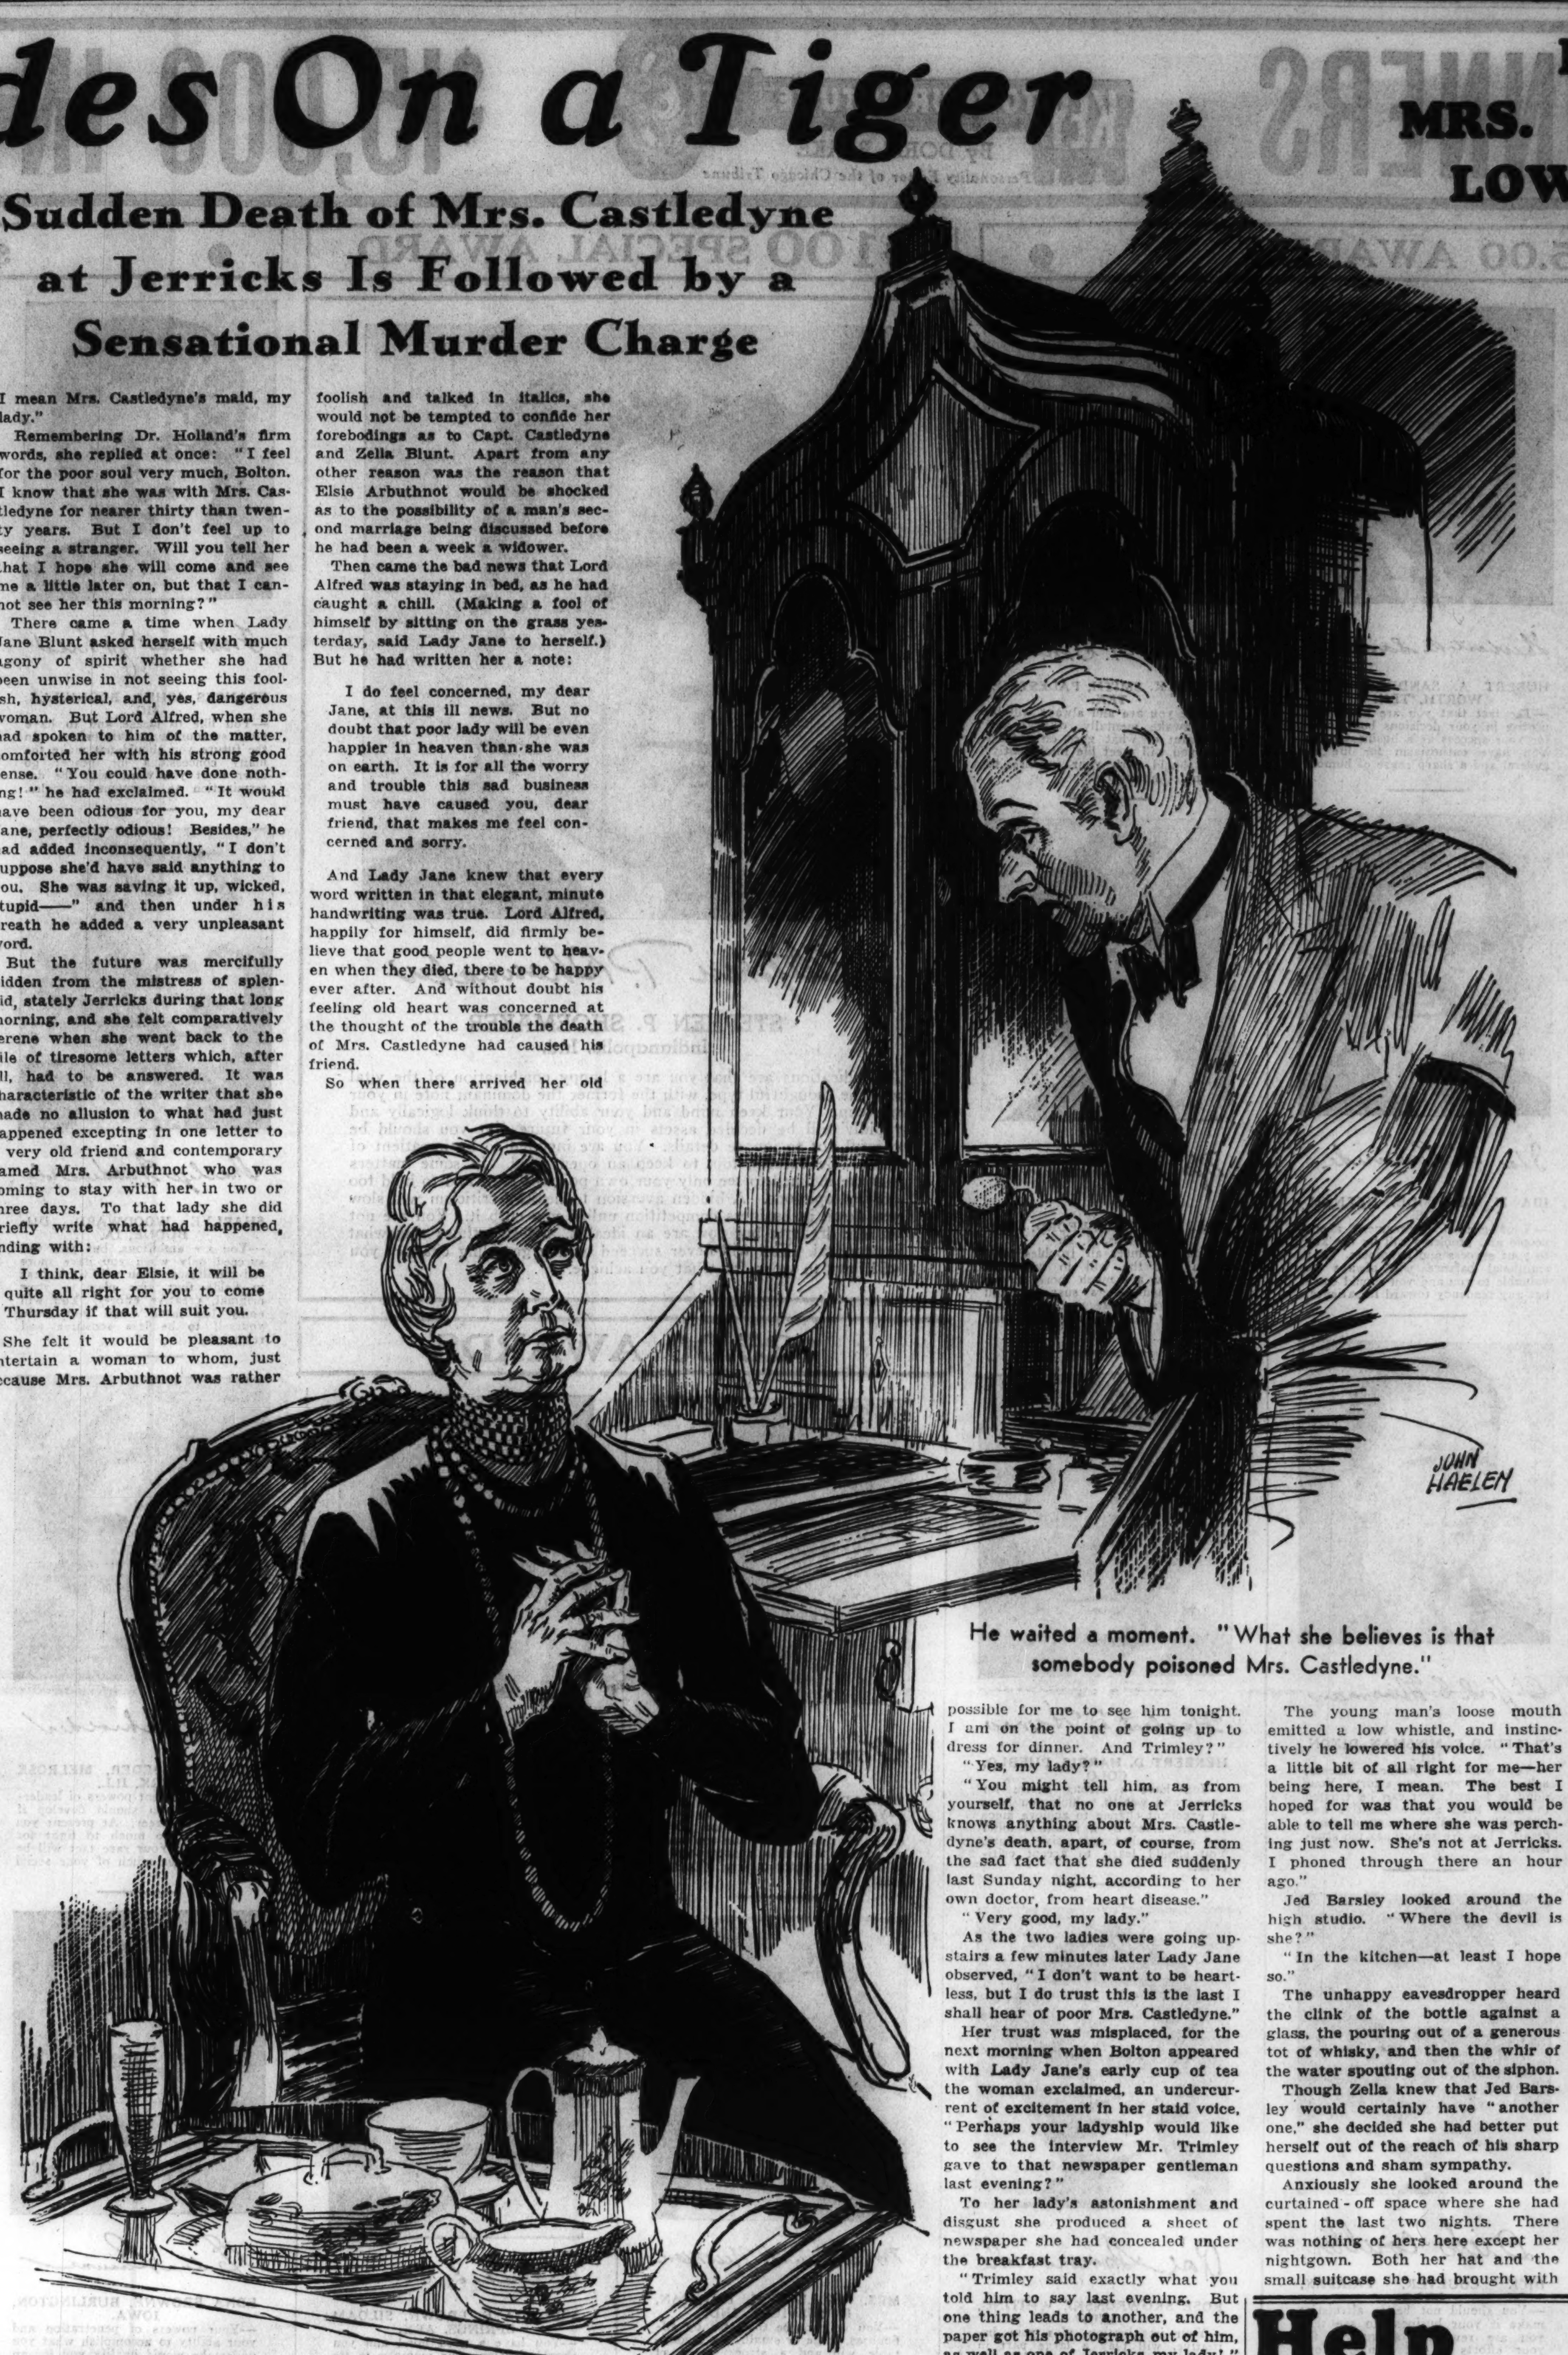
She felt it would be pleasant to entertain a woman to whom, just because Mrs. Arbuthnot was rather foolish and talked in italics, she would not be tempted to confide her forebodings as to Capt. Castledyne and Zella Blunt. Apart from any other reason was the reason that Elsie Arbuthnot would be shocked as to the possibility of a man's second marriage being discussed before he had been a week a widower.

Then came the bad news that Lord Alfred was staying in bed, as he had caught a chill. (Making a fool of himself by sitting on the grass yesterday, said Lady Jane to herself.) But he had written her a note:

> I do feel concerned, my dear Jane, at this ill news. But no doubt that poor lady will be even happier in heaven than she was on earth. It is for all the worry and trouble this sad business must have caused you, dear friend, that makes me feel concerned and sorry.

And Lady Jane knew that every word written in that elegant, minute handwriting was true. Lord Alfred, happily for himself, did firmly believe that good people went to heaven when they died, there to be happy ever after. And without doubt his feeling old heart was concerned at the thought of the trouble the death of Mrs. Castledyne had caused his friend.

So when there arrived her old friend, Mrs. Arbuthnot, she felt very pleased indeed.



He waited a moment. "What she believes is that somebody poisoned Mrs. Castledyne."

Being the manner of women they both were, after the guest had uttered two or three words of sympathy they settled down as if the tragedy of last Sunday night had not taken place.

But just as they were going up to dress for dinner the visitor took up an evening paper which had been brought in and silently laid down on a low, wide stool where all the dailies and weeklies were always laid out neatly in the delightful drawing room which was only used when there were visitors at Jerricks.

"May I take this paper upstairs, dear Jane?"

"Of course you may. I don't suppose there is anything in it."

Mrs. Arbuthnot glanced at the paper, and then she gave a little gasp.

"My dear Jane—listen to this! Or would you rather read it yourself?"

"Please read it to me. I left my spectacles in my sitting room," said Lady Jane sharply.

> Mrs. Castledyne, whose death took place very suddenly in the course of last Sunday night at Jerricks, the famous country house belonging to Lady Jane Blunt, was to have been buried today in the family vault at Hythe. Just as the coffin was leaving the house the funeral was stopped by the Hampstead coroner's order. It is understood that a post-mortem will take place, followed by an inquest.

Then the reader said hesitatingly: "I don't think what follows would interest you, Jane. Besides, it's twenty to eight."

"Show me the paper," commanded Lady Jane.

She screwed up her eyes, and then she saw that, as a matter of fact, there was a good deal more there, including an interview with Mrs. Castledyne's butler.

In that interview the manservant spoke with respect and appreciation of his late employer's kindness of nature, and he also paid a tribute to his master, Capt. Castledyne.

There was one paragraph which caused Lady Jane to wince inwardly:

> "We were all surprised when Mrs. Castledyne gave out that she was going last Saturday to Jerricks to stay with Lady Jane Blunt. But Capt. Castledyne was already staying there, and we knew he was always anxious that Mrs. Castledyne should go out more into society than she cared to do. According to Miss Fulmer, her maid, our poor lady, it appears, wasn't really well on Sunday, though not ill enough to see a doctor."

"Imagine a butler giving information to the papers about a death in the family! If I were Capt. Castledyne I should reprimand that man severely!" exclaimed Mrs. Arbuthnot.

Lady Jane laughed. "I certainly can't imagine Trimley doing such a thing."

"I should think not."

And then Trimley came in, his fat, usually pale face faintly flushed. "There's a gentleman come to see your ladyship, and though I said you saw no one except by appointment, he won't go away."

"What is his business?"

"He's come from a paper—the Morning Leader. I think it's in connection with Mrs. Castledyne's death, my lady."

"Please say I'm sorry he has come so far for nothing, but it's impossible for me to see him tonight. I am on the point of going up to dress for dinner. And Trimley?"

"Yes, my lady?"

"You might tell him, as from yourself, that no one at Jerricks knows anything about Mrs. Castledyne's death, apart, of course, from the sad fact that she died suddenly last Sunday night, according to her own doctor, from heart disease."

"Very good, my lady."

As the two ladies were going upstairs a few minutes later Lady Jane observed, "I don't want to be heartless, but I do trust this is the last I shall hear of poor Mrs. Castledyne."

Her trust was misplaced, for the next morning when Bolton appeared with Lady Jane's early cup of tea the woman exclaimed, an undercurrent of excitement in her staid voice, "Perhaps your ladyship would like to see the interview Mr. Trimley gave to that newspaper gentleman last evening?"

To her lady's astonishment and disgust she produced a sheet of newspaper she had concealed under the breakfast tray.

"Trimley said exactly what you told him to say last evening. But one thing leads to another, and the paper got his photograph out of him, as well as one of Jerricks, my lady!"

* * *

"I THINK the captain's in the soup. If so, we all know who put him there. But I suppose it wouldn't be safe yet even to hint a word about that side of it!"

"Who d'you mean?"

"I mean Zella Blunt, of course, Caroline. She will provide me with a lot of fat copy before I've done with her."

The man who had uttered those malignant words waited a moment. He ran a column of gossip in the Sunday Mail, and his name was Jed Barsley. He signed his column, appropriately enough, "Paul Pry."

The woman he was addressing—a short, stout, powerful young woman—suddenly exclaimed in a flustered tone: "Good God, I forgot—Zella Blunt is here, She went out, but she's back now."

The young man's loose mouth emitted a low whistle, and instinctively he lowered his voice. "That's a little bit of all right for me—her being here, I mean. The best I hoped for was that you would be able to tell me where she was perching just now. She's not at Jerricks. I phoned through there an hour ago."

Jed Barsley looked around the high studio. "Where the devil is she?"

"In the kitchen—at least I hope so."

The unhappy eavesdropper heard the clink of the bottle against a glass, the pouring out of a generous tot of whisky, and then the whir of the water spouting out of the siphon.

Though Zella knew that Jed Barsley would certainly have "another one," she decided she had better put herself out of the reach of his sharp questions and sham sympathy.

Anxiously she looked around the curtained-off space where she had spent the last two nights. There was nothing of hers here except her nightgown. Both her hat and the small suitcase she had brought with her were in the studio. Not that they mattered. She could telephone for them later, after that brute, well self-named "Paul Pry," had discovered his bird had flown.

She crept back into the kitchen feeling strongly tempted to lock the door. But she knew that that would give her good friend Caroline a lot of trouble. So swiftly she went across to the window and climbed out of it onto the iron ledge just below it. She now felt so afraid of Jed Barsley that she would have faced a far greater physical danger to escape even the shortest exchange of words with him concerning the death of Mrs. Castledyne.

A few moments later she was driving quickly toward the center of the town.

As her car shot into an open space it was held up by the trafic, and Zella's eyes caught sight of three afternoon newspaper placards:

THE JERRICKS MYSTERY
NEW DEVELOPMENTS
THE CASTLEDYNE CASE
MRS. CASTLEDYNE
POST-MORTEM RESULT

She took a penny out of her bag and, stretching out her hand, took a copy of one of the papers.

On the front page ran three words:

MURDER MOST FOUL?

And then below:

> The result of the post-mortem held on Mrs. Castledyne, wife of Capt. Broke Castledyne, M. C., D. S. O., the well known man-about-town, was declared this morning.
>
> The cause of death was a dose of the poison antimony, administered within six to eight hours before her death.

Murder most foul! A tremor of amazement and horror went through Zella Blunt's already burdened heart. Then she told herself that the quotation had no doubt "looked good" to whoever had the daily task of inventing sensational captions for the afternoon papers.

A flood of pain and resentment swept across her. When in St. James park, in front of Buckingham palace, she asked herself suddenly where she meant to spend the rest of today and sleep this coming night.

* * *

THE thought of returning to Jerricks was hateful to her. And then all at once she remembered that she had been again and again pressed to stay at Kent house. Not pressed to do so by the mistress of that stately mansion, but by the cherished only daughter, Lady Toria Lelant, grandniece to kind Lord Alfred.

Lady Toria, a simple girl between eighteen and nineteen, had taken an enthusiastic liking for her, Zella Blunt. It had been a liking entirely on Lady Toria's side. Indeed, Zella still regarded her as a child, for even now, though she was supposed to be grown up, she was never allowed to walk alone in London.

Zella told herself now in her distress that she would be sure of a warm welcome from Lady Toria and of a certain kindliness from the duchess. And so as she drove into the great courtyard of Kent house there came over her a comfortable feeling of rest and of reassurance. Here she would be safe both from impertinent questions and from insulting pity.

Why, at Kent house, with the possible exception of Lady Toria, who of course must have had the lists of names through her hands up to the last moment, no one was likely to have even heard of Broke Castledyne, and that though a fortnight ago he had been a guest at the exclusive ball given in honor of Lady Toria Lelant's debut!

STAND up on your hind legs and look your problems straight in the eye this week, especially till Thursday. Take care of money matters in connection with home or other real estate or holding. A favorable time for checking up on the auto, too. Buying and selling judgment requires second guesses under the present type of vibration, so make them before changing title. Somewhat better for the buyer than for the seller till Wednesday.

Keen analysis possible on anything scientific or mechanical. Get most of your good work in during the first four days; then drop back into the groove of routine. Latter half of this week may offer tempting changes in relations with superiors; investigate them carefully before acting.

Tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday: See what the coöperative and partnership angle has to offer in everything you do. Thursday and Friday: Attend to the family budget; adjust finances of whatever legal matters may be lingering in your vicinity. Saturday and next Sunday: Contemplate matters located at a distance, travel, plan advertising, take care of distribution matters; on the personal side, deal with in-laws.

Your Inner Giant

The ancient fable of Aladdin and his wonderful lamp is the modern story of yourself today with your wonderful subconscious mind. Rub the lamp (stir your subconscious) and you can have anything you ask for. That old story was left to us to show us how really great we are. Yet the average person uses less than a quarter of his physical strength and not even 10 per cent of his intellectual powers. When you pray, don't ask for money; ask for ability. When you spend money it is gone. When you spend ability you have more than before.

The subconscious giant within you knows a great deal more than your outside, thinking mind knows. For instance, if you cut your finger you don't know how to make it grow together again. No chemist, no physicist, no scientist of any line can put material into the pattern of a finger that will move and function properly. But leave the job to your inner giant; it will do it. We call the process healing—just one of the great mysteries that are so common we forget about them. There are times in our lives when we advance in understanding more than in others, or at least when our experiences give us the opportunities so to advance; and this year is one of those times in the lives of folk born Aug. 25-September-October-Nov. 30, Feb. 9-29, and April 10-May 3. Be advised, Senator Hiram Johnson, Cornelius Vanderbilt, H. L. Mencken, Alan Dinehart, Helen Hayes, Pert Kelton, Eugene O'Neill, Miriam Hopkins, Fanny Hurst, Alice Brady, James Dunn, and Will Rogers.

Our Savings

There is a section of the horoscope in which, ancient occultists tell us, are located our savings, both of worldly goods and also those assets which we may and do take with us when we leave the objective sphere. The student of astrology combines the concepts of the fourth house and comes to the conclusion that psychologically man's greatest assets of character are to be found in the storehouse of his emotions.

This means that the man or woman who lets go and snorts around in a tantrum is foolishly spending that which would be valuable coin of the realm in the next existence. Control of temper and other negative emotions is not simply a matter of refusing to pull the trigger—it is a matter of not wanting to pick up the gun.

In the saving of our emotions it is not exactly like our savings in the bank: If we want to spend money and control the desire we still have the money—but if we have a hatred for another in our heart, even though we don't make out a check on the bank of eternity by physically expressing it, we do so merely by having that negative emotion within us. You are not emotionally good unless you don't want to do wrong. Saving and spending on all planes of spirit, emotion, and intellect are now to be wisely handled by those born Jan. 15-28, May 28-June 11, June 24-July 17, July 31-Aug. 26, and Nov. 17-Dec. 6.

City Health Doctor Praises Cystex

Doctors and druggists everywhere approve of the prescription Cystex because of its splendid ingredients and quick action. For instance, Dr. W. R. George, graduate Medical Dept., University of Indiana, former Health Commissioner of Indianapolis, and Medical Director for insurance company 10 years, recently wrote the following letter:

"There is little question but what properly functioning Kidney and Bladder organs are vital to the health. Insufficient Kidney excretions are the cause of much needless suffering with aching back, weakness, painful joints and rheumatic pains, headaches and a general run-down, exhausted body. This condition also interferes with normal rest at night by causing the sufferer to rise frequently for relief, and results in painful excretion, itching, smarting and burning. I am of the opinion that Cystex definitely corrects frequent causes (poor kidney functions) of such conditions and I have actually prescribed in my own practice for many years past the same ingredients contained in your formula. Cystex not only exerts a splendid influence in flushing poisons from the urinary tract, but also has an antiseptic action and assists in freeing the blood of retained toxins. Believing as I do that so meritorious a product deserves the endorsement of the Medical Profession, I am happy indeed to lend my name and photograph for your use in advertising Cystex." Signed W. R. George, M. D.

Hollywood at Ease

By ROSALIND SHAFFER

Hollywood, Cal.

DO WE know our movie stars? We do indeed, every one of them, from this season's fresh crop of glamorous blondes and bewitching brunettes to those perennials that bloom and bloom and bloom again.

We know them, though, as gorgeous creatures in gowns the like of which make even queens envious. We know them as charmingly attired for salon or country club, in chic apparel for midnight soiree or bridle path. We even recognize them in pajamas, in briefest beach harness, or through strands of oriental beads. We have seen them times beyond count every way, except as they are pictured here in most unconventional attire.

When the cinema stars of Hollywood are at ease they are the most gosh-awful dressers of this land of the free and the brave. And of all of them who care not a whit what people say, there are five who seem to revel in the unique distinction of being the most indifferently or most carelessly dressed of all. Five of them—Marlene Dietrich, Katharine Hepburn, Margaret Sullavan, Greta Garbo, and Anna Sten—stand out from all the rest in disrespect of fashion.

Dietrich, as almost everyone knows, wears trousers for comfort. Her indifference does not include carelessness. Her mannish suits are stylishly tailored, and she wears with them caps, hats, and capes that are harmonious. Despite these little refinements in eccentricity, however, she is so noticeable that she has been booed on more than one occasion. Hepburn has a penchant for disreputable, dirty, and ragged overalls. She also enjoys wearing weird hats. Sullavan at ease prefers cord slacks, or shorts, and tennis sneakers. Garbo, with stringy bob, masculine attire, and dark glasses, is far from pleasing to the eye. Sten at ease wears plain and easy clothing.

Bach's Fugue for Strings Is Ably Recorded

Roth Quartet Plays the Famed Composition for Masterworks Set.

By Edward Moore.

PHONOGRAPH records have been giving people plenty to to think about in the way of string quartet music lately. One of the largest in dimensions and finest in content in this subdivision of music comes from Columbia. In the Masterworks set, No. 206, or, in other words, the ten records numbered 68257-D to 68266-D, inclusive, appears the Roth String quartet playing nothing less than Bach's "Art of the Fugue."

This monumental composition was transcribed for string quartet by Roy Harris and M. D. Herter Norton, and the Roth organization plays it under the supervision of Mr. Harris. The word monumental is used advisedly. Does any one stop to consider what it means to have fourteen fugues composed on one theme, and yet to have the set incomplete? This was Bach's own testimony, his confession of faith in the variation principle. It is an explicit treatise on fugal composition. But more than this, it is a living, breathing piece of fine music from the hands of a master of composition.

Four Canons Omitted Because of Questionable Significance.

It is not complete. Bach died before he had finished his fourteenth "contrapunctus," as he called each separate fugue, and the music is allowed to die away on an unfinished phrase just as he left it. At that, Columbia does not record all that he left. There were four canons, omitted, as the editors say, because their structural significance in this work is open to question. There was also a four voice version of Contrapunctus XIII., which Bach wrote for two claviers, the pianos of his day, and this, too, is omitted, with no reason given.

But there is plenty left. The set is divided into four groups. The first includes four simple fugues with the main theme both direct and inverted. The second of three fugues takes up the idea of contrary motion, the main theme both inverted and direct, also in diminution and augmentation, which means that the theme is played twice as fast or twice as slow. Then there is a group of four double and triple fugues, and finally three "mirror" fugues, in which the theme is literally invertible, note for note.

Harris' Work Arouses Cerebral, Not Emotional, Interest.

Wherefore one confesses to mixed emotions in turning to another specimen of the work of Roy Harris and the Roth String quartet. This one is Victor's Musical Masterpiece M-244 and consists of Mr. Harris' own Three Variations on a Theme played by the Roth quartet. It was composed in 1933 and dedicated to Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, who by encouragement and financial aid has done more than any one of this generation for the cause of chamber music.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"Cleopatra" Full of Anachronisms.

Miss Mae Tinée: "Cleopatra" has an unusual number of anachronisms. Starting at the beginning, the conspirators shown anointing themselves with oil in the bath. The idea of Roman freemen doing this is absurd. They had slaves called unctores for this purpose.

Cæsar was 56 when assassinated, and should have had gray hair, especially as Suetonius tells us he turned gray early.

The Romans used napkins called mappa. No need for Antony to wipe his mouth on the back of his hand.

Brutus with full and unkempt beard is another absurdity. Everybody of consequence was clean shaven. Several busts of Brutus still extant show him thus.

Cleopatra's face as shown on coins, cameos, etc., was long and oval, not moon faced as in picture.

It is well known that when Cleopatra was brought in to Cæsar in the rug she was perfectly nude. Possibly this had to be omitted to humor the League of Decency.

Society, Resort Bound, Takes Off for Mexico

Sunny Land Beyond Rio Grande Latest Rage Among the Smart Set.

By Cousin Eve.

GOLD and yellow crocuses rearing their little heads and white hyacinths on every well conducted living room table. We have longer, lighter days to run our daily course. And already invitations to the country for apple blossom time. Meanwhile Mexican money has given out at the banks, so wide is travel in that direction. Even though Mrs. Cyrus Bentley and Mrs. Carroll Sudler write from Mexico City that a gasoline strike has tied up all sightseeing by motor Mrs. John Crerar, Mrs. David Cooke Jr., and Mrs. William Ennis, a threesome, left during the week for a fortnight of Mexican sunshine.

The large social event of the week tomorrow night at the Casino. A dinner by the America-France society in honor of his excellency, André de Laboulaye, French ambassador. The party will be largely social. One hears talk of extra special best evening frocks for the occasion—white velvets perhaps. And decorations worn, bien entendu. Orville Taylor, being president, will do the honors in his best manner, which is excellent. And excellent French, too, at his command.

Carpenter Obliges with His Quintet After Dinner.

The highest social moment last week at which I was present was John Alden Carpenter's musical Sunday evening at the Arts club. Extremely distinguished both as to company and program. Everybody was wishing to hear the famous Carpenter quintet. Richard Fox, in from Wheaton for a midwinter whirl, thought the quintet was written in Ontario. But it is Algerian, a delightful, brilliant short piece with, at the end, Arabic cadences. There was the usual candle lighted, crowded dinner beforehand. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Swift gave the large party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, with the John McCutcheons, Paul Wellings, Kellogg Fairbanks, and others as guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter have delayed a few days, not wishing to go so far as China on national business uncertainties. Among those who heard the quintet and Emanuel Feuermann's splendid cello performance were Charles Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. William Monroe, Henry Monroe, Mrs. Ernst Freund, Frederick Woodward, Frank McNair, a whole Renaissance society table, with Mrs. Martin Schutze, Mrs. Dallas Phemister, Mrs. Henry Gale, John U. Nef, Mrs. James Field. Miss Elisabeth McCormick had Ira Nelson Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ayer, Dr. and Mrs. James H. Mitchell, Peggy Hambleton, Mrs. Oliver Dennet Grover, her sister, Mrs. Edward Bolton; Mrs. William Sage, Mrs. Harry Reuss, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Bangs, G. Bernard Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bernays, Mr. and Mrs. René Weiller.

Miss McCormick Stays Despite Her Farewell Tea.

Miss Elisabeth McCormick's large luncheon at the Casino last Sunday was to have been her fond farewell to many friends. But she, too, has put off her journeyings abroad for the moment. The party had the size of a small reception and foregathered in the east drawing room, a dignified salon with Aubusson carpet and rather violent purple curtains. This was one of the last arrangements of Rue Winterbotham Carpenter and quite unclublike. Of Miss McCormick's family there were Robert Hall, her brother; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ayer, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, and Mr. and Mrs. John Chapman. At least eight small tables were laid in the fountain room, a charming green and white place with a fanciful name. For the oldest member never aw a fountain there. Others in the large party were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Schwarz, Mr. and Mrs. James Hume, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodspeed, Col. Ralph James, Herbert and Mrs. Bradley, Dean Harry Bigelow, Mrs. Joseph Patterson, Mrs. R. T. Crane, Mrs. George Landhorne, Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Mrs. H. H. Shearson, Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland; the Swiss consul, Ulrich R. Beusch; Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany Blake, William and Mrs. Nitze, Leeds Mitchell, Richard T. Fox, Arthur Heun, Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank.

Miss McCormick is internationally noted as a collector of ancient fabrics, historic costumes. She lectures delightfully now and then on her hobby. In other days she established schools for fine needlework, cross stitch, embroideries, etc. At one time she had a large house beautifully furnished with specimens from her collections.

Lucienne Boyer Makes Red Cross Sewing Popular.

In the absence of our cherished Victor Elting on his travels in the South Seas, Barrett Wendell Jr. presided at the English Speaking dinner Tuesday night at the Casino. The guest of honor was Sir Willmott Lewis, the London Times envoy at Washington, a brilliant upstanding man. And so long has he lived in this country I can almost understand him.

It was a good party, beautiful as a private dinner. In two years I had almost forgotten how delightful Sir Willmott is. A war correspondent and a veteran, he had known Barrett Wendell in China and been a buddy of Col. Ralph James during the Boxer troubles. He was knighted in 1931 and has lived for 15 years in Washington. Lady Lewis, born in Chicago, was Ethel Newbold Noyes, daughter of Frank B. Noyes.

Animated reception in the pale gold and black ante chamber, and then forward to small tables in the Fountain room, where it was brilliant and gay.

At the high table old friends sat with Sir Willmott — Mrs. Ballard Moore, also Mr. and Adlai Stevenson and the Paul Scott Mowrers. Having large parties, Mrs. Patrick Valentine with Mrs. H. H. Shearson, Mrs. Charles P. McAvoy, Mrs. Richardson Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dempster. Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick with the British, Italian and Swiss consuls; Mr. and Mrs. James Douglas, the Ogden Wests, and Mr. and Mrs. John Winslow. Ira Nelson Morris, with eight guests. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Lawrence and Miss Grace Telling, who did the honors as hostess.

The speaker with great elegance and deliberation toyed with a heavy subject—international trade. He told of the ambassador at just such a dinner, drinking six cups of coffee. "Doesn't it keep your excellency awake?"

"It helps," said the great man.

And there was the story of the superb man in the train.

A fellow traveler conceives him to be the archbishop of York, puts the question.

"What the bloody hell is it to you?" replies the venerable one. And, continued Sir Willmott, the thing was that his friend never did know whether or not it was the archbishop of York.

I am not going to write about this speech; it is matter one should hear, not read. But the finale was that it lies with the great powers to break the deadlock. It was altogether one of the most distinguished evenings of a long season.

People were hanging from the chandeliers, so great was the jam at the Thursday causerie of the Alliance Française. Red Cross sewing and tea is not usually so popular as all that. But Mlle. Lucienne Boyer and her mother had asked if they might come, which accounted for the jam.

It was Mrs. William Nitze's day, a popular day anyway. And piles of chicken sandwiches and tea cakes melted like butter in the sun at the tea hour to fill in the chasm of waiting. The pretty Parisienne music hall favorite is extremely modest and she came in so quietly that nobody knew her at first, although her little gray fur cossack coat, blue frock, and little boxy hat should have marked her as imported.

President Robert Hall McCormick made a flattering welcome, and Mlle. Boyer felt inclined to address the ladies in her velvety voice. It was all natural and amusing. She said Americans are exactly like French people —full of heart, with nice little ways! And that Americans are grands gosses (which doesn't mean big gooses either), anxious to see, hear, do, and get everything there is.

Pouring tea and behaving pretty, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Frank Mulford, Mrs. William Nitze, Mrs. Peck Warwick.

Society Jams Luncheon to Hear Japan's Ambassador.

Swinging from the chandelier also were the guests at the Hirosi Saito luncheon at the Palmer house. This occasion was proof that "everybody" is not in Florida. Everybody was right at that luncheon. Such a pell mell scramble! Clifton Utley and his associate, the lovely Mary de Coningh, who run the Foreign council, were like two generals deploying reserves. Every luncheon table had to vanish in order to seat members. One could barely see the speakers' table. President Walter Lichtenstein had the Japanese ambassador on his right, Dr. Walter Dill Scott on his left. Gen. Charles Dawes sat next to Mr. Saito. Ira N. Morris, Walter Cummings, Charles S. Dewey, Kengi Nakauchi, consul of Japan; Frederick Woodward, a dozen more perhaps, were also at the table; no women. I don't quite know what all the excitement was about. Mr. Saito said he didn't know either, but felt it must be friendship for Japan. For my part, knowing that Hirosi Saito had once told our state department he is indiscreet, I was hoping for the best.

Says Japan's Policy Is by No Means What It Seems.

I thoroughly admire indiscretion in high places. No creeping, cautious burocrats for mine. Indiscretion plus brains is my idea of happy days and a long life.

However, the Japanese envoy was extremely dignified and courteous. He is an aristocratic man with large, fine eyes, aquiline nose, sensitive face. He presented the image of Japan from within, a country whose geography is not so happy as ours, but which as yet is free from invasion. He described the islands strewn across the Pacific that approach Japan, the Aleutians, Hawaii, Guam. He discussed the changes in China and Russian attempts to dominate her. He said, "Our policy is by no means what sensational European and American writers declare." He described the frugal agricultural life of his people, their recent development. The nearness of the two greatest armies in the world, Russian and Chinese.

Could Japan go mad and take over China? A famous Chinese general said if that should happen China would soon absorb the invaders into herself —that is, in three or four hundred years. She always does. Japanese have opened schools and hospitals in China just as Americans have. China and Japan are near neighbors, always have been, always must be.

And, the ambassador added, he did not feel that Japan or Italy either were overcrowded. Nature always attended to that.

Gives Open Exhibition of Diplomacy's Mechanism.

A flock of University of Chicago professors, Quincy Wright, Carl Binder among them, popped up all over the room at the end, each with a strategic question. Mr. Saito with seeming great indiscretion had offered to answer questions.

The professors were all loaded to hunt bear, with historic treaties, dates, and utterances. But it seemed to everybody that the ambassador had made a perfectly just case for his country. And that his polite answers left him in the best position. In fact, it was a case of open diplomacy, in which we were allowed to see the wheels go round. The Graham Aldises, Adlai Stevensons, Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. Arthur Bissell, Mrs. William Baum, Mrs. William Greenlee, Mrs. John Carpenter, Mrs. Robert Gregory, Mrs. W. G. Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mullaney, Mrs. Henry Dawes, Mrs. Patrick Valentine, Mrs. Walter Ayer, Phoebe Ayer in the great throng.

Carleton Smith Gives Intimate Talk on Stage Artists.

Carleton Smith, returning from New York, was the prime mover Friday at a twilight tea, dramatically flavored, at the Union League club. Mimes from "Roberta" supplied the excitement for his clever talk on "Backstage." Only he quickly dodged out from behind the scenes and was aboard a Mediterranean ship with Katharine Cornell (and her husband). Made us laugh at Noel Coward's presence of wit and gave his audience the jitters at his friend Lawrence Tibbett's predicaments at the première of "The Pasha's Garden" at Metropolitan.

The Coward story was that Lady Diana Manners, sitting at a play, leaned over to the ambidextrous playwright and said, "Your play, 'Private Lives'—not very funny."

After a bit Coward turned to Diana. "You are playing the nun in 'The Miracle'—very funny."

John Astors Avidly Awaited at Palm Beach

Society Thrills to News Young Millionaire and Wife May Pop In.

By Nancy Randolph.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Tsk, tsk, what a season! Mrs. Vincent Astor is arriving here next Thursday, the young Jack Astors are only a few hundred miles away, and if they don't come down from Belleair to visit the Beverley Bogerts before they return north, every one's going to be surprised and disappointed.

Helen Astor hasn't visited here in several seasons, and her brief trips are always pretty momentous to that section of the colony which swims in its own private pools.

She's not coming to be the house guest of her brother and sister-in-law, the Robert D. Huntingtons, as you might suspect, but will put up at Villa Amada, the Charlie Munn ocean front residence.

The Jack Astors, Helen's half brother-in-law and sister-in-law, are visiting the John Russell Popes at Belleaire. But Lesley Bogert and Tucky French Astor are such good friends the young Astors may come on to Palm Beach for a few days. And wouldn't the colony be pleased!

Jack hasn't been here in three years. He used to come to Palm Beach almost every winter with his mother when she was Mrs. William K. Dick and before she became Mrs. Enzo Fiermonte.

Duke and Duchess of Kent Expected to Arrive Today.

But there are other recent arrivals important enough to keep the colony in a state of ecstasy. Sir Bede Clifford, governor of the Bahamas, and his American born lady arrived during the week for the running of the Bahamas handicap in Miami Saturday.

And Sunday, if the colony's luck holds good, it may have a glimpse of the duke and duchess of Kent. They're expected to disembark from the liner Duchess of Richmond at 7 p. m. at Port Everglades on the tip end of the Gold Coast.

The royal British honeymooners are planning only a twenty-four hour stopover in Florida, so Palm Beach has its fingers crossed, hoping [and praying] the duke and his Marina will grace society's playground with their royal presence if only for a few hours.

Joe Widener Ensnares Bahama's Governor.

Meanwhile, Joe Widener is enjoying the distinction once again of having ensnared the genial Sir Bede and his spirited, intelligent wife. Joe is head man at the Hialeah track in Miami and he and his distinguished guests are occupying ringside positions at the track today. Sir Humphrey De Trafford and Lady Trafford are also in the party.

After the races the Widener party will be whisked up to Joe's beautiful Italian villa, Il Palmetto, in Palm Beach. And the festive board at Il Palmetto will be spread sumptuously tonight for the titled visitors and the upper tendom of the colony's residents.

This was the procedure followed last winter when Joe captured not only the royal Bahamans but the earl and countess of Athlone simultaneously. The earl, you remember, is Queen Mary's younger brother, and his countess is own cousin of King George.

So the social red fire in Palm Beach bids fair to burn at full glare during the next few days. If the duke and duchess of Kent do get as far as Palm Beach, who knows, maybe they, too, will land at the Widener ocean front palace. After all, if Joe's palazzo was good enough for the queen's brother, maybe it'll be all right for her majesty's younger son and his bride.

Young Social Leaders Still Love Fireside

Questionnaire of Junior League Shows 72 Per Cent Now Are Married.

THAT youthful social leaders still are devoted to harth and home is one of the important revelations of a questionnaire recently circulated among 2,000 Junior Leaguers by the Junior League magazine.

Of the 1,566 Junior Leaguers who answered the queries, 1,125, or 72 per cent, reported themselves married. Seventy-eight per cent of this category has children, and a number of the 257 in the childless group stated that they expected the stork in the near future.

Number of Marriages Greater with Increase in Age of Women.

A reversal of the Victorian custom which encouraged girls to marry young to avoid the label of "old maid," which automatically attached to every unwed woman over 25 years old, was strongly apparent in the findings. Marriages increased as ages increased. Seven and nine-tenths per cent of the group between 18 and 25 was wed, 23 per cent of the group between 25 and 30, and 32.6 per cent of the group from 30 to 40.

Families, as reported by 868 of the women who responded to the questionnaire, average slightly more than two children apiece. Nine hundred and twenty of these offspring were boys, 848 girls.

Depression Gives Leaguers New Attitude Toward Charity.

Junior Leaguers continue active in charity work, but the depression, bringing decreased incomes and lower standards of living in their own homes, has made them approach their welfare work with a different attitude, according to Miss Elizabeth P. Taylor of Little Rock, Ark., national president of the association.

"A remark I hear many times among our members, in referring to clients of welfare agencies, is 'We all are in the same boat,'" Miss Tailor declares. "A member hesitates to blunder in serving them for she realizes as never before how complex the problems are which every one is facing."

English Schools Roar Over New Parody of Scoutmasters

LONDON

Fashions in English school entertainments are curious. They spread over the whole country in a most mysterious way. This year the favorite seems to be a parody on scoutmasters. Two worn out and haggard scoutmasters appear, hung about with knives, crossbows, ropes, kettles, saxophones, saws, hammers, watering cans, mouth organs, and jew's-harps. The scenes are varied—the scoutmaster trying to learn folk dancing, the scoutmaster supervising a mothers' meeting, the scoutmaster darning socks. But they are invariably overwhelming in their suggestion of the encyclopædic range of the poor scoutmaster's practical knowledge. Even as we laugh, we pity.

Leighs Achieve Unique Disguise at Chelsea Arts Ball

LONDON

One of the events of the season is the Chelsea arts ball, which happens to be no longer Chelsea or arts, but a gay gathering with the Mayfair flavor. It is fancy dress and men — important men—are always at a disadvantage in fancy dress, but Claude Leigh achieved success. Being dark and rather serious looking, he went as a blond Dick Whittington. Mrs. Leigh accompanied him as Cinderella, the pantomime creature greatly etherealized. Her wealth of corn gold hair was worn tumbled down in such a fashion that no one could compete with her in loveliness.

Mrs. Leigh has been entertaining for her daughters. Her family of girls are often alluded to as "his daughters, her daughters, and their daughter," Mrs. Leigh's two daughters and Mr. Leigh's one daughter are all subdebs and enjoy a whole floor of the luxurious Leigh home to themselves. Each has her own room and bath and together they have a beautiful big "study." Another whole floor is given over to Virginia, age 4, whose parentage Mr. and Mrs. Leigh share.

Club Programs to Be Patriotic for the Week

Washington's Birthday Is Occasion of D. A. R.'s Annual Luncheon Friday.

WITH Washington's birthday on Friday a number of the club programs planned for this week are of a patriotic nature. The Chicago chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will hold its annual Washington birthday luncheon at 12:30 Friday in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

The speaker is to be Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, youthful president of Rockford college, who will speak on "American Conservatism." Constance Eberhart of the Chicago and Cincinnati Grand Opera companies will present a group of songs, and members of the wheel and distaff committee of the chapter will present a short play. Mrs. Frederick J. Dickson will be the hostess.

The afternoon program Friday at the Chicago Woman's club will be sure to attract a large audience, for Miss Herma Clark of THE TRIBUNE staf is to give an illustrated lecture entitled "Ladies of the White House."

Flags, bunting, candlelight, colonial uniforms, the national anthem, and the spirit of '76 all will contribute to the Washington birthday dinner the Woman's City club is to have Thursday evening. After dinner there will be brief speeches by Clara E. Laughlin, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. F. M. S. Brazelton, and S. J. Duncan-Clark. A playlet written by Miss Isabel M. Mitchell will complete the program.

Mrs. Campbell Postpones Trip to Europe for Club Interests.

Mrs. James A. Campbell is so vitally interested in this year's program of the Service Council for Girls, of which she is the president, that she is postponing a long anticipated trip to Europe. Mrs. Campbell will be hostess on Feb. 25 at a large benefit luncheon, card party, and fashion show of the council in the Wedgewood room at Marshall Field's.

Ticket Supply for Conference Is Going Fast

Admission Cards for Three of Five Sessions Are Completely Exhausted.

By Ruth DeYoung.

As final revisions were made last week in the program for THE TRIBUNE'S Second Annual Conference on Current Problems, announcement was issued from the conference headquarters that the ticket supply for three of the five sessions is exhausted.

PRINCE HUBERTUS LOEWENSTEIN. [Tribune Studio Photo.]

Members of federated and unfederated organizations in a dozen midwest states are coming for the meetings Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 26 and 27, in the grand ballroom of the Palmer house. A vanguard will arrive in Chicago next Saturday and Sunday.

Well Known Speakers Are to Speak on Major Trends.

In treating the general theme, "Today's Problems: Tomorrow's Prospects," speakers with famous names and faces will deal with legislation, cultural trends, social welfare, and economics.

At the third session, the evening of the 26th, varied perspectives of interest to the feminine world will be discussed by Miss Dema Harshbarger, Prince Hubertus Loewenstein, who has just come to this country from the Saar, where he was during the campaign that led to the plebiscite of Jan. 13, and Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, head of the good citizenship bureau of the Woman's Home Companion.

The addition of Miss Harshbarger's name to the speakers' list was made known only yesterday by Miss Kathleen McLaughlin, TRIBUNE woman's editor, who will preside at the five conference sessions. Miss Harshbarger has been favorably recognized for years in Chicago as the founder head of the Civic Concert services.

Prince Loewenstein's Address on "The Tinder Box of Europe."

"The Tinder Box of Europe" will be the appropriate title of Prince Loewenstein's address. Mrs. Richardson, who comes from New York City, will speak on "Organizations and Objectives."

In the debate on the Lucretia Mott amendment to the constitution, proposing legal rights for women equal to those for men, a feature of the first conference session, opening at 10 o'clock on the 26th, Mrs. Raymond S. Simons of Highland Park will take the negative. Mrs. Simons, chairman of the legal status committee of the Illinois League of Women Voters, which is waging an active fight against the amendment, is replacing Miss Agnes Nestor, who is required to be in Washington, D. C., the 26th for a labor conference.

Mrs. Simons has as her opponent Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews of Washington, president of the National Association of Women Lawyers.

Daughters of Zion Double Campaign Efforts for Funds.

With only one week remaining in a seven weeks' campaign for funds, the Daughters of Zion are doubling their efforts today to reach their goal of $30,000. The money will go in a lump sum to maintain the Infant Home and Day nursery at 2754 Hirsch boulevard on Chicago's northwest side.

MRS. EDWIN ROMBERG [De Haven Photo.]

The drive will culminate next Sunday in a fairyland pageant at the Congress hotel that will continue through March 3. This pageant is to be directed by Joseph Kelly, who designed parts of a number of the buildings at A Century of Progress.

According to Mrs. Edwin Romberg, president of the Daughters of Zion, the 5,000 members taking part in the fund campaign already have raised $15,000. Twenty auxiliaries representing all parts of Chicago compose the central organization.

Each one of these auxiliaries is working individually in the campaign. Last year they turned over to the governing board $27,319. During this period care was given to 25,378 children.

The Infant Home and Day nursery is said to be the only one of its kind in Chicago that accepts babies from 1 day to 6 years of age. Eighteen years ago the Daughters of Zion began their work by establishing modest quarters at 1441 Wicker Park avenue. The new home was opened in 1929.

"Because of unemployment the daily demands upon the home have increased greatly," Mrs. Romberg has explained. "This means that larger amounts are needed to operate the institution and the medical center which is under the direction of Dr. Arthur S. Sandler, child specialist and pediatrician."

Henry P. Chandler to Talk on "Personnel in Public Service."

To meet a wide appeal for a discussion of the merit system in civil service, Henry P. Chandler, president of the Chicago Civil Service association, will speak on "Personnel in Public Service in Illinois" at the afternoon meeting on Feb. 27.

Prof. Coleman R. Griffith of the University of Illinois, who has accepted an invitation to be one of four speakers at the second meeting, the afternoon of Feb. 26, will take as his topic, "The Dollar Sign in Education."

Accessory to the more serious lecture sessions will be a tour of THE TRIBUNE plant beginning at 7 o'clock the final evening of the conference, Feb. 27. Following this tour the party will move down to the Chicago Woman's club at 72 East 11th street, where a preview of one of the new and better motion pictures will be given in the club theater at 9 o'clock.

Women's Overseas League to Hold Mid-Winter Dinner.

The Chicago unit of the Women's Overseas Service league, with Miss Elizabeth Bredin as president, will hold its annual dinner and midwinter frolic at 6:30 tomorrow evening at Le Petit Gourmet restaurant, 615 North Michigan avenue. For entertainment a number of the members will present a play.

MISS ELIZABETH BREDIN.

The Chicago unit, organized in 1922 and now with a membership of 150, is conducting an active campaign for additional members under the chairmanship of Miss Susan A. Murphy. Any woman is eligible for membership who served the allied cause overseas during any part of the world war. Members of Miss Murphy's committee are Miss Marie Kelly, Miss Ruth Meyers, Miss Elizabeth O'Keefe, and Miss Ruby Rowley.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole to Be Honor Guest at Luncheon.

In connection with the conference the Chicago Woman's club has issued invitations for a luncheon for Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who will be a speaker at the first session. The luncheon will be held at 12:15, Feb. 26, at the club, with Mrs. Ozora S. Davis, the club president, as hostess. Mrs. Lewis H. Dodd is in charge of the luncheon arrangements.

Of interest is the announcement that Mrs. Poole has just been made the only woman member of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' advisory committee. This committee will consider and report ways and means of establishing a national scientific and educational center in Washington for the better training of carefully selected personnel in criminal law administration and the treatment of crime and criminals.

Movie Nimrods Hunt Near and Far for Game

Preston Foster Says He Can Get All the Thrills Close to Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD.—There are hunters in Hollywood and then there are the fellows who don't take the sport too seriously.

The hunters include Clark Gable, who rushes away to Utah whenever he has a free week or a free month. Gary Cooper went to Africa, armed like an army, but report has it that he bagged only a few of that trainful of trophies he brought back. Darryl Zanuck, the executive, hunts either in Canada or in Africa. Wallace Beery flies to Wyoming occasionally with his gear to shoot and fish.

And there are many others who spend much time and much money going to far places to shoot wild creatures.

His Junket Costs Only $35.

Preston Foster stays almost at home to do his hunting. He's back from a short trip that he claims was as much fun as if he'd gone to Africa and, best of all, he says, the junket cost him only $35. He visited the island of Santa Cruz, which is 26 miles off the California coast from Santa Barbara.

Well over a century ago, Santa Cruz was a Spanish penal colony. It is a little island, perhaps 25 miles long and half a dozen wide. Some domestic pigs were put there so the prisoners could have meat, but whether those porkers are the ancestors of the thousands of wild pigs—with vicious tusks—that now inhabit the island, no one seems to know.

Just as Much Fun Near Home.

Anyway, they're good game, and inexpensive. Preston and a party of two others shot eleven in three days. They brought them back to ripen in cold storage and then the bunch was butchered for a barbecue.

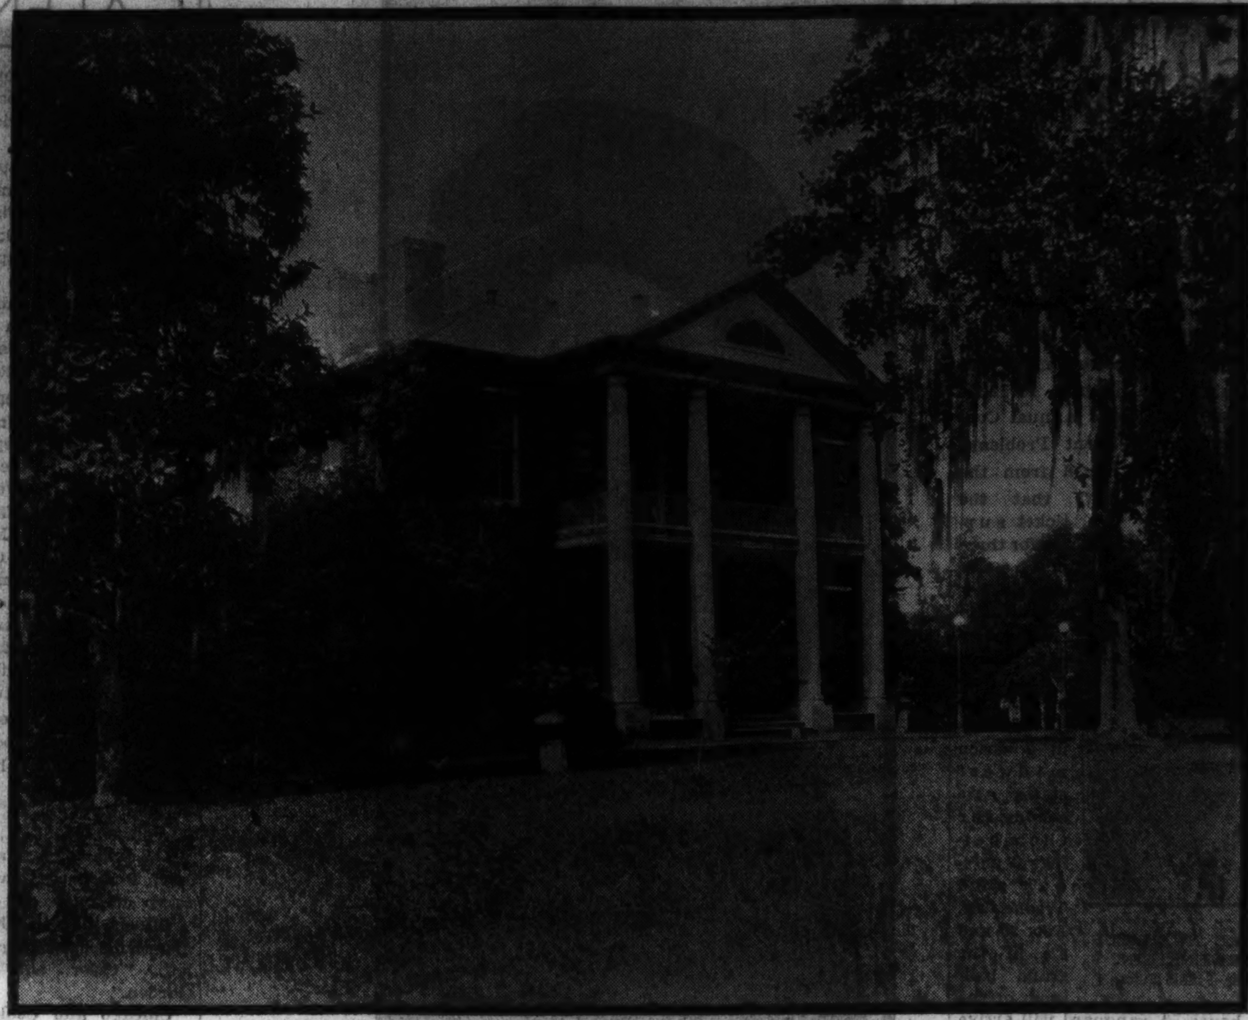
"I hear fellows telling about going to Africa and to Canada to shoot," says Preston, "and I used to be thrilled by their stories. They don't know they can have just as much fun and sport right here at home. Where some of them spend thousands of dollars, my hunting costs me an almost insignificant sum.

"The pigs are dangerous, too. If you shoot and wound them, they charge you, and I have no doubt one with big tusks could make you wish you'd stayed home."

Americans to See King's Jubilee Fete

A MOTOR trip through the English countryside in springtime, London for the silver jubilee of King George, "tulip time in Holland," and Paris in the "spring season" are on the program for the Travel Guild's spring jubilee party to Europe.

Sailing April 25 from New York on the S. S. Empress of Australia, the group will visit England, Holland, Belgium, and France on its 31 day itinerary, and return on the same ship to Quebec on May 25. Tourist class accommodations will be used.



AN OBJECTIVE OF THE NATCHEZ PILGRIMAGE.
"Arlington," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Barnum of Natchez, Miss. Built 114 years ago, it will be one of the objectives of the Natchez Garden club's pilgrimage to the ante-bellum houses and estates there from March 31 to April 8. Mrs. Balfour Miller heads the group in charge of this year's pilgrimage. The excursions in recent years have attracted national attention.

French Lick Sees Big Spring Season

FRENCH LICK SPRINGS, Ind.—Prospects for a heavy spring resort season were assured here when it was made known that advance reservations far exceeded any spring in five years.

An increase in prosperity and a renewed desire for leisure are believed to be the causes for the much earlier and heavier registration.

A survey conducted here shows that the midwest is leading in the climb toward prosperity, closely followed by the south and the east.

46 Nations to Take Part in Olympiad

LUDWIG PLATE of Chicago, general western passenger manager of the Hamburg-American Line-North German Lloyd, announced yesterday that four more nations—Egypt, Brazil, Portugal, and Honduras—have accepted Germany's invitation to participate in the eleventh Olympiad, to be held in 1936 in Berlin. Acceptance by these four brings the total number participating to 46. This assures a record attendance at the games, as even at Los Angeles, scene of the last Olympic contest, only 42 nations participated.

New Air Line in Mongolia.

PAOTOWCHEN, Mongolia.—(AP)—Regular air transport to this isolated city is planned by the Eurasia Aviation company, a German owned concern. The line will be extended from Lanchow in central China.

VAGABOND'S DIARY

POMPEII, founded long before the Christian era. . . . Destroyed and buried by Vesuvius on Aug. 24, A. D. 79. . . . During the middle ages Pompeii was entirely unknown. . . . First excavations made in 1748. . . . Work still progressing. . . . Read before you go Pliny's letter describing its destruction. . . . And, if you like, Bulwer Lytton's novel. . . . Its greatest treasures now in the museum at Naples. . . . Principal streets, temples, houses, and public buildings can be seen. . . . Decorative stucco of houses shows that it was a gay town. . . . Tourists every day in the year from all the continents of the world. . . . Baedeker devotes seven pages to the Isle of Capri, but twenty-seven to Pompeii.

- Paestum, ancient Poseidonia, City of Neptune. . . . According to Strabo, it was founded by Greeks from Sybaris in 600 B. C. . . . Now an excursion from Naples of greater interest than Pompeii. . . . No one appreciative of the simple majesty of Greek art misses Paestum. . . . With the exception of those at Athens, Paestum has the finest Greek monuments in the world. . . . The Temple of Neptune, with its fluted Doric columns. . . . The so-called Basilika, with fifty columns, each more than six feet in diameter. . . . The Temple of Ceres. . . . Remains of a Forum, a theater, and an amphitheater. . . . Not a trace of the "Rose Gardens of Paestum," extoled by Roman poets. . . . Most of the objects discovered in excavations are now in Naples museum.

- Taormina, tempting travelers never to leave. . . . Favorite Sicilian winter resort of the English for generations. . . . Even the English club, the English doctor, and the English tearoom are there. . . . A historic past still giving a Greek, Saracen, Roman, and Gothic color to the day. . . . Coastal views superb. . . . Its view of Mount Etna famous. . . . The Greek-Roman theater is Taormina's glory. . . . Picturesque old palaces, castles, gates, ancient walls, tombs, and Roman cisterns. . . . Fruit trees and flowers of early spring fill the air. . . . Plenty of good social life in the hotels and pensions. . . . Tennis, bathing, dancing. . . . Imagine a winter in a seacoast town founded 400 years before Christ and full of every modern comfort!

- Gibraltar, one of the ancient Pillars of Hercules. . . . The key to the Mediterranean. . . . Impregnable stronghold of the British since 1713. . . . A thousand years before that controled by Tarik, a Moorish chief. . . . Captured by the Spaniards in 1309. . . . The rock now galleried with chambers replete with gun batteries. . . . Popular belief says there is one gun for every year. . . . The water reservoir hewn out of the rock holds 9,000,000 gallons. . . . The town "just like England." . . . "Tommies" and "Bobbies" on every street. . . . Africa across the strait to look at and tropical vegetation to see. . . . The Moorish castle ruins still an object of interest. . . . Also the "rock ipes," the new almost sacred monkeys which once warned of an attack.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address querries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations, to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped.

What classes of aliens are "nonquota," and why is this term used?
A. T.

"Nonquota" aliens are those coming to reside in the United States permanently, but because of some special merit in their case they are not charged against the quota. The principal classes forming the "nonquota" group are (1) aliens who have lived in the United States and are returning from a temporary visit abroad; (2) the wife, husband, or minor children of a United States citizen; (3) those born in Canada or the independent countries in the western hemisphere; (4) clergymen and their families; (5) college professors and their families. College students are also within the nonquota group, but, unlike the others, they must leave the United States after they have completed their education here.

What is meant by "head tax," and who pays it?
C. J. D.

Head tax is a charge of $8 which the federal government collects from all aliens entering the United States, whether for the first time or when returning from a temporary visit abroad. There are some exemptions, such as visitors for less than sixty days, and children accompanied by their parents; also representatives of foreign governments.

Henry Dawes on Trip to Bermuda

MR. and Mrs. Henry Dawes, widely known Chicagoans, were among the large group sailing last Wednesday on the Queen of Bermuda for the Bermuda islands. Other passengers from this city were Miss Alice Wilson, Miss Marian Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. B. Zeman, Miss Margaret Touhy, Miss Leona Breman, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton L. Frank.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Johnson and Mrs. E. A. Daugherty, all of Chicago, sailed yesterday on the Monarch of Bermuda for the same destination.

Mrs. O. G. Topp and son and Province Pogue, all of Chicago, sailed Thursday on the Furness liner, Fort St. George, for a 25-day cruise of the Virgin islands, the Windward and Leeward isles, and the northern coast of South America.

Included in the passenger list on the Furness liner, Eastern Prince, leaving a week ago for east coast ports of South America, were Mr. and Mrs. Saul Newbury of this city.

Royalty Sends Mystery Gift to Lonely Island

THREE mysterious packing cases were loaded aboard the Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of Australia, when it reached Monaco recently. They are consigned to the inhabitants of the world's loneliest island, Tristan da Cunha, the rocky top of a mountain almost submerged in the South Atlantic.

No one aboard the ship, not even the captain, knows what is in the cases. But he knows the names of the shippers, and that is enough for him. For these packages contain gifts from King George and Queen Mary of Great Britain.

Capt. Griffith of the liner has an idea that the gifts are of a practical nature, for twice before he has landed presents from the royal couple. Churns, new sets of oars, a sewing machine, seed potatoes, sugar, flour, fish hooks, rat poison, medicines and candy were

Bouche Scores in Miami Night Club

MIAMI, Fla.—Albert Bouche, whose Villa Venice on the Des Plaines river has become a feature of Chicagoland's night life in the summer time, is scoring again here this season with his winter time Villa Venice.

Mr. Bouche's original numbers include a number of modernistic and exotic dances, in the nude and semi-nude, all done in the Ben Ali Haggin manner and with a touch of real artistry. The program also embraces ballet dancing and operatic singing.

The night club is getting a big play both from the people of Miami and the winter visitors.

Stone Coffins Unearthed.

BEIRUT, Syria.—(AP)—Archæologists have discovered in a cave near Mess el Gebal, south Lebanon, six stone coffins of the Roman period containing mummies and in Mesopotamia a number of clay tablets on which was inscribed a peace treaty ending a war between two Sumerian cities about 2,000 B. C.

Floating Village on Pacific Has an Exciting Life

Almost Too Much Entertainment for Passengers on This Huge Liner.

By Mason Warner.

ON BOARD S. S. PRESIDENT HOOVER, en route Honolulu to Yokohama.—It is a long voyage from Honolulu to Yokohama, 3,390 miles. But the days pass quickly and "time ambles withal."

This ship carries more than 1,200 persons, including first, special, and third class passengers, and the crew, a total number equal to the population of a small town. As they are transported overseas they are cared for night and day, fed, and amused.

There are 330 in the ship's crew—208 whites and 122 orientals, including Chinese, Japanese, and Filipinos. The room stewards, kitchen help, common labor are oriental; dining room stewards, white.

Seasick Because Weather Too Good.

There are only about thirty able seamen in the crew. Paying little heed to their importance, the other three hundred can be listed as follows: The captain and navigating officers, chief engineer, enginemen and firemen, purser and accountants, chief steward and staf, doctor and trained nurses, radio operators, electricians, refrigerator men, machinists, blacksmiths, plumbers, carpenters, painters, printers, cooks, chefs, bakers, meat cutters, laundrymen, moving picture operators, bartenders, boilermakers, barber, manicurists, physical instructor, musicians, shopkeeper, librarian, room stewards and stewardesses, waiters. Truly a variegated aggregation of men and women are required to navigate the ship and cater to the comfort and needs of the passengers on a large ocean liner.

There are twelve children under 10 years of age on board. They have an alluring nursery with mery-go-rounds, slides, sandpile, and bushels of toys.

The trained nurse in charge of the children is about 50 years old and has sailed the seas for more than twenty years. She was seasick last week. Weather too good. The steady throb of the engines finally downed her. She recovered as soon as there was a bit of a breeze.

The ship is run at a loss. It burns 1,200 to 1,500 barrels of oil a day. Cost of fuel alone for a voyage is $100,000. Contracts for carrying mail are all that make possible the operation of the line.

These Pacific liners almost overdo the matter of entertainment. There is something doing on deck all day long—deck golf, deck tennis, ping-pong, shuffleboard, and other sports—with tournaments and prizes.

When a Day Drops from the Calendar.

The outdoor swimming pool on an upper deck is a great attraction and many avail themselves of the opportunity to get a quick, deep, and thorough tan while sunning themselves alongside the pool. The gymnasium has a good assortment of athletic equipment, and the reducing apparatus is in constant use by those who fail to restrain their appetites when confronting the rich and varied menus in the dining salon. The services of the physical director grow in demand from day to day.

In the evening there are concerts, dancing, horse races (with dice), talking pictures, and card playing—poker, bridge, cribbage, any game desired. Poker is played with a modest limit and the stakes at bridge are usually a fortieth of a cent a point, with winnings at a long session seldom amounting to more than 50 cents or a dollar.

Motion pictures shown are the recent popular hits. Programs include dramas, comics, musical reviews, travelogues—something to appeal to every taste.

When the 180th meridian of longitude is crossed, westward bound, a whole day is dropped from the calendar. One goes to sleep on Monday night and wakes up Wednesday morning. That, together with the daily movement ahead of watches and clocks occasioned by traveling westward, makes the comparative computation of time and date in the occident and the orient at any hour of the day or night a problem for expert mathematicians. Most tourists just "give it up."

Four Hours for Inspection Tour.

The ship's officers are cheerfully willing to have small parties of passengers accompany them on their tours of inspection of the boat. Such a tour requires four hours' time.

The huge refrigeration plant on the President Hoover arouses wonder and elicits compliments from the women, who seem to get more thrills from viewing it and the great, powerful engines than do the men.

The three oriental races are kept separate in the steerage in different quarters. Japanese food is served the Japanese, Chinese food the Chinese, and Filipino food the Filipinos. The Japanese steerage has the high wooden bathtub of Japan, accommodating six or eight persons at one time.

In the "open" steerage 160 persons sleep in tiers of bunks in one big room, furnishing their own bedding. The doctor said there was no annoyance from vermin, as suspicious cases were fumigated and disinfected before being permitted to come on board.

A Pile of Money on the Table.

Interesting sights in the steerage are the large groups of orientals crowding around the fan tan games gambling as only the orientals gamble—shouting, gesticulating, shoving, and pushing to get their bets down, and scrambling for their gains when the winning number is discerned. At one fan tan game there was more money on the table (piles of silver and small notes) than ever went for stacks of chips in one sitting at the poker table in the first class lounge.

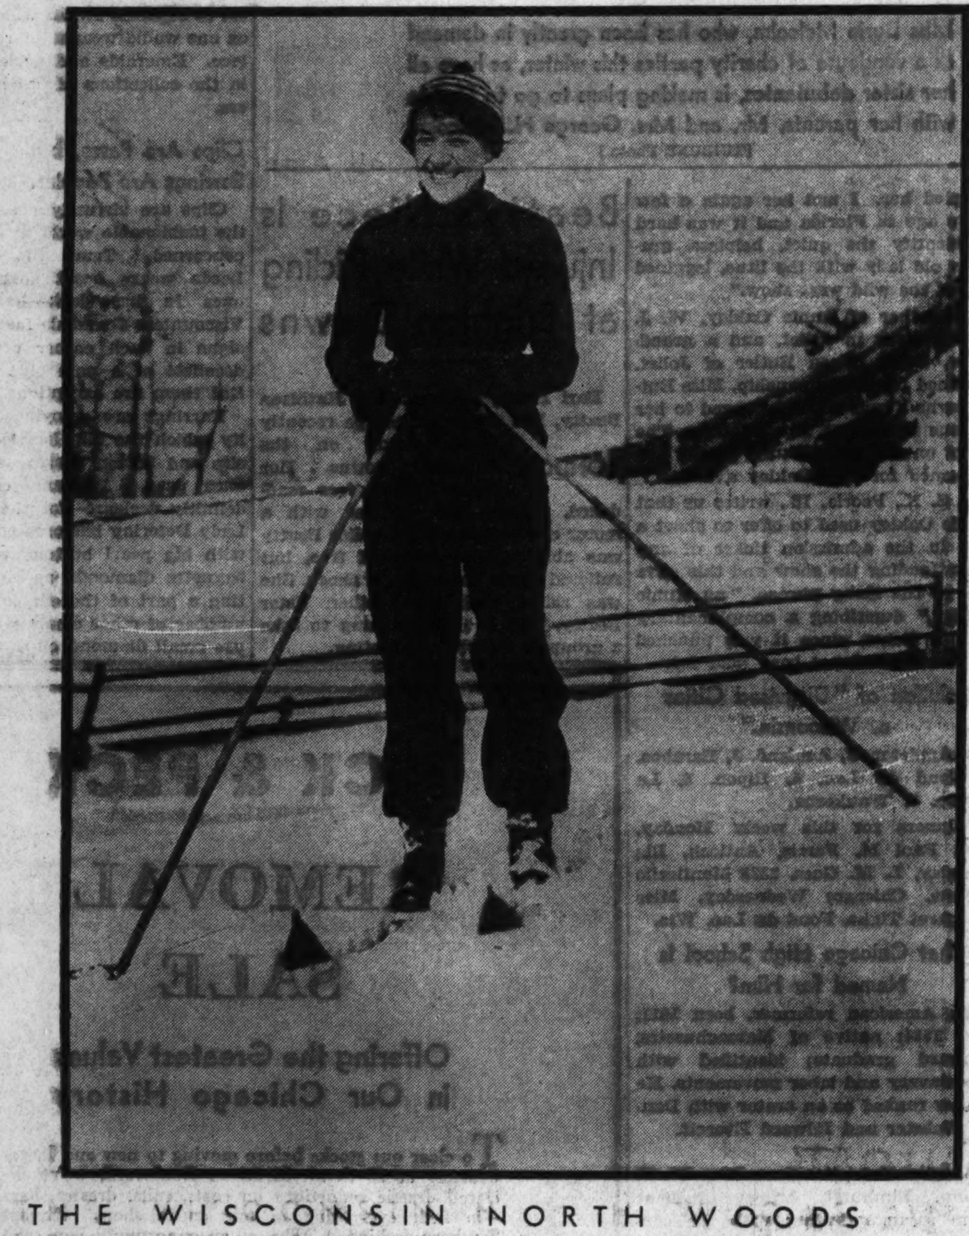
The ship's hospital has fourteen beds. Only one was occupied on this voyage, a case of beriberi. On one voyage the doctor had six cases of pneumonia and eight of influenza. He lost one patient—pneumonia complicated with brain fever.

Passengers going to India may be vaccinated by the ship's doctor as a safeguard against smallpox, in accordance with the recommendation of the British government. The ship's dispensary carries cholera, typhus, and other inoculations for all passengers who wish these precautions.

More Colorful Costumes There.

Toward the end of the voyage there is a scramble to provide costumes for the masquerade party and ship's concert, given the second night before reaching Yokohama. These are more colorful on the Pacific than on the Atlantic because there usually are a number of oriental costumes in the luggage of women returning to Japan and China.

The party was a gay success, beginning at dinner. At one of the large tables there was a little blonde from Hollywood, weight 97 pounds, very demure, with big baby blue eyes and a winsome smile. She was wearing a hula skirt and somebody picked her up and put her on the table. The orchestra played hula music and she danced the hula hula in the latest American style. It was quite thrilling and she was applauded long and loudly, but refused an encore.



IN THE WISCONSIN NORTH WOODS

Mrs. S. L. Reinhardt of Highland Park pauses for a moment after a morning on skis at Jack o' Lantern lodge near Eagle River, in the north woods of Wisconsin. She is among the many winter sports fans who have been making that district their headquarters.

Gandhi's Attire Is Adopted by Miami Beauties

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 16.—Resort fashions have joined the league of nations this season and there's an entente cordiale linking the countries of the globe.

If the smart girl appears in a Mahatma Gandhi suit during the swimming hour, she displays her complete neutrality by donning for luncheon a sports outfit with a Swiss Alpine hat, while at night she becomes a picturesque Bavarian peasant in an evening frock influenced by that country's national costume.

It's definitly a season of individuality. The colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady no longer turn themselves out keyed to a whim made popular by Hollywood's reigning queen. They follow the dictates of their own personalities.

During the swimming hour at the Roney Plaza Cabana Sun club the other morning one platinum blonde broke out in the newest of sun and sand regalia, the Mahatmi Gandhi suit. And for brevity the costume made famous by India's leader had nothing on it. A modernistic variety of fish cavorted gaily over the hand blocked cotton and there was "nothing much before and less than 'arf of that behind." The brassiere top knotted at the back and after her swim the wearer tied a scrap of a skirt around her slim waist.

The same morning Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the Olympic aquatic star, sunned herself on the sands in a white satin lastex suit, tied around the neck with a plaited cord of the material. Another successful suit was worn by the new Mrs. Stephen Ames, formerly Raquel Torres, of film fame. Hers was of lastex ochre lace.

The heretofore inevitable beach pajama is reluctantly giving place to the beach dress, smart and much more feminine.

Golfers Find New Course Each Day

A GROUP of Chicago golfers will leave a week from today over the Dixie Flyer route for the southland, where the members will play a game a day, with a new course every day.

The plan, as announced yesterday by Elmer E. Gordon, passenger trafic agent for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway, calls for stops at Atlanta, Jacksonville, Belleair, St. Petersburg, Tampa, Miami, Miami Beach, and Palm Beach. The tour will last for 14 days.

Frank Case Joins Tour Agency Here

HARVEY S. OLSON, president of Campus Tours, Inc., in the Railway Exchange building, announced last week that Frank H. Case, tour organizer and travel official, had joined the organization as sales manager. Miss Peggy Osborn of Chicago also has joined the staf, as have several others—all due to the increase in the travel business.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

IF YOU'RE going to the Mediterranean this winter or spring, you shouldn't miss Jerusalem. It will give you a thrill you can't find anywhere else on earth. There all is holy ground, once hallowed by the feet of the Savior. There will be found the reality of scenes fancied since childhood.

To the Christian, Jerusalem is tha scene of the crucifixion and the resurrection. To the Jew, it is the city of Jehovah. The Moslems associate it with the Ascent of the Prophet into heaven on his winged steed, el-Baruk. And all three hold services at the same time in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, covering the hill of Golgotha, or Calvary.

● These random notes are for the prospective traveler to the Holy Land:

The wailing wall is the only remaining fragment of the temple. The building was destroyed by Titus in 70 A. D. When the city fell before his troops not one person was left there. Later, when the Crusaders captured the city, they killed every member of the Jewish race.

The eight old olive trees in the Garden of Gethsemane are believed to have been there in the time of Christ. The rock where Peter, James, and John slept shows no alteration. It was a few yards from this stone that Judas betrayed Jesus with a kiss.

The first six stations of the cross are to be found on the Via Dolorosa.

The popular article of food is St. Peter's fish, caught in the Sea of Galilee.

There are no nationalities in Jerusalem. One is either a Jew, a Christian, or a Moslem.

Where the Temple of Solomon stood now stands a Moslem shrine.

It was through the Golden Gate, now walled up, that Jesus entered Jerusalem in triumph.

King Solomon died in the little building known as Solomon's Throne.

The tomb of Christ, inside the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, is the common property of both Latin and Greek churches.

● The cross upon which Christ was crucified was found by St. Helena in the cistern of what is now the Chapel of the Finding of the Holy Cross.

Jesus preached in a courtyard which once existed near the dome of the rock, formerly the site of Solomon's temple, burned in 586 B. C. by Nebuchadnezzar.

The old Turkish barracks cover the site of the Castle of Antonia, where Christ was tried before Pontius Pilate.

There is a monastery of Black Monks on top of St. Helena's chapel. St. Helena was the mother of Constantine.

It is believed by many archæologists that the Ark of the Covenant lies buried in the temple area. The Moslems balk all search by refusing permission to excavate.

The tomb of the Virgin Mary is easily reached via the road to Jericho, which leads to Bethany.

David's tomb and the House of Caiphas are just outside Zion gate. David's tower still forms part of the old citadel inside the Jaffa gate.

The Inn of the Good Samaritan, the scene of one of Christ's parables, still stands on the lonely road to Jericho.

And six miles away is Bethlehem.

World Travel Four Times That of 1934

NEW YORK.—The number of individuals taking trips around the world in the last several months, either on world cruise ships or by independent travel, including those across the Pacific to the far east, is approximately four times that of the previous year. This is shown by reports at the New York headquarters of Thomas Cook & Son-Wagons-Lits, Inc. The estimate is based on the bookings made at Cook's offices throughout the United States.

One of the unusual features of winter travel during the present season is the large proportion of travelers showing a preference for long voyages, around the world, to the far east, to South America, and to the Mediterranean.

Chicago Artists' Exhibit Lacks Touch of Genius

No Commanding Canvases Emerge from the 1935 Art Institute Show.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE consensus on the Chicago Artists and Vicinity show at the Art institute seems to be that while the exhibit is far better than that of last year, it is lacking in certain essentials that make a great show. There are no outstanding pictures. In fact there is not even one painting present so commanding in its technique and so impressive in its character that the rest fade to nothing beside it and you turn away satisfied that American art is vigorous and fine.

The more often you tread the floors of those galleries the keener becomes the feeling that you are in the presence of a pleasant show, animated, colorful, and youthful. Standing in one room and glancing swiftly about, you find that the walls dance with laughter, and such an impression as the bewildered and liberated Alice had when she cried: "Why, they're nothing but a pack of cards!" comes to your rescue. You see that here, too, we have to deal with cards that have been briskly sorted and flung in triumphant array upon the walls.

Almost Every Painting Hides a Touch of Humor.

The exhibition is a pleasant game. The most macabre subjects—take, for example, the blue, plucked crucifixion and the marionette ascension—are handled on a humorous rather than a reverent basis. The galleries are full of laughs and chuckles and little smiles. You know that Paul Trebilcock is not among those hung, but that his wife is. And you know that Claude Buck was rejected while two of his pupils were accepted. But after you know that, and other facts, the result remains the same. You cannot stir yourself to righteous indignation in the face of what the jury has left us. The bright, inconsequent sequence of paintings are as fascinating as the chatter of a brook. What matter a few leaves on the clear ripples of a running stream?

The Art institute has published an amusing commentary on the ages of the exhibitors. It goes to bear out in fact what had been conjecture. This is a young show. According to the institute, there are seventy-three works of art by artists whose ages are between 20 and 30; there are sixty-four by artists between 30 and 40; only fifty-two by persons between 40 and 50; a mere sixteen by artists between 50 and 60; a trifling five by artists between 60 and 70; and only one by a person over 70, and that is by Mrs. J. E. Barnes [74] who has not touched a brush in forty years and whose picture "At the End of the Trail" is a childlike bit of work, making it quite suitable for this exhibit. The figures are the institute's, the comments mine.

"South of Polk Street" Ranks Among Best Canvases.

Among the work which is well worth while one must reckon "South of Polk Street" by Marshall D. Smith, one of the best pieces of painting in the show. The clever little "Topsy" by Helen Bell is amusing. "Spring" by Karl C. Brandner is a lovely landscape. "Winter Tide" by Amanda Berglund fills one with nostalgia for suburban back yards, it is so delightfully exact. "Still Life" by Rowena Fry is a gentle and charming study of toys. The "Modern Study" by John Noel Tucker is jolly. "Midday Light" by Frank V. Dudley is a gorgeous canvas and "Public Sale" by Rudolph Ingerle is stunning. Francis Chapin is frightfully seasick in "Chicago Landscape," but, on the other hand, Arnold E. Turtle is convincingly beautiful in his Chicago portrait "Metropolis."

Holger W. Jensen offers one of the most persuasive landscapes with "Mornin' to You All," a brilliant representation of a hill farm down south. "Still Life" by Sadie H. Lowes is exquisite, and its companion "Still Life" by Leslie Binner is delightful. "Claudia in Profile" by Eugene A. Montgomery is a fascinating portrait, and the "Midnight" of Julius Moessel fills one with horrors.

In the sculpture division there are a number of interesting and beautiful pieces. The "Mother and Child" by Margaret E. Stierlin is lovely as is the "Mother and Child" by Libby Altschul. The fine "Ram" by Mary Anderson would be magnificent carved in wood. The "Polar Bear" by Elisabeth Haseltine is most alluring. The "Colt" by Oren J. Wallace is a leggy bit of mischief, well done.

Take it by and large, the Chicago exhibition is a pleasant place in which to lose an hour.

News of Interest to Lovers of Art.

An exhibition of water colors and oils by Louis Weiner is current in the Allerton gallery, 701 North Michigan avenue.

An unusual exhibit of etchings and lithographs by Childe Hassam has opened in the O'Brien galleries, 673 North Michigan avenue, to continue to Feb. 23.

"Old and Modern Water Color Drawings" is the February attraction in the Ackermann galleries, Fine Arts building.

An exhibit of sculpture and paintings by members of the Chicago Woman's club opened yesterday in their Tudor gallery, 72 East 11th street.

The paintings by Grant Wood in the Lakeside Press galleries, 350 East 22d street, are most entertaining. There is little in the exhibit that will prove new to his Chicago admirers. Most of the paintings have been seen here before, either at the former Increase Robinson gallery, or at the Chicago galleries, or at the Art institute. Still it is interesting to see his collected work, the pictures gain color and character from one another.

A little room has been hung with Mr. Wood's student work and it is encouraging to find that he walked the usual paths taken by art students. He dabbled in impressionism and romance. Gentle tones and shaded corners intrigued him. The French spoke him soft. Van Gogh, perhaps, inspired him to that brilliant and natural rendition of a pair of shoes. Then, after living up to the best traditions of the young painter, Grant Wood started out on his own. He painted portraits, exact likenesses. Then a feeling for the incongruous and a salty bit of Yankee humor took possession of his brush. We benefited to the extent of "Victorian Survival" and "Daughters of Revolution" and "American Gothic." The fascination of story-telling enchained him next. Our reward was "Midnight Ride of Paul Revere" and "Birthplace of Herbert Hoover" and a whole network of fascinating countryside deep in the charm of fairyland.

It is hard to believe, however, that Grant Wood will surpass his portrait of a child "Susan Angeline Shaffer" which is today, as when we first saw it, the most bewitching and fascinating study of a little girl that we have almost ever seen. She, with the other paintings, supply reason enough for a visit to the Lakeside Press galleries, far as they are from the loop, before the close of the exhibition, the first of April.

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, June 10, 1885.

DEAR JULIA: It is the season of commencements and the past week we have been at the Chicago Musical college's final exercises, attending this because we wanted to see our young friend, Clare Osborn, receive the Fairbank prize. Miss Osborn is a brilliant pianist and we feel she has a bright future. We are glad that our young people can get a musical education at home now instead of going east. Indeed, Chicago is becoming quite a musical center.

Miss Josephine Medill entertained last Thursday evening for Miss Blaine, daughter of James G. Blaine of Augusta, Me. She is a charming young lady, Martha says. I hear that Mrs. Blaine has felt her husband's political defeat much more than he has and that she has aged perceptibly.

What do you think of Henry Ward Beecher's sermon on evolution? It created a great stir in New York, didn't it?

And speaking of sermons, did you ever hear the story of Horace Greeley's ability to listen while apparently fast asleep? Will was speaking of it today, having seen a pillar of the First Methodist church enjoying a nap during Dr. R. M. Hatfield's really thrilling address on gambling conditions in Chicago.

Horace Greeley, accompanied by one of his assistants on the New York Tribune, attended Dr. Channing's church, of which the great editor was a prominent member. As they entered Mr. Greeley begged his companion to keep him awake, as he sometimes dozed off in church. The newspaper man tried hard to obey the injunction, digging the editorial ribs and twitching the editorial coat tails valiantly but in vain. He slumbered on to the evident embarrassment of the speaker, for Mr. Greeley was sitting well up in front. When the sermon ended they set off for the Tribune office and Mr. Greeley sat down and wrote a review of the minister's address which appeared in the paper next day. It was a remarkable abstract of Dr. Channing's sermon and the reverend gentleman could not believe that Mr. Greeley, to all intents fast asleep, could have heard so much. The newspaper man who tells the tale says: "I do not pretend to explain this strange mental feat, but I am certain that what had the appearance of sleep was in reality a condition in which the mental faculties were somehow awake and active. I saw Mr. Greeley write the story and myself read the proof, so I know that it was his own work."

We are going for a drive now, so I must close. With love,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Annie Oakley is famous in American history as markswoman with Buffalo Bill's Wild West show in the 80's and 90's.

FOOTNOTES.

Clare Osborn Reed (Mrs. Charles B. Reed) is still an important figure in Chicago's musical circles.

When we mentioned Annie Oakley . . . recently we did not realize how many readers would be interested. We should like to print all the letters that have been received, but can refer to only a few for lack of space. H. W. Getz, Moline, Ill., says: "Police Inspector Shippy used to slide me in under the turnstile when I was 10 or 11 years old, and I can still see them. . . . Buffalo Bill, on galloping pony, tossing glass balls in the air from a bag in front of him; Annie Oakley following and shooting them to bits with shot cartridge." E. R. Shnable, Wilmette, as a young apprentice in an engraving shop, helped in making a woodcut from a photograph of Buffalo Bill, Annie Oakley, Texas Jack, and others, and got a "pass to the show," to his great delight. The show that year was given in the old Desplaines Street Opera house near Washington street.

Matson B. Hill, Chicago, writes: "An old gentleman named Clason, who will be gratefully remembered by many who were boys and girls in the early '90s, used to take crowds of us each year to see Annie Oakley and Buffalo Bill shoot (near the site of the old World's Fair). Mr. Clason, who was a retired Pullman conductor, knew all the famous characters of the old west. The more fortunate of us, including myself, were invited to Mr. Clason's home on Groveland avenue from time to time to have dinner with Annie Oakley or Capt. Jack Crawford, or some one equally our idol. A few years later Mr. Clason lived on Aldine square and trained, owned, and exhibited (for charity only) the famous mind reading collie dog, Bozzie. About 1903 Bozzie and the Clasons were house guests of Theodore Roosevelt in the White House, to the great delight of the Roosevelt children. Annie Oakley about ten years ago suffered an automobile accident which partially crippled her. I met her again a few years ago in Florida and it was hard to identify the quiet, helpless, gracious old lady with the lithe, leggined girl of the wild west show."

A brother of Annie Oakley, W. J. Butler, lives in Joliet, and a grandniece, Billie Eileen Butler of Joliet, is famed for marksmanship. Miss Butler owns a gun which belonged to her famous grandaunt, Annie Oakley. The street on which the Butler family live is named for her, Oakley avenue.

L. S. K., Peoria, Ill., writes us that Annie Oakley used to offer to shoot a hole in the admission ticket of any one attending the show and this gave rise to the slang phrase, "an Annie Oakley," describing a complimentary theater ticket, since it was punched to show it had not been paid for.

What Chicago High School Is Named for Him?

An American reformer, born 1811; died 1884; native of Massachusetts; Harvard graduate; identified with anti-slavery and labor movements. He is now ranked as an orator with Daniel Webster and Edward Everett.

A delightful letter from Mrs. W. T. Daum, Elmhurst, brings excellent farm sayings dealing with the contriving of the pioneer woman. This is new to us: "It's a poor leg that can't shape a stocking." As a bit of sarcasm this is scathing: "Yes, she was great, to cut and contrive. Out of a sheet she made a nightcap, strings and all."

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Remedy at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, used for generations for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Elegance Again Marks Society's Formal Parties

Smart Women at St. Moritz Start Vogue for Rich Fabrics and Jewels.

IN bold defiance of the economic slump—or perhaps as a signal that we have now reached the bottom of it—social leaders at St. Moritz, Switzerland, are setting new standards of brilliance in evening toilettes. Lames, pastel crêpes, heavy moires shot with gold and sequins, satins and brocaded fabrics fashions the elaborate gowns that women wear to fashionable social affairs. Emerald green, white, turquoise, deep purple, pale pink, and pale blue are favorite colors.

Every smart woman wears a dazzling array of jewels. Intricate monograms and ornaments adorn the vanity cases which some women carry in lieu of evening bags.

Princess Aspasia Leads Enthusiasts for Purple.

Princess Aspasia of Greece is leading the group which is bringing back the vogue for purple. Lanvin made her gown and wrap of royal purple ribbed satin. Mrs. Elizabeth Wrenn du Pont frequently appears in a purple taffeta gown cut with a square décolleté. Fanny Ward's daughter, Lady Plunkett, has a net gown splashed with gold sequins. A full skirted white taffeta frock with bodice embroidered in silver is a favorite of Mrs. Ivan Maquinay, the Belgian ambassador's wife.

The slender, trained silhouette is most popular. Gowns are usually high in front and low in back, although there are a number of full skirted robes de style.

The turquoise rates as one of the most popular jewels this season. Mme. Albert Gautrat, wife of a famous Paris lawyer, wears this brilliant blue stone in rings, bracelets, and large oval buckles against the background of a pale pink crêpe frock.

Pearls are the choice of Mme. Maquineay. She wears ropes of them ending in pear shaped pearl pendants. The duchess of Leeds sticks to the ever popular diamonds. She has hers set in separate stones which she wears as one would wear a short pearl necklace. Emeralds and rubies find favor in the collections of other social leaders.

Clips Are Passe, but Earrings Are Popular.

Clips are virtually passé, so far as the fashionable world at St. Moritz is concerned. True, the duchess of Leeds wears heart shaped diamond ones in her dark hair and the Viscountess Scarsdale fastens ruby designs in each corner of the square décolleté of a pale blue satin gown. But these are exceptions.

Earrings are enjoying the popularity which the clip has lost. But the clip and button designs are the only ones used. Pendant earrings are definitly declassé—for the time being. Lady Detering has created a sensation with big pearl buttons with rows of baguette diamonds on each side, letting a part of the ear lobe show. A number of other smart women simply use small diamond clips.

Beatty's Niece Is Injured While Riding at Brighton Downs

LONDON

Earl Beatty's niece, Miss Kathleen Beatty, had a narrow escape recently when riding on the Brighton Downs. Her horse became fear maddened, bolted, then collided with a motor car and was killed. Miss Beatty was able to throw herself free, but suffered minor injuries and shock. She was riding with her brother, Peter Beatty, who is now planning to take a group to Kenya for shooting.

"Your New Powder with the Magic Color Principle matches my skin exactly"

SAYS THIS ATTRACTIVE YOUNG NEW YORK SOCIETY MEMBER

● The new Tangee powder matches any skin! For now it contains the same magic color principle as the famous Tangee Lipstick.

Your skin will look younger, fresher, more natural than ever before, and you'll never run the risk of that unpleasant powdery appearance or that coated, mask-like effect. It's pleasant, too, to think that Tangee costs but 55 cents and $1.10 at all good shops.

Mrs. Suydam Roelker, the former Katrinka Van Cortland Suydam. Educated at the Fermata School and in Paris, she is very popular among New York's smart young social set.

"I'll never go back to sticky, ordinary Hand Lotions again!"

New lotion (VELURE) goes right into the skin and does its softening work from the inside—in Nature's own way . . Stimulates flow of natural softening oil.

"Most of the girls in our club were talking about Velure, the new hand lotion. They were so enthusiastic I bought some—and believe me, I'll never go back to ordinary sticky hand lotions again!"

This statement is typical of many that have been made voluntarily by new Velure users. This new hand lotion has met with instant and complete satisfaction.

Velure is the truly modern hand lotion. It is not at all like the ordinary, sticky lotion—that gives the skin an "artificial coating". Velure does its softening work on the inside—in Nature's own way. It goes quickly into the skin—stimulates the oil cells to supply more of their precious softening oil to keep the outer skin soft with a natural, refreshing softness.

Try Velure and see for yourself what the "new Velure softness" is—how supple and flexible your skin feels after using it (without any of that "tight" feeling you may have experienced after using the ordinary kind of lotion).

Velure is convenient to use and economical. Two drops on the back of each hand is all you need. Use Velure regularly—after exposure to weather, water and housework or office work. Note how roughness and chapping disappear—and notice especially that Velure softness is longer lasting—because it is produced from the inside—in Nature's own way.

Buy Velure from your drug or department store—or send coupon for purse-size bottle containing 6-day supply.

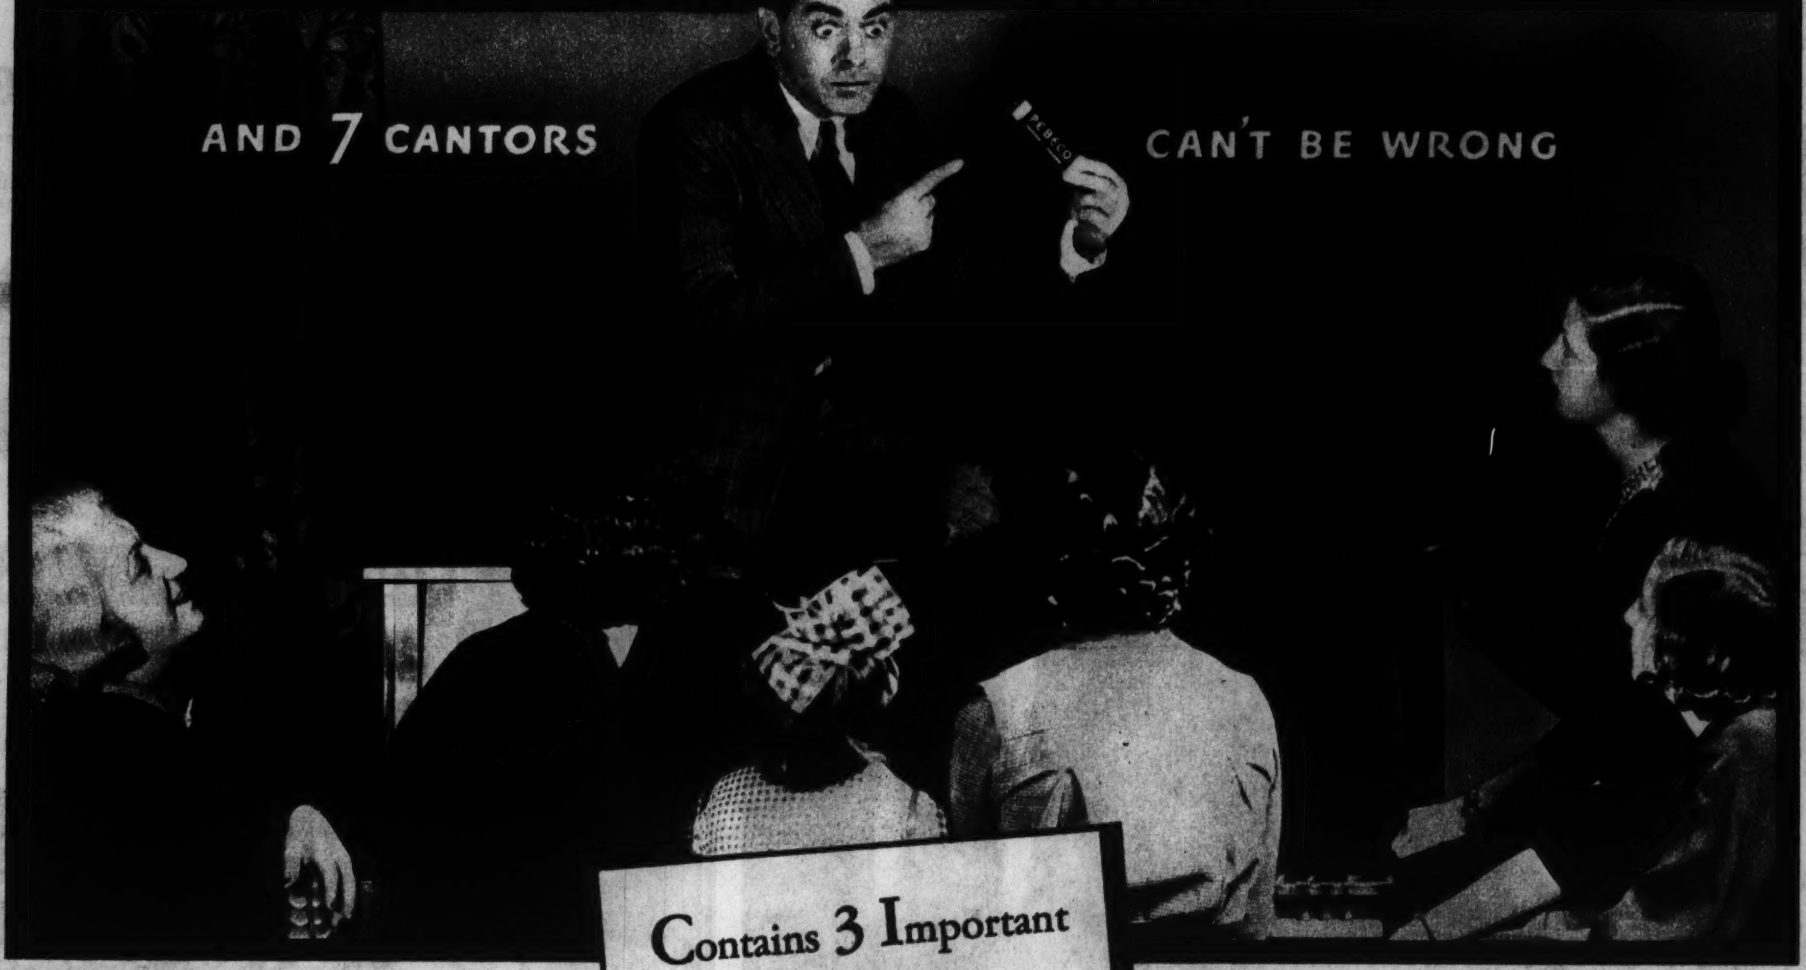
7 Reasons why I like the

NEW PEBECO



"AS A GOOD FAMILY MAN, I still bear scars from the 'Battle of the Tooth Pastes'... You know how it goes...Marjorie had to have one kind...Natalie and Edna another ...Marilyn and Janet still others...Ida, too, had her favorite...and, of course, I had to have my own...There were so many tubes lying around the house there was hardly room for my old joke books.

"But the fighting is over in the Cantor family ...All seven of us have surrendered to one and the same tooth paste...the NEW Pebeco.

"I'm not saying that the NEW Pebeco is good for shampooing...or as a salad dressing... or for cleaning hats...But, if you want your teeth to be clean—to look brighter...to have a nice fresh taste in your mouth...then use the NEW Pebeco... You'll like it, I promise.

"My five girls tell me they like it because it tastes so good...and Ida and I use it because it is so good."

(Signed) Eddie Cantor

"P.S. Will you be listening in tonight?"

●

...to purify and deodorize the breath.
3. MILK OF MAGNESIA
...to increase Pebeco's famous action in counteracting "Acid Mouth."

●
